French Check Nazis, Put Paris Under Army; Germans Mass for Drive to Channel Ports; Congress to Pass Roosevelt's Defense Plan

President's $1,182,000,000 Arms Fund Is Speeded

50,000 Planes Sought to Meet 'Any Challenge Future May Hold'

'A Simple Matter'

THE AIRPLANE INDUSTRY said meeting the call for annual production of 50,000 planes would be "relatively a simple matter" involving a three-fold increase in personnel and expanded plant space. Page 4.

FINANCING the new defense program remained a problem, but the Capitol Hill consensus was that the question of voting new taxes or raising the debt limit would go over for this session. Page 5.

Sword Is Sharpened

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

Solemnly warned by President Roosevelt that America's defenses must be made invulnerable in these "ominous days," Congress yesterday hastened to provide an additional $1,182,000,000 for preparedness.

Assembled in joint session to hear the President's emergency arms message, the Senate and House thunderously applauded his plea the Nation be made ready for "whatever challenge the future may hold" and immediately planned legislative short-cuts to vote the funds proposed.

Overwhelming Support

There was overwhelming support for the program and universal acknowledgment it would be quickly passed.

"Surely," the President told a hushed, tense audience, "the developments of the past few weeks have made it clear to all of our citizens that the possibility of attack on vital American zones ought to make it essential that we have the physical, the ready ability to meet those attacks and to prevent them from reaching their objectives.

"This means military implements—not on paper—which are ready and available to meet any lightning offensive against our American interest. It means also that facilities for production must be ready to turn out munitions and equipment at top speed.

"We have had the lesson before us over and over again—nations that were not ready and were unable to get ready found themselves overrun by the enemy."

Wants 50,000 Planes

As an ultimate objective, the Chief Executive proposed an air force for the United States never before approached by any nation—a total of 50,000 Army and Navy planes and an industry capable of turning out a like number annually.

The funds requested, however—$896,000,000 in cash and $286,000,000 in contractual authority—will buy only 200 four-engined bombers for the Army and 115 planes for the

U. S. Disturbed As Nationals Stay in Europe

Americans in Britain Warned to Seek Refuge in Ireland

By William V. Nessly

Facing a new "emergency" and plainly irked by continued failure of Americans to leave European war areas, the State Department yesterday took new steps to get them home.

Recognizing new difficulties for travel between England and France, especially with regard to German bombings of shipping from new bases in the Netherlands, the State Department called on an estimated 3,500 Americans still in England to take refuge in neutral Ireland. The department said it then will consider the possibility of sending a vessel to the west coast of Ireland to bring home those nationals willing to return.

"The department has repeatedly, and during many months," said an official statement yesterday, "advised Americans in belligerent areas to return to the United States. Every facility has been afforded them to do so.

"Ships were sent to Europe to be available for their repatriation, and funds were loaned to those who were destitute or financially embarrassed.

"In spite of these warnings many Americans chose to stay and the department is today faced with another emergency in helping them return to the United States."

The statement added that, though Americans in Europe generally had been urged on Thursday to congregate in the Bordeaux, France, area, or in Spain or Portugal, those in England are advised, on recommendation of Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy, to proceed to Ireland.

In Italy, meanwhile, United States consuls were spreading the word for Americans to leave "at the earliest possible moment." Dispatches from Paris said many Americans left the French capital yesterday by auto and train for the Bordeaux region.

From Belgrade, Jugoslavia, the New York Times reported that last night's Simplon Express bore dozens of refugees including nine Americans who are members of families attached to the United States Legation here and who sail from Genoa tomorrow.

They are Mrs. Homer M. Byington, jr., and Homer Byington 3d, of Washington, D. C.; Mrs. Robert B. MacAtee, Mary Lee MacAtee and James MacAtee, of Front Royal, Va.; Ren Fortier and Margot Fortier, of New Orleans, La.; Mrs. Robert B. Memminger, of Charleston, S. C., and Harold Beyerly, jr., of Chillicothe, Ohio.

Army Plans Drive to Enlist 50,000 More

15,000 Will Be Added Within Few Weeks, Authorities Indicate

By the Associated Press

Anticipating that Congress will quickly authorize increases in the strength of the Regular Army, the War Department has directed several hundred recruiting officers to prepare for a renewed drive for enlistments.

Official plans contemplate enrollment of 50,000 men in the next few months, it was reported authoritatively. Fifteen thousand will be added within the next few weeks.

Officials said the advice to recruiting officers was of the general nature, and that new quotas had not been assigned.

The Army wound up the most intensive recruiting campaign in its peacetime history in February, when a quota of 227,000 men was exceeded.

Present strength is approximately 230,000, compared with 180,000 last July 1, when the campaign was launched.

Legislation designed to speed up the Army's promotion system and provide younger officers in higher grades was approved by the Senate yesterday and sent back to the House for concurrence in amendments.

Roosevelt's Talk Sends Aircraft, Steel Shares Up

(Market Details, Pages 27, 28.)

New York, May 16 (AP).—A buying scramble in steel, aviation and other "war" shares developed in the Stock Exchange this afternoon while President Roosevelt was reading his armament message to Congress.

Leading shares surged up $1 to more than $6. Giving the market its first broad recovery since the German thrust at the Lowlands sent prices into the worst tailspin in 2½ years earlier in the week.

Improvement in the Chicago grain markets also bolstered Wall Street sentiment. Wheat, which had dropped 20 cents a bushel in the two previous days, recovered 2 to 4½ cents, and corn pushed up about 4 cents. Cotton moved uncertainly, closing a trifle higher.

The stock market was hesitant and uneasy in advance of the President's message. Brokers' board rooms were crowded with clients listening to his remarks over loudspeakers. He was far into his address before prices began to balloon.

Swiss Flier Shoots Down Reich Plane

Border Is Closed Even to Freight; Berlin Has Men, Guns on Frontier

By the Associated Press

Zurich, Switzerland, May 16. Emphasizing with machine-gun fire the Swiss determination to keep their territory inviolate, a Swiss fighting plane this afternoon shot down a German bomber which strayed across the line. One member of the German crew was wounded.

The incident highlighted steadily growing tension which today caused Swiss and Germans to close their frontier along the Rhine.

The Swiss plane machine gunned the bomber and forced it to land in a field northeast of Zurich. The two uninjured members of the crew burned their plane and surrendered.

The Rome-Berlin express was rerouted through the old Austrian frontier at St. Margrethen.

In recent days German divisions concentrated south of the frontier have increased. Heavy artillery has rolled up behind them, and German engineers have been practicing throwing pontoon bridges across a part of the Rhine where they control both sides.

Government Urges Calm

Bern, Switzerland, May 16 (AP).—The Swiss government in a communique today called the nation's attention to articles in the Italian press which expressed "friendship and understanding" for Switzerland.

It also urged the Swiss to keep the calm of "strict discipline" as their national duty.

"Protectorate" Move

London, May 16 (U.P.).—Unconfirmed rumors circulated tonight that Germany was putting pressure on Switzerland to accept an Italian protectorate.

Switzerland's 600,000 armed soldiers stood ready for any eventuality, coincident with assertions that Germany had between 225,000 and 375,000 men in the Black Forest in Baden within striking distance of the Swiss-Rhine frontier.

United Press staff correspondents tonight reported these developments:

League Prepares to Move

The League of Nations, after a belated protest of the German invasion of the Low Countries, prepared to move from Geneva to Vichy, France, reliable reports stated.

There were conflicting reports that a considerable number of German troops had been withdrawn from the frontier area opposite Basel, Switzerland.

Air-raid alarms sounded at noon in French villages surrounding Lake Geneva on the Swiss border.

British, French and German legations at Bern, Switzerland, were reported burning their official papers and civilians were said to be evacuating Bern, Basel and Zurich.

British Hurl Foes Out Of Louvain

Tommies Clear City, Blast Approaches; Historic Library, City Hall Intact

With the British Army in Belgium, May 16.—The Germans directed terrific attacks against the whole British front today and last night. In some places they penetrated the British lines and in some instances are known to have been expelled by determined British counter-attacks.

Louvain was again the center of heavy assaults, the Germans attacking with waves of tanks supported from the air by bombers which dived down on the British positions, loosing their bombs as they came and machine-gunning the troops.

[A London war office communique said the German attacks in Louvain had definitely been repulsed by British forces.]

The Germans drove into the city during the night with the aid of tanks, but suffered heavy casualties. Mines exploded under them on the roads approaching the city, and as the first wave tried to force its way through under a viaduct, the British blew it up. A German tank was crushed under a mass of masonry.

Driven Out Again

This viaduct carried railway tracks and only a few yards from the main railway station the Germans succeeded finally in forcing their way into the eastern part of the city, capturing the railway station. They infiltrated through the city for several hours in brisk street fighting, with British snipers picking off the Germans when they could.

The British launched three counter-attacks in the morning and at length drove out the Germans.

British antitank guns set up at strategic points took some toll of German tanks.

German bombs did considerable damage to buildings but this afternoon when we watched later phases of the day's battle from a ridge overlooking the town, the American-built Louvain library was intact and soldiers said it had not yet been touched. Other fine buildings, such as the city hall, also have thus far escaped.

As we watched, British guns were firing over the town into the German rear and smoke rose from various points in the town where German bombs had hit.

Last Residents Flee

It seems a few residents of Louvain had, after all, ignored orders to evacuate, and today they were hurrying out. Many, terrorized by the night's fighting around them looked up apprehensively to the sky and sometimes took cover in ditches when the German planes approached. As far as we knew, none was molested on the road.

Allies Fleeing Hungary

Budapest, May 16 (U.P.).—British and French Legations advised Allied citizens tonight to leave Hungary immediately.

German officers quartered at Vienna hotels were reported here to have told foreigners that they had received orders to pass through Hungary, but that they had no idea when they would start.

Switzerland as 'Hospital'

Rome, May 16.—It was understood from a reliable source that negotiations are being undertaken by the International Red Cross to safeguard Switzerland's neutrality, and convert the country into a hospital for the wounded soldiers of the belligerent armies.

Nazis Mass Near Hungary

Budapest, May 17 (Friday) (AP).—German motorized and mechanized "blitz" troops were reported, from Bratislava early today to be concentrated heavily near the Slovak-Hungarian frontier.

Many thousands were massed in the Zistersdorf region along the frontier, where military observers connected the movement with the German armies' pressing need for greater quantities of Rumanian oil.

Bernhard Rejoins Dutch

London, May 16 (AP).—The Netherlands Legation announced tonight that German-born Prince Bernard, consort of Crown Princess Juliana, had rejoined Dutch troops fighting in Zeeland Province.

Paris Under Army; 'War Comes Closer'

Martial Law Decreed; Aliens Rounded Up To Halt 5th Column

(Reynaud Text, Page 6.)

By Henry C. Cassidy
Associated Press Staff Writer

Paris, (Friday) May 17.—A government decree placed Paris in the army zone last night and transferred control of the capital from civil to military authorities.

There was no official explanation of the sudden decree extending the army zone to Paris. (The censor deleted 25 words in the dispatch at this point.)

Paris' antiaircraft guns were firing last night, but no air raid alarm had been sounded up to past midnight.

The war was brought closer to Paris also. (Here 22 words were censored).

A close guard was posted over the city's gates in a roundup of foreigners and the internment of those of German origin as authorities guarded against any "fifth column" uprising.

The army zone decree was proclaimed just after Premier Reynaud had warned of the "peril" of the Nazi invasion.

Former U. S. Liner President Harding Sunk by Bombs

London, May 16 (U.P.).—The 13,869-ton former United States Lines transatlantic liner President Harding, renamed the Ville de Bruges, was bombed and sunk off the Belgian coast on May 10, it was revealed tonight by the landing at a British east coast port of her British captain and other refugees from Belgium.

The German bomber which sank the 19-year-old ship provided the United States Lines with funds for new tonnage, S. D. Schell, Maritime Commission executive director, said in Washington last night.

When the vessel was sold to a Belgian corporation early this year, the United States Lines accepted a mortgage for an unpaid balance. This mortgage, in turn, was protected by insurance for "a very substantial sum," payable to the United State Lines.

Insurance on the vessel, Schell said, will be placed in the fund for construction of new ships.

Hitler's Legions From Holland Enter Line for Antwerp Push; Allied Planes Battle Advance Of Tanks From Sedan Front

ITS INTENSITY APPARENTLY INCREASING, the great battle of the Meuse and Dyle River valleys continued to rage. The Allies admit German columns have thrust into French territory in several places, but claim to be "master of the situation." All capitals were secretive about the specific areas of major operations. Berlin admitted, however, a slowing of operations to make replacements for killed, wounded and tired troops after seven days of terrific fighting. It seemed certain, also, that the Allies have greater numbers of planes and tanks to attack the fresh onslaughts of the German motorized divisions.

DUTCH TROOPS IN ZEELAND continued their resistance and fighting there was heavy, London reports.

BRITAIN CLAIMS TO HAVE DRIVEN the Germans from Louvain in fierce, hand-to-hand street fighting, slowing the German drive along the Antwerp, Louvain, Namur line, which has as its goal the channel ports.

PARIS WAS TURNED OVER to the rule of military authorities, as Premier Reynaud warned his nation of the "peril" of the Nazi thrust, said that "lives must count for nothing" in the fight against the Germans and predicted victory for the French cause.

THE SWISS-GERMAN FRONTIER was closed, with the reported massing of German troops on the Nazi side of the line. Toward the southeast, Allied nationals were told to leave Hungary immediately. Rome was silent, but Yugoslavia was nervous and surveyed mobilization of its troops.

Toward Britain's Door

By Russell Hill

Berlin, May 16.—The first great battle of the war approached a more intensive phase today as millions of men faced each other on a wide front extending from near Antwerp across central Belgium south to Sedan, German military circles revealed.

German planes and mobile mechanized units clashed with the advance forces of the main Allied armies in Belgium, while replacements and reinforcements were being rushed forward, evidently with the object of giving new impetus to the German drive, now that it has been met by the strongest Allied resistance yet encountered.

The military authorities have announced only slight gains during the last 48 hours. This may be explained in part by the fact that, in seven days of fighting, the German army has advanced on the average of about 60 miles from its starting point, on a front of 175 miles—from The Hague to Sedan.

Replacements Needed

Casualties must now be replaced, tired troops relieved and the forces redisposed before it is possible to strike a new blow with the power that was achieved in the initial drive across the low countries.

In view of these factors, many observers are inclined to regard the battle as still in the "development stage."

The significance which is attached here to the battle on Flanders fields may be seen from an official military commentary released today, which said:

"Within the next few days more German troops will be taken out of Holland and will be freed for the big battle which has already begun for the Dyle position in the Namur-Antwerp sector, and which will presumably reach its culminating point in the next few days.

"On this line, strong forces of Belgian, French and English troops have accepted battle. Here, several millions of the most modernly equipped soldiers will clash. Belgium's fate depends upon the decision in this colossal battle. The French and English, especially the latter, persuaded the retiring Belgians to hold the Dyle position, as they wanted to prevent an improvement of the condition for a direct struggle with England, which would be created by a quick push to the Belgian coast.

Pressure on Right Eased

"The advance of the German troops has developed according to plan. Now that the five-day campaign against Holland is over, it may even be said that the pressure on our right flank was not expected to be relieved as rapidly as was

War of Movement

Paris, May 16.—It was principally an aerial battle today on the Belgian plain and on the French border.

Large air forces were engaged on both sides with the Allies concentrating on arresting the progress of armored units which, in the words of an authorized army spokesman, had "penetrated deeply to the rear of our positions."

Far into the night the Nazi divisions were bombed again and again both by the Royal Air Force and French planes, and it is reliably reported that their intervention was to good effect.

On land the general battle took a new aspect. After the mad melee produced by the German mass attack on a 60-mile front along the Meuse, both armies were dislocated. The Allies and the enemy spent the day regrouping formations, consolidating positions and bringing up reinforcements. It could not be called a lull by any means since fighting continued on all sides, but there were no large-scale attacks by ground troops.

Nazis Make Little Progress

Aloft, however, activity was intense. All over the battlefield bombers and fighters did their work, the former harassing infantry and the latter seeking to prevent them. When night fell the general situation had not varied much compared with the previous night, and the German main bodies "made no progress worthy of the name" at the points where they had broken the Allied lines the day before.

This indication, however, obviously does not apply to a certain number of German armored units. The French communique this morning announced that "the battle has assumed the character of a war of movement with the participation on both sides of motorized elements

NO RULING FAMILIES YET

(A glance at the Cabinet and the Court.)

Those timid Americans who fear that our country has grown old and is on the verge of decay, like the Roman Empire after its first 500 years, may find some slight hope and solace in the fact that so far this Republic has not even created for itself a ruling class or caste, with certain families always in the high places.

Harlan Miller

At least, none is visible to the naked eye. The Adams family started like a house afire, with two Presidents out of our first six. It continued for another century to send its sons high in the Government, but has momentarily petered out with a Secretary of the Navy.

* * * *

The Harrison family contributed a signer of the Declaration, his son who was the ninth President, and his great-grandson, the twenty-third President. Now there is one Harrison in Congress, Senator Pat of Mississippi, but he isn't certain that he's related.

* * * *

Nearest to a dynasty, as of today, seems the Roosevelt family, with two Presidents in the first 40 years of the twentieth century. But this is based on an illusion of consanguinity. Theodore and Franklin, though both Roosevelts, aren't very closely related.

"——the statues among strangers"

They say that Franklin Roosevelt is related to 11 American Presidents, but that's one of those far-fetched genealogical transparencies. And the odds are something like 1,000 to 1 that none of FDR's four sons will ever become President.

* * * *

It is a striking fact that not one member of the present Supreme Court has a direct ancestor who was President, a member of any Cabinet, or a member of the highest court.

Only one traces his descent from any high official of the Government, including members of Congress.

The maternal grandfather of Justice Frankfurter's wife was a first cousin of Gen. Grant.

And Justice Black's wife had a grandfather who was a member of Congress from Tennessee and an uncle who was Governor of that State.

* * * *

Only two Cabinet members are descended from high officials.

Secretary Wallace's father was also Secretary of Agriculture—1920 to 1924.

Secretary Morgenthau's father was Ambassador to Turkey under Wilson.

In addition, Secretary Ickes' wife has an uncle, John Cudahy, who is Ambassador to Belgium.

Secretary Woodring's wife's father was Senator from Massachusetts; her grandfather was a member of Congress; and her branch of the Coolidge family is distantly related to the Calvin Coolidge clan.

"——one can point to a painting"

That adds up to just one Justice or Cabinet official who had an ancestor of equal eminence in the Government . . . Of course, there is a possibility that the next President may be the son of a President, a Secretary of War and a Chief Justice; that would be Robert Taft.

* * * *

A more diligent search of genealogical tables than most Americans are prone to make might reveal some ancestors who have been slighted by their distinguished descendents.

But as things stand, the statues of the great around Washington look down on comparative strangers, and only Mr. Wallace can point to an oil painting of a direct ancestor of Supreme Court, Cabinet or Presidential rank.

* * * *

Of course, with the exception of FDR himself, this is a comparatively proletarian Administration.

An aristocrat himself, he has made most of his appointments (except those in his own family) from the common people, though he has a Philadelphia Biddle now as Solicitor General.

Nonpartisan Front Forms On U.S. Defense

Knox Visits President; Said to Have Given Pledge of Unity

By Robert C. Albright

Adjournment of politics on the national defense issue, with Republicans, as well as Democrats supporting generally the broad outlines of the President's preparedness program, was indicated yesterday by G. O. P. leaders in Congress and out.

Views of Republicans favoring a "united defense front" were carried to the White House yesterday by Col. Frank Knox, 1936 Republican vice presidential nominee, who lunched with the President following his national defense program.

Senate Minority Leader McNary and House Minority Leader Martin, who conferred with Knox Wednesday, indorsed general provisions of the President's defense program. But they urged careful study of means of paying for it, and questioned "blank check" items.

A report that Knox had again been offered the post of Secretary of the Navy followed his White House call, but could not be confirmed. Knox was offered the naval portfolio last December, but declined, friends said.

Landon for Unity

Former Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas, last Republican Presidential standard bearer, was known to share the Knox desire for Republican cooperation on defense and foreign policy where the Administration makes this possible.

With surprising unanimity, Republicans and most Democrats declared the President's personal delivery of his defense message gave at long last his answer to the question, "Will he run?"

It struck as well at Republican campaign hopes, by rendering Mr. Roosevelt almost immune to attack on his past defense program and diverting attention from domestic issues on which Republicans hold he is vulnerable.

Congressional Democrats said it meant the President's nomination and election. Congressional Republicans said it meant his nomination, and publicly reserved judgment on the election. But in a Philadelphia interview, Republican National Committee Chairman John D. M. Hamilton declared "the war situation can't react against the Republican Party."

Hamilton insisted events abroad have not increased the President's reelection chances if he is the nominee. He declared "the country will have to keep its eyes focused even more on internal affairs."

Gratified by the lack of partisan opposition to the program as a whole, Speaker Bankhead predicted that "both parties" in the House and the country as a whole will support the program in substance, and Senate Majority Leader Barkley said he knew no reason why it should delay adjournment more than a week.

Vandenberg Urges Check

In Grand Rapids, meanwhile, Senator Vandenberg told the Michigan Republican State convention that appropriations must be made for a national defense "as impregnable as possible," but urged a continuous special joint Congressional committee to hold the War and Navy Departments to strict accountability "for the required results."

Other political developments:

Chairman Hamilton, of the Republican National Committee, denied "any consideration is being given to a proposal to postpone the Republican National Convention," adding: "We will meet in Philadelphia on June 24 as we have planned."

W. David Tilghman, jr., chairman of the Maryland Republican State Central Committee, invited New York District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey to come to Maryland tomorrow to hear the State convention select 16 delegates to vote for his nomination.

Oregon prepared to vote on the third term today in the first primary test of the issue since the Nazi invasion. President Roosevelt, who snowed under Vice President Garner in three State primaries, will again face the Texan.

Washington headquarters of Senator Taft (Republican), of Ohio, in a statement claimed Tuesday's primary vote in West Virginia "showed a heavy preference for delegates favorable to Senator Taft."

Princeton, N. J., May 16.—Wendell Willkie's popularity among Republican voters takes another jump upward this week in a new Institute survey on G. O. P. Presidential candidates. The 48-year-old head of Commonwealth & Southern Corporation has, in the short space of two months, not only jumped from nowhere to fourth place in the list of candidates favored by the Republican rank and file, but has become the leading "dark horse" in popularity, ranking ahead of many of the party's outstanding men.

GALLUP

The Willkie forces still have a long way to go, however, to catch up with Thomas E. Dewey, the leading candidate in popularity. Willkie also runs behind Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg and Senator Robert A. Taft who, with Dewey, have been the leading popular choices of the G. O. P. in surveys since as far back as November, 1938.

Dewey Popularity Dips

In the last fortnight, the poll shows, Dewey's popularity has fallen somewhat, while Taft has gained slightly. Herbert Hoover, Frank E. Gannett and Senator H. Styles Bridges all receive prominent mention.

In measuring candidate strength, the Institute polled a Nation-wide sample of Republican voters selected in such a way as to represent all the voting elements within the party. They were asked the question:

Whom would you like to see elected President this year?"

The choices were entirely spontaneous, no list of names being presented.

TODAY

Dewey	62%
Taft	14
Vandenberg	13
Willkie	5
Hoover	2
Gannett	1
Bridges	1
Others	2

FORTNIGHT AGO

Dewey	67%
Vandenberg	14
Taft	12
Willkie	3
Hoover	2
Others	2

Approximately one-fourth of the voters (26 per cent) were undecided about their choice of candidate—an indication that sentiment is still far from crystallized.

Willkie's Rise Sudden

Wendell Willkie's rise is an interesting case-study in Presidential booms. For seven or eight years Willkie has been writing articles and making speeches criticizing parts of the New Deal and setting forth his point of view on business and social problems. But no popular Willkie-for-President movement started. Even as recently as March an Institute survey found Willkie named by only a few Republican voters as their choice for the White House.

Then, with no effort on Willkie's part, a boom started almost overnight. Many observers believe that an important factor was his star performance on a popular radio quiz program early in April. Within a few weeks the Institute's surveys—a sensitive barometer of opinion shifts—found him polling 3 per cent, and today the figure has risen to 5 per cent. The future course of the Willkie boom will be charted at regular intervals by the Institute.

Other prominent Republicans who received mention in today's surveys are Publisher Frank Knox of Vhicago, former Gov. Alfred Landon, Representative Joseph Martin of Massachusetts, Gov. Arthur James of Pennsylvania, Gov. John Bricker of Ohio, Supreme Court Justice Owen Roberts, Senator Charles McNary of Oregon, Senator Gerald P. Nye of North Dakota, Congressman Bruce Barton, and Gov. William Vanderbilt of Rhode Island.

Zoning Board Approves 12 Applications

Three Are Denied; Four Gasoline Stations to Be Built

The Board of Zoning Adjustment yesterday approved 12 applications for zoning variances, took no action in three cases and denied three.

Applications to establish four gasoline stations, including one for the new Lafayette Building, Vermont avenue and I street northwest, were approved by the board. The other stations, requested by the Himmelfarb Properties, Inc., will be located at 814 Bladensburg road northeast; 500 C street northeast and 4900 Wisconsin avenue northwest.

Petitions turned down included an appeal by the Brentwood Village Stores Corporation to establish a gasoline station at the southwest corner of Rhode Island and Montana avenues northeast; one by Anna Rubin to establish a parking lot at the northwest corner of Connecticut and Nebraska avenues northwest, and an appeal by Louis Klaben, to change a nonconforming use from a grocery store to a beauty shop at 307 Third street southeast.

Approvals Listed

Hospital Opens Eye Operating Room Today

Emergency Dedicating Modern Equipment To Late G. W. White

A modern eye operating room will be opened and dedicated at Emergency Hospital today as a memorial to George W. White, who had been treasurer of the institution 17 years at the time of his death on October 27, 1938.

At the simple dedicatory exercises, scheduled for 3:30 p. m., Maj. Gist Blair, president of Emergency Hospital, will accept the memorial from Mrs. Louise C. White, widow of the hospital treasurer, who was president of the National Metropolitan Bank.

Among outstanding features of the George Whitney White Memorial Eye Operating Room are a giant magnet for removing steel splinters, an especially designed operating table and non-shadow illumination.

Dr. James N. Greear, jr., chief of the eye service at Emergency, visited hospitals in New York and Chicago for the purpose of selecting the most efficient instruments and equipment. A nurse was sent to the Presbyterian Medical Center Eye Institute in New York for a special postgraduate course in surgical technique in connection with the new unit.

Woodrum Asks Curtailed WPA, Hits New Bill

Urges Billion for Year With Half to Be Used For Public Works

By John B. Oakes

In an attack on the President's 1941 relief bill, Representative Woodrum (Democrat), of Virginia, who has guided the last few relief appropriations through the House, yesterday recommended a drastically curtailed WPA and a new $500,000,000 public works program.

The pending measure — which Woodrum denounced as too expensive and "on the wrong road"—would give WPA $975,650,000, with permission to spend it during the first eight months of the fiscal year. At this rate, the full year's appropriation would amount to almost as much as the sum granted for 1940, $1,477,000,000.

Woodrum, acting chairman of the Appropriations subcommittee handling relief, urged the House to appropriate $975,000,000 for the entire year, half to be used for WPA work involving no heavy construction, and half to be spent on "a carefully considered program of public works"—apparently along the lines of the PWA, for which no funds were voted this year.

Recalling that the President asked for $1,000,000,000 for WPA in January, Woodrum insisted that there has been "no such great economic crash between January and today as to justify this Congress in increasing the relief budget by 33 1-3 per cent."

And "if employment conditions are 33 1-3 per cent worse, then it's high time we changed our policies," he added.

Meanwhile, the House rang with charges based on the report and hearings of the investigation into WPA, which had been made public just 24 hours previously.

Representative Taber (Republican), of New York, asserted that Deputy WPA Administrator Howard Hunter had obtained $1,700 worth of travel accommodations on Government vouchers, which were subsequently disallowed.

"Then why should he not be in the penitentiary instead of on a Federal pay roll?" roared Representative Schafer (Republican), of Wisconsin.

Hunter had explained in the course of the WPA investigation that the "excess charges" for "superior accommodations" which he had obtained on vouchers were never intended to be paid for by the Government.

"I have at all times known that I would pay them," Hunter said. "In all cases I knew they would be deducted and that they (the Government) would get the money from me. The only sin in that connection was that I was not quite considerate of the GAO in putting upon them unnecessary clerical work in making the deductions."

In his asasult on the proposed relief bill, Representative Taber termed it a "makeshift designed to continue the distressful and disgraceful conditions that have been characteristic of WPA."

He denounced the $500,000 granted in the bill for the Office of Government Reports, an arm of the Executive Office of the President, as "nothing but a campaign fund."

The relief bill was defended, on the other hand, by Representative Cannon (Democrat), of Missouri, floor manager for the measure. He warned that drastic curtailment of the WPA employment program would be "most disastrous," especially in view of unsettled war conditions.

Besides recommending a cut in WPA and establishment of a new WPA program, Woodrum proposed that "pressure" be put on the States to make them carry their share of the relief burden. He urged that business make an "intensive effort" to provide jobs; and "in exchange . . . Government should show a more conciliatory attitude toward business."

The present relief system "will surely lead to national economic disaster if it is persevered in," Woodrum declared. He asserted that the WPA had "all but monopolized" the field of construction, which was threatened with "disaster" if the relief agency continued in large-scale building projects.

Woodrum advised his colleagues not to "kid" themselves into thinking that the $975,000,000 in the pending bill would cover more than eight months.

U. S. Industry Shows Signs Of Picking Up

Activity Steady After Decline, Federal Reserve Board Says

Industry showed signs of picking up early this month, after a steady decline during the winter and early spring, the Federal Reserve Board reported yesterday.

"Industrial activity was steady during April after three months of sharp decline," the report noted, adding this hint of better times:

"In the first half of May increases appeared in some lines, particularly steel." This statement came as steel shares rallied on the New York Stock Exchange, after a sharp fall.

The board's seasonably adjusted index of industrial activity—barometer of business—registered 102 per cent of the 1923-25 average in April, compared with 104 for March, 109 in February, and a record high of 128 in December.

Highlights of the report:

April activity was 10 points higher than for the same month last year.

Steel activity strengthened early in May, but output of automobiles, plate glass, textiles and lumber declined.

Machinery, aircraft and shipbuilding industries—closely related to Europe's war—continued very active.

Prices showed an early May rise, especially for products like rubber, tin and silk that must come through war areas.

Michigan G. O. P. Backs Vandenberg

Grand Rapids, Mich., May 16 (AP).—Michigan's Republican convention took its expected action today, indorsing United States Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg for the presidential nomination and all but ignoring the State's other favorite son, Thomas E. Dewey.

The convention adopted resolutions unqualifiedly supporting Vandenberg—and making no references to Dewey—after hearing the Senator's keynote speech in which he expressed willingness to "fight every inch of the way" in the "great national adventure launched in my behalf."

Of the 38 delegates named to the national convention, only one, State Senator Herman H. Dignan was an avowed supporter of the New York District Attorney.

10,000 to Open Tall Cedars Session Today

Fun to Be Keynote Of 38th Conclave Of Masonic Unit Here

With good fellowship as their theme song, the vanguard of 10,000 delegates to the thirty-eighth convention of the Tall Cedars of Lebanon, a Masonic affiliate, yesterday swarmed the Capital, the sole purpose expressed by their motto—"fun, frolic and merriment."

Europe was farthest from the thoughts of the 3,500 delegates who registered yesterday for the sessions, which begin today and continue tomorrow.

A delegation of six officials was greeted at the White House by President Roosevelt, an honorary member of the organization. They were Thomas C. Havel, supreme tall cedar; Frederick H. Hicks, senior deputy supreme tall cedar; Harry L. Dillinger, junior deputy supreme tall cedar; Edmund H. Reeves, supreme scribe; August Roemmele, supreme treasurer; R. F. Camalier, general chairman of the convention, and John Q. Slye, past grand tall cedar.

Thirty Initiated

Thirty new members were initiated into the Capital unit in a colorful ceremony last night. A number of Senators and Congressmen who were to have been made honorary members were unable to attend because of activities on the Hill.

An additional 3,00 delegates are expected here today, with more expected tomorrow to join in the colorful parade beginning at 2 p. m., a highlight of the convention.

Registration continues today with a meeting of the Supreme Forest at 10 a. m. While the officers are meeting, other delegates will tour the White House.

At 1 p. m., many of the delegates will take a boat trip on the Potomac, while 300 ladies will attend a special tea at the White House where Mrs. Roosevelt will receive.

Nomination of officers will take place this afternoon along with several other business sessions. A banquet in the Willard Hotel tonight will climax the first day's session.

Coster-Associates' Trial in Fraud Goes to U. S. Jury

New York, May 16 (AP).—The trial of three former associates of the late F. Donald Coster-Musica—a 10-weeks-long postlude to one of the most melodramatic financial scandals of the post-boom era—went to a Federal court jury tonight.

The defendants—Horace Merwin, president of the Bridgeport (Conn.) City Trust Co.; Rowley W. Phillips, a Waterbury (Conn.) investment broker, and John H. McGloon—were charged with mail fraud, violation of the Securities Act and conspiracy.

Conviction on all the 13 counts outstanding could mean maximum penalities of 53 years in prison.

Senate Takes Up La Follette Civil Liberties Bill

The La Follette bill to eliminate labor spies, strikebreakers and arsenals in industrial plants was taken up in the Senate yesterday with prospect of passage early next week.

First legislation to stem directly from the 2½-lear investigation of the La Follette Civil Liberties Committee, the bill is designed to put an end to "oppressive labor practices" which were brought to light in the course of the hearings.

The bill is also designed to prevent the Government from making contracts with employers guilty of any of the prohibited "oppressive labor practices."

Laundry Owners Elect Officers

Virginia Beach, Va., May 16 (AP).—Robert B. Crawford, of Farmville, was elected president of the Maryland, District of Columbia and Virginia Laundry Owners' Association tonight at the opening of a convention at the Cavalier Hotel.

Crawford, who served the association last year as vice president, succeeded Leslie B. Bell, of Bethesda, Md. Edward L. Ricks, Baltimore, was elected vice president; Ross A. Stowe, Richmond wes reelected treasurer, and George N. Walker, Washington, was reelected secretary.

G. O. P. Convention Plans Chief Dies; Stricken at Meeting

Philadelphia, May 16 &.—Ralph E. Williams, 70, Republican national committeeman of Oregon, died at 7:29 o'clock tonight, two hours after suffering a cerebral hemorrhage.

Williams, who was head of the arrangements committee for the Republican National Convention here next month, collapsed at a committee meeting late this afternoon. He was stricken while addressing his committee. He had tilted a chair back of him and leaned against it. The chair slipped and Williams fell to the floor.

As he was helped up he exclaimed:

"Let's get on with the meeting. Don't pay any attention to me."

Dr. Louis Chodoff was called, however. He ordered Williams to the Jefferson Hospital. The committee meeting was hastily adjourned.

Funeral Services Planned Today For Western Starr

Western Starr, 85, former political campaigner who died Wednesday at the Home for Incurables, will be buried at private funeral services today.

Mr. Starr was an intimate friend of President Theodore Roosevelt. In 1912 he campaigned for Woodrow Wilson, and in 1924 made a cross-country speaking tour for Robert LaFollette's Presidential campaign. He had been a resident of Washington for many years.

Stricken blind and invalided 5 years ago, Mr. Starr retained an active interest in foreign and national affairs. During the past year he had projected a Henry George National Memorial University for the Capital.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Edith Starr; a son, James H., of Chicago; and a daughter, Mrs. E. T. Larson, of Wilmington, Del.

Rites Tomorrow For the Rev. Fort, Hagerstown Pastor

Funeral services for the Rev. John Edward Fort, 62, pastor of the Washington Square Methodist Church at Hagerstown, Md., and former clergyman of four Methodist churches in Washington, will be at 11 a. m. tomorrow in Union Methodist Church. Burial will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

The Rev. Fort died Wednesday in Sibley Hospital. Before serving at the Hagerstown church, he was pastor of the Anacostia Methodist Church; the Union Methodist Church; the Harlem Park Church, Baltimore; the Kayser (W. Va.) Methodist Church, the Canton Methodist Church, Baltimore, and the Brightwood and Eldbrook Methodist churches in Washington.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Anna B. Fort, Hagerstown; a sister, Mrs. Stella A. Middleton, Hyattsville, Md.; two sons, Wayne W. and Arnold B. Fort, Washington, and two daughters, Mrs. Virginia F. Jones, Washington, and Miss Anna B. Fort, of Hagerstown.

Manassas Battle Area Designated As National Park

By the Associated Press

Secretary Ickes designated 1,604 acres in Prince William County, Va., yesterday as Manassas National Battlefield Park. It will become a link in the National Park service chain of Virginia's major battlefields in the War Between the States.

Officials said that much of the area, scene of the first and second battles of Bull Run, had been owned by the Sons of Confederate Veterans The property included Henry House Hill. The veterans' organization donated this tract to the Federal Government which has operated a demonstration area in the vicinity of Manassas and Leesburg.

The National Park Service, itself, owned large tracts already familiar to war zone visitors. It has $56,000, officials said, with which to erect a new administration-museum building in the park area and to maintain a guide service for battlefield tourists.

Delegates Sign Americas' Bar Constitution

'Forum for Exchanges Of Views' Created; Chief Justice Speaks

Delegates from seven South and Central American countries and the United States yesterday signed a constitution creating an Inter-American Bar Association as a "forum for exchange of views" to foster cordial relations among lawyers of the Western Hemisphere.

The action came at a meeting of the international law section of the American Scientific Congress at the Mayflower Hotel. It was said by members of an American Bar Association committee, who framed the constitution, to stem from desires for Western Hemisphere solidarity in view of European war events.

Earlier at the Mayflower Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes told the opening session of the eighteenth annual meeting of the American Law Institute the survival of democracy in this country depends on the "dominance of a sense of justice."

Roosevelt's Letter Read

A letter from President Roosevelt was read by Institute Director William D. Lewis in which he congratulated the body on past legal achievements but warned "much still remains to be attained in the field of criminal law and penology."

Work on the constitution for the Inter-American Bar Association was initiated last January by a committee of the international and comparative law section of the American Bar Association. During the last week delegates from Latin-American countries and Canada collaborated in preparation of the final draft.

William Roy Vallance, State Department legal adviser, and chairman of the A. B. A. section, signed for the United States bar group. Secretary of State Hull was scheduled to sign later as representative of the American Society of International Law.

Specified as purposes of the inter-American legal organization were "to establish and maintain relations between associations . . . of lawyers in the various countries of the Americas, to provide a forum for exchange of views, to advance the science of jurisprudence and particularly the study of comparative law, to further the diffusion of knowledge of the laws of the various countries throughout the Americas, and to encourage cordial intercourse between lawyers of the Western Hemisphere."

Representatives Sign

Eligible for membership are any "national association" or "constituent geographical" organization of lawyers in North and South America.

After the reading of the constitution by William S. Culbertson, former ambassador to Chile, the chairman of the committee that drew up the proposal, representatives of judicial and law bodies in the following countries beside the United States filed to the rostrum to affix their signatures: Brazil, Costa Rica, Colombia, Venezuela, Cuba, and Porto Rico

Horatio Alfaro, of the Panamanian Society of International Law, who presided, announced he would sign after the meeting.

Curtis Shears, Washington attorney, and alternate-chairman, of the committee drafting the constitution, hailed the new organization as of vital importance in establishing a "uniformity of principles" in a move toward Western Hemisphere solidarity.

Those signing the convention yesterday will serve as a provisional directing council pending the appointment of a permanent council, executive committee, president, secretary-general, and vice presidents for every member country, at a meeting in Panama City at a yet unspecified date.

"Dominance of Sense of Justice"

Chief Justice Hughes, in one of his rare public appearances, took the floor at the American Law Institute meeting after former Senator George Wharton Pepper had opened the session with the words: "Let us stand for a brief moment . . . We can turn aside for an interval of quiet while we consider those things that are the antithesis of chaos."

The chief justice declared: "If democratic institutions are to survive, it will not be simply by maintaining majority rule and by swift adaptations to the demands of the moment, but by dominance of a sense of justice which will not long survive if judicial processes do not conserve it."

"Men pass—the institution survives, with the Nation keenly conscious of the necessity of safeguarding its (the Court's) independence and maintaining its impartial service."

Biologists See Birth of Eel In Beebe Film

Evolution of Lizard To Bird Also Shown For Congress Delegates

By Gerald G. Gross
Post Staff Writer

Biologist delegates to the American Scientific Congress went to the movies yesterday, unique movies made by Dr. William Beebe, noted underseas explorer and inventor of the bathysphere, depicting the birth of an eel and the evolution of a lizard into a bird.

"Familiar to us in literature since the time of Charles Darwin are certain evolutionary sequences," said Dr. Beebe. "One is the panorama of embryology, of the development of a fish within the egg. A second is the change from a scaly, terrestrial lizard to a feathered, flying bird.

"We have word descriptions and illustrations of both in abundance but no direct visual presentation. By means of motion pictures I have been able to produce these sequences—in the case of the egg of a deep-sea eel by direct photography from life, and in the lizard to bird by animation."

Shows Novel Film

Whereupon the naturalist unspooled his novel film. The eel reel showed every step of the egg's incubation, from before the closing of the blastopore to the first muscular activity of fins, gills and eyes and, finally, the emergence of the elongated fish.

The pictures were made by placing the giant egg, collected near the Bermuda coast, of an unknown species of deep-sea eel on the stage of a microscope and snapping an exposure every 60 seconds without cessation for seven days and seven nights.

The lizard-to-bird film, comparably complex but in a different way, is trick photography, but accurate in scientific detail. It shows, first, a prehistoric lizard of millions of years ago, evolving into a leaper, into a climber and, after several intermediate stages, into a winged, curved-beaked creature that proves to be an American bald eagle.

Another zoological lecture received with interest was that of Dr. Vital Brazil, of Rio de Janeiro, who described snakes which are poison specialists. Some reptiles possess venom which is more active on other snakes than on other animals, some are particularly poisonous to fish or birds, the speaker said.

Soil erosion is costing the United States more than $840,000,000 a year, the section on agriculture and conservation was told by H. H. Bennett, chief of the Soil Conservation Service.

Nearly half of the burden falls on American farmers, he declared, adding that the most promising element to date in attempts to conserve the soil lies in the rapid development of conservation districts organized by farmers on their own initiative.

Petroleum Estimates

Addressing the section on geological sciences, Hugh D. Miser, U. S. Geological Survey, said estimates made early this year of the proved reserves of petroleum in this country ranged from 18.5 to 19.7 billion barrels. This does not include the as yet unknown quantity of oil that will be discovered in the future in new fields or in deeper zones of present producing fields.

Since the drilling of the first commercial oil well in the United States in 1859, 22.5 billion barrels have been produced in 23 States, Miser said.

Social events on yesterday's calendar were a visit to the Dumbarton Oaks gardens of Robert Woods Bliss in Georgetown, and a banquet at the Hotel Mayflower. Final sectional meetings will begin at 9:30 a. m. today. At 3 p. m. the closing plenary session will be held in the Pan American Building.

Tonight the delegates will leave for Old Point Comfort, Va., aboard a Norfolk and Washington steamer, inaugurating a sightseeing tour which will take them to Yorktown, Williamsburg and Philadelphia before the scientific congress ends next Tuesday with ceremonies at the New York World's Fair.

Mary's hair was soft

After an interview with Mary, the Highland Queen, John Knox was asked his opinion of her. "If there not be in her a proud mind, a crafty wit, and an indurate heart, my judgment faileth me." Then he added that her skin was very white and her hair seemed very soft.

Mary's charm and friend-making qualities were admitted even by her enemies. And it was this gift of friendship that led the early makers of Highland Queen Scotch whisky to name it for her. It is light and delicate, yet it retains rare flavor and bouquet.

Navy, according to authoritative sources.

President Roosevelt, in his message, did not give details as to how the funds would be spent. These, he said, will be furnished to Congressional committees.

He said the cash proposal would provide $546,000,000 for the Army, $250,000,000 for the Navy and Marine Corps, and $100,000,000 in a lump sum directly to him for "emergency."

The contractual authority would be divided $186,000,000 to the War and Navy Departments and $100,000,000 to the President's special fund.

Acting swiftly to carry out the program, the Senate adopted unanimously a resolution to recall the $963,797,000 Navy appropriation bill from a joint conference committee. This was to enable the funds for the Navy to be added to the measure and make it unnecessary to introduce new legislation.

Committees Meet Today

Tentative plans of the leadership also called for adding the Army funds to the regular $785,000,000 War Department supply bill now before the Senate Appropriations Committee.

Senate and House legislative committees likewise planned to meet to consider what authorizing measures might be necessary. Chairman Sheppard, of the Senate Military Affairs Committee, said the group will consider this matter at its regular meeting this morning, and Chairman May, of the House Military Affairs Committee also called his group into session today.

May late yesterday introduced a bill to authorize expenditures of $726,000,000 for the Army. This is the War Department's share of the $1,182,000,000. Chairman Vinson of the House Naval Affairs Committee, called a meeting for tomorrow and said legislation for speeding the shipbuilding program would be ready then.

Receives Ovation

As President Roosevelt entered the packed House to deliver his message he was greeted with an ovation such as he has rarely received before. Democrats and Republicans alike got to their feet applauding, and cheers rang through the chamber.

Facing a barrage of microphones that carried his words throughout the world, he began speaking in slow measured tones, without his usual smile.

"These are ominous days," he stated, "days whose swift and shocking developments force every neutral to look to its defenses in the light of new factors."

Citing the development of "new powers of destruction in the hands of "ruthless and daring" men, Mr. Roosevelt declared that "no old defense is so strong that it requires no further strengthening and no attack is so unlikely or impossible that it may be ignored."

Seas No Longer Barriers

"The clear fact is that the American people must recast their thinking about national protection," he stated.

The nation must consider the "new technique of modern war" which includes motorized armies, parachute troops and the "treacherous use of the 'fifth column,'" he declared.

Stressing the importance of a Nation's plane production capacity, he drew attention to Germany's superiority in this respect and urged that nothing be done to stop our industry from expansion by means of Allied plane orders.

The Army and Navy now have 8,700 planes in service or on order.

The President declared he is "determined to face the fact realistically that this Nation requires a toughness of moral and physical fiber. Those qualities, I am convinced, the American people hold to a high degree.

"Our task is plain. The road we must take is clearly indicated. Our defenses must be invulnerable, our security absolute."

Implying that even further preparedness measures might be necessary later, Mr. Roosevelt promised to call Congress into special session if such a situation developed after adjournment.

The phrase, "The defense message is an authentic expression of the country's reaction to the latest phase of the European war," is an accurate summary of national editorial opinion reported by the Associated Press.

Afterward a small minority of legislators were critical of the message and the program proposed. Senator Reed (Republican), of Kansas, declared, "Patriotism! What crimes are committed in thy name."

G. O. P. Pledges Support

Representatives Maas, ranking minority member of the House Naval Affairs Committee, and a strong Army-Navy supporter, said the message shows the President considers us "no longer neutral, but a non-belligerent ally."

But very few squarely opposed the program. House Minority Leader Martin declared "We're for the program" and Senate Republican Leader McNary predicted its early passage. Both urged that it be given careful study.

The President's request for a "blank check" of $200,000,000 was the only part of the progfram expected to bring any fight. Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, said he would oppose this unless some detailed explanation was made as to what was intended.

Details of the program are expected to be set forth today when budget estimates are due to reach Congress. As revealed by Congressional and down-town sources, however, the program will provide:

Provide weapon and other essential equipment for a war-time force of 750,000 men plus 250,000 replacements. (Equipment is now on hand or order for close to 450,000 of these troops.)

7,000 Pilots a Year

Establish a pilot training program which will produce 7,000 Army pilots a year, plus additional air mechanics.

Purchase guns and equipment for 31 additional antiaircraft regiments, raising the total to 68.

Procure 200 long-range four-motored bombers, similar to 250 now in service or on order.

Construct an air base at Anchorage, Alaska.

Modernize warplanes in the light of development of the European—install self-sealing gas tanks, armor-plate, etc.

Recruit 15,000 additional men for the Regular Army bringing the total, exclusive of the new air mechanics to 242,000. This will enable the Army to add a sixth "stream-lined" division, boost the mechanized cavalry brigade to a division and provide part of the special troops for a second Army corps.

24-Hour Shifts Urged

Appropriate additional funds for "educational orders," expanding Government arsenals and speeding up production at such plants by going on a 24-hour basis.

Provide additional sea-coast defense—totaling about $4,000,000—and some Army supplies such as motors, clothing, parachutes and blankets.

Speed up construction of naval shipbuilding by establishing three shifts and other means.

Provide submarine nets and additional antiaircraft for ships and naval shore use.

Purchase landing force equipment for the Marine Corps.

How the Funds Will Be Spent

Here are the tentative plans for spending the $1,182,000,000 sought by President Roosevelt for rebuilding the Nation's defenses:

Army ($926,000,000)—
Antiaircraft guns and ammunition	$ 64,000,000
Initial equipment for 1,000,000 troops	262,000,000
15,000 additional troops	15,000,000
Commercial equipments (trucks, etc.)	74,000,000
Modernization combat airplanes	28,000,000
Aid to powder manufacturers	44,000,000
Munitions	32,000,000
Canal Zone defenses	6,000,000
Anchorage, Alaska, air base	8,000,000
Military planning	7,000,000
Training 7,000 pilots	106,000,000
Heavy bombers (200)	80,000,000

President Roosevelt—Increasing airplane antiaircraft and munitions production—$200,000,000.

The President, it was said, intends to use the funds as loans to aid private industry in building up its facilities rather than put the Government in the armament business.

The Navy ($256,000,000)—
Antiaircraft guns at naval stations.
Mechanization of the Marine Corps.
Recommissioning of 35 old destroyers, 22 of which will be designed for a secret mission.
Self-sealing gas tanks for airplanes.
100 new super naval airplanes.
Harbor submarine nets.

Message Comes on 23d Anniversary Of Passing of Selective Draft Act; Reference to Defense 'Team' Best Applauded

Amid scenes reminiscent of Woodrow Wilson's appearance before Congress on fateful April 2, 1917, Franklin D. Roosevelt, who was Wilson's Assistant Secretary of the Navy, stepped to the same House rostrum yesterday.

It was just 23 years, to the day, since both Houses of Congress rushed passage of the Selective Draft Act.

But none of the frenzy of World War days was in evidence. Instead, members of the legislative and executive branches of the Government heard the President's measured request for more defense funds in virtual silence, broken only occasionally by applause.

The gravity of the occasion was deepened by a heavy, gray rain.

As the President motored in state from the White House to the Capitol, not even he knew whether, sometime in midsummer or fall, he might make the trip again, forced by war threatening the United States, to address a special session.

His route passed the Labor Department, where already demands were felt that labor requirements be relaxed for national defense; the Justice Department, where G-men were flooded with requests to investigate "fifth column" activities; the Bureau of Internal Revenue, whose statisticians were already reckoning how much taxes might be needed to raise billions more for defense.

Reminded of Munich

Umbrellas were waved by a crowd of 200 at Capitol Plaza, though one man was overheard remarking that umbrellas were "too reminiscent of Munich."

Greeted by a two-minute ovation when he mounted to the House rostrum, the President appeared nervous and fumbled for some time with his spectacles.

He did not know that shortly before his arrival a leak in the House chamber roof had spattered rainwater on the very rostrum where he stood.

Germany and Italy were not represented in the diplomatic gallery, but listening intently were Lord Lothian, the British Ambassador, and the envoys from Argentina, Brazil and Australia.

Silence was the reception to the President's opening words, which he spoke in a low, grave tone.

Cabinet Members Grave

Every Cabinet member present appeared sunk in serious thought. Secretary Hull held his chin in hand. Secretary of War Woodring, responsible for the Army's defense effort, gripped his chair. Secretary of the Navy Edison and Labor Secretary Perkins were not there. Harry Hopkins, Secretary of Commerce, recently ill, made one of his rare appearances.

Reminiscent, too, of the First World War fought on Flanders fields were the buddy poppies, worn by many members and distributed to benefit the disabled members of the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

Now and again, as when the President referred to Pan American solidarity, or when he asked that warplanes for Europe not be delayed, applause broke the silence.

The loudest acclamation from the Senators and Representatives was reserved, however, for the moment when the President referred to himself and Congress as a "team" in reference to United States defense, and again when he called for 50,000 airplanes.

Isolationists Applaud

At these times even Senators Hiram Johnson, Bennett Champ Clark and Gerald Nye, isolationists, were seen clapping. At references to the present state of preparedness, applause came from the Democratic side. When the President complimented the Navy, Senator Walsh, who is chairman of the Senate Naval Affairs Committee, applauded alone.

At the President's request for $200,000,000 to be spent at his own discretion, Joe Martin, Republican House Leader, winced and whispered to a colleague.

Scarcely had the President finished speaking, when a general rising ovation from both sides of the House echoed through the building as he left the Capitol and entered his car.

50,000 Planes A Year Called 'Simple Matter'

Program Involves Only Plant and Personnel Increase, Says Chamber

By Devon Francis
Associated Press Aviation Writer

New York, May 16.—Expansion of the American aircraft manufacturing industry to produce 50,000 military airplanes annually as suggested by President Roosevelt today "is relatively a simple matter" involving a threefold personnel increase, the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce said in a statement tonight.

The statement, over the signature of John H. Jouett, president of the chamber, the trade association of the aircraft manufacturing industry, said 50,000 planes a year also would involve tripling the floor space of the airframe plants and doubling the floor space of the engine plants.

"From preliminary studies," said Jouett, "the program outlined in the President's message today would seem to involve slightly more than a threefold increase in the number of employes with the plants working on a full shift basis, at the same time tripling the floor space of the airplane manufacturing plants and doubling the floor space of the engine plants."

The aircraft industry, under the impetus of Allied orders in the last few months, has been expanded from about 40,000 to 100,000 employes in the plane, engine and accessories plants. An intensive program has been instituted in several engine and aircraft factories.

President Roosevelt estimated the aircraft industry's annual production capacity at present at more than 12,000 planes.

By December of this year, it has been estimated 25,000 engines each of 1,000 horsepower or better will be rolling off assembly lines on an annual basis.

Tool Industry Ready

Cleveland, May 16 (AP).—The United States' strategic machine tool industry was pronounced ready today for any "planned program" of armament.

"There is no bottleneck in our industry for any planned program," Tell Berna, manager of the National Machine Tool Builders Association, declared after a study of President Roosevelt's preparedness message.

The machine tool operating rate has climbed from 74.6 per cent of estimated capacity at the start of war to a virtually stationary level of 93.4 per cent, but the spurt in actual production has been much greater since capacity itself has increased about 40 per cent since last September.

If the United States should enter hostilities, Berna added, "machine tool requirements for a major war effort can be produced in the time it would take to enlist workmen who would operate the machine tools, and in the time it would take to raise the Army."

China Will Win, Former Official Declares at G. W. U.

China will win her struggle against Japan and will enter a period of economic development that will be a "miracle of modern times," it was predicted here last night by Dr. Esson M. Gale, former commissioner of the Chinese government salt revenue.

Dr. Gale spoke on "Economic Problems of the Far East" before the Institute of Pacific Relations of George Washington University.

The speaker viewed the war with Japan as a boon to China in many respects. Had it not been for the war, he explained, the development of the backward interior might not have been possible for years to come. Now, he said, China's talent, culture and institutions of learning have migrated from the coasts to the interior by necessity.

Defense Tax Bill Unlikely In This Term

Congress Expected To Delay Problem Until Next Session

Still a mystery to Congress and budget officials was how the President's $1,182,000,000 arms program would be paid for, but two facts emerged clearly:

Possibility of new taxes at this preelection session of Congress was remote.

Further, most members of Congress appeared to favor postponing solution of this unpleasant problem until next session, but many expressed willingness to raise the legal debt limit of $45,000,000,000, if necessary.

Though the President asked "immediate appropriation" of $896,000,000, fiscal officials felt that very little of that sum could be actually paid out by the Treasury before the next meeting of Congress, thus postponing the day of reckoning.

Contract authorizations of $286,000,000 asked by the President, did not enter into the foreground of the money-raising problem, because it was recognized that the Treasury might not have to pay up on these contracts until 1941, at the earliest, and on some items not until 1942.

Official calculations showed that if, for example, $500,000,000 were called for by a special national defense supertax, an additional levy of 25 per cent would have to be superimposed on present personnel income tax payments.

The needed defense funds are not coming from the Treasury's $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund, Secretary Morgenthau indicated. He declared yesterday that it should be used only in event of "serious national emergency."

Unexpected cheer came, meanwhile, in a Treasury report showing that Federal revenues are exceeding expectations. With a month and a half of the fiscal year yet to go, the Treasury has collected $5,004,726,896 and expected to surpass the budgeted $5,703,795,000.

Some members of Congress bridled at the President's request to spend, at his personal discretion, sums totaling $200,000,000. Treasury officials, however, found ample precedent for this in the World War. Congress voted $100,000,000 to Woodrow Wilson on April 4, 1917, to be spent at his discretion.

U. S. Refreezes Holland Funds Deposited Here

Funds of the Dutch government on deposit in this country again became the ward of the United States yesterday, scarcely 72 hours after the Dutch themselves had requested and received full license to withdraw funds as they wished.

This was the third change in status of the Dutch millions since Germany invaded the Netherlands May 10, resulting in the President and the Treasury "freezing" the money in this country.

Belgian government funds in the United States remain freed from licensing restrictions.

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, announcing the step, indicated that the Dutch government might want to avoid any dispute over the legal government of Holland at this time.

The other children are James and Emile, 2-year-old twins, and Robert, 5

London Press Hails Roosevelt Defense Speech

Copyright by New York Times

London (Friday), May 17.—The conservative London Telegraph in a leading editorial this morning on "Mr. Roosevelt's Realism," sees in the President's speech yesterday a warning that the American people can no longer count themselves outside the menace of German ambition.

The Telegraph says Mr. Roosevelt's "straight-flung words" asking for huge appropriations with which to meet any lighting offensive against American liberties will be heard across the world.

The editorial refers to the President's demand for American air strength and plane production and goes on, "but in doing so he is at pains to insist that nothing must delay or hamper the delivery of the utmost possible number of aircraft to fulfill the orders we are placing."

The Liberal News Chronicle, whose news report of Roosevelt speech was headed "U. S. Prepares for War" says editorially:

"We badly need every plane we can get and the American contribution is valuable. But . . . the prospect is that pressure on the Allies will become much greater in the near future through entry of Italy into the war and the only way that America could give the Allies effective help at this moment would be to warn Italy that such a move would find the United States at the Allies' side."

U. S. Citizens Make Plans To Quit Italy

Diplomatic Officials Prepare to Send Their Families Home

By Richard G. Massock.
Associated Press Staff Writer

Rome, May 16.—Americans in Italy tonight made hasty preparations to leave on advice of United States consulates to return home "at the earliest possible moment."

American diplomatic officials themselves prepared to send their families home; but only as a precautionary measure, it was explained.

Many foreigners of other nationalities also packed their belongings to join the exodus. A long line of applicants for visas stood before the French consulate. The British consulate also was the scene of great activity.

Italian authorities were silent on the personal message from President Roosevelt to Premier Mussolini in an apparent new effort to keep Italy out of the war.

With reports of growing fears in the Balkans, particularly in Greece and Yugoslavia, and rumors of possible action there, concrete signs still were lacking of any Italian intention to profit from the fierce warfare in the west and undertake any military adventure at this time.

Mussolini, receiving Fascist leaders from the Trentino region along the German frontier, told them of the duties of the people "in this particular moment."

Among many rumors, mostly discredited, was one that Il Duce and Adolf Hitler would meet again soon in the Brenner Pass, scene of the conference between the two axis partners last March 18.

D. C. Businessmen Back Roosevelt Defense Plans

Support of President Roosevelt's request for increased armament appropriations was voiced last night by the Federation of Businessmen's Associations at a dinner meeting of the organization held at the Continental Hotel.

The Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers Association and the District Petroleum Committee were voted into the federation. Entertaining the organization was the Southeast Association.

L. R. Calburn, president of the Connecticut Avenue Citizens Association, who introduced the resolution supportnig the President's request, urged a survey by the War Department of armament conditions in the District.

Allied Forces Use Tanks, Close in on Narvik

Stockholm, May 16 (AP).—A bitter struggle for possession of Narvik, Norway's Arctic iron ore port, appeared tonight to be intensifying, with the Allies reported to be getting light tanks into action and gradually winning the upper hand.

Some Swedish press reports said an Allied occupation of German-held Narvik itself might be expected soon. They said the German garrison had been subjected to a prolonged, heavy combardment. Newly arrived Canadian troops were said to have joined the Allied forces.

East Indies Regime 'Satisfactory' to Japan

The government of The Netherlands East Indies as it is now maintained by the East Indies authorities is satisfactory to Japan, Ambassador Kensuke Horinouchi told reporters yesterday.

Nazis Abused In Yugoslavia, Press Claims

Italy Supplying Submarines to Reich, Belgrade Informed

By C. L. Sulzberger
Copyright by New York Times

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, May 16.—Symptoms of extreme anxiety began to appear in Belgrade today for the first time as anti-Yugoslav propaganda suddenly started to circulate from Germany and streams of foreigners evacuated the capital.

While the foreign office was again informed that Italian war fever is a shade lower, diplomatic circles believe this is just a momentary pause and Rome has already cast its die.

In this respect, it is learned from responsible sources that between two and five submarines with German crews are now operating from the Dodecanese Island bases and it is also learned that Italy has recently been furnishing undersea craft to the Reich.

[The United Press reported from Belgrade that international telephone calls, both incoming and outgoing, were censored by the Yugoslav government last night for the first time.]

There is the belief in some quarters that when Italy openly enters the war she will allow German troops to pass through Trieste to help out in the Near Eastern campaign.

The criticisms of Yugoslavia's treatment of her German minority which remained today, in the official Voelkischer Beobachter and on the Breslau radio, were chiefly responsible for the acute nervousness which exists tonight.

The attacks—which parallel each other—claim that young Germans had been maltreated and said they could not understand the curious behavior of this government towards these German minorities.

Since the government and the diplomatic corps are both fairly convinced that neither Axis partner desires war in this area there is much bewilderment about this apparently new phase. It is said several picayune German protests have piled up at the foreign office.

Fighting on 110-Mile Front

Arrows indicate where fighting was heavy yesterday on the 110-mile front from Antwerp to Sedan. At Sedan the Nazis were trying flanking movements (two curving arrows) while main force struck at the center. White arrows indicate Allied counterattacks actually the case. Therefore, as the great battle for the Dyle positions begins, an increased pressure can be exercised upon Antwerp and Louvain from the northeast."

All German commentators described the battle as one of rapid movement and maneuvering, rather than of closed fronts of the kind that characterized the later stages of the World War. This type of fighting, it was said, was made possible by the mobility and striking power of large numbers of airplanes, tanks and motorized guns—weapons in which the Germans claim the superiority they believe will be decisive.

In the fighting of the last days, these German mechanized units have pierced at several places the line of fortifications from Antwerp to south of Namur. The fortress of Namur now appears to have been encircled by forces advancing westward, both north and south of the city. It is now the expressed German intention to try flanking movements north of Antwerp and south of Louvain.

On the third front, in southern Belgium, the Germans are still doing their utmost to strengthen their hold on the west bank of the river. The supreme command claimed today that "southwest of Namur our divisions increased their success on the western shore of the Meuse and again defeated French tank units." There was some surprises in neutral military circles at the high command's reference to "divisions" on this side of the river, which was believed to be somewhat precariously held.

French Attacks Met

Regarding the fighting in the Sedan region, the high command said merely: "French counterattacks carried out with the heaviest tanks were thrown back south of Sedan. Several of these tanks were destroyed."

The Sedan offensive does not appear to have been made with the object of a major advance in this sector. It is more likely that Sedan represents a hinge of a swing-door movement, designed to sweep across western Belgium and northeastern France, and enveloping Paris from the north.

Belgian Coast Essential

Apart from this strategy, German military experts regard the occupation of western Belgium, including the coast, as essential to the offensive against England, which is being contemplated. The conquest of Holland gave the Germans air bases within 40 minutes flying time from southern England, but all comment here emphasizes the necessity of gaining more such bases in Belgium.

Neutral military observers believe that if the Allies are defeated in the present battle, the German air force may launch its attack on England without waiting for the land forces to push very far into France. If the present positions, where the Allies are making a strong stand, are broken through, it is believed that the latter will have no choice but to fall back on the fortifications along the Franco-Belgian frontier. It may be, of course, that the Allied plan is to do this in any case, after a delaying action along this front.

An artillery duel between the French and Germans in the Rhine sector took place today, according to an official bulletin. French long-range artillery started a bombardment of the town of Rastatt, south of Karlsruhe. The Germans, according to the bulletin, answered with a "reprisal" bombardment of the Alsatian town of Hagenau, just across the river from Rastatt.

A special bulletin this evening claimed that German bombers had in one day—May 15—inflicted losses on enemy shipping aggregating between 90,000 and 100,000 tons.

British Drop Tons of Bombs In New Attack

3-to-1 Toll Inflicted On German Aircraft; London Seizes Aliens

By John W. Culmer
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, May 16 (AP).—Britain swept about 3,000 enemy aliens into "protective custody" today in a drive to stifle any "Fifth Column" threat while her massed warplanes winged over Germany with "tons of bombs" in their greatest attack of the war.

Aliens affected by today's order of the home ministry were in category "B," male Germans and Austrians between 16 and 60 who had been under control but not detained.

The swiftness with which Prime Minister Churchill's government followed up criticism that the first big swoop on aliens Sunday was too late and not broad enough led to belief in some quarters that enemy alien women soon would be interned.

Refugees Seized

About two-thirds of the aliens rounded up today were refugees from the Nazi rule.

Previously they merely had been forbidden to own automobiles or cameras, travel more than 4 miles from their homes or change their addresses without police approval.

The air ministry said British fliers had waged "the heaviest attack yet made by the Royal Air Force during the war" east of the Rhine throughout last night.

The air offensive apparently was a follow-up of an attack yesterday by 150 Allied planes, described as the largest fleet they had massed for a single raid up to then. That attack, the air ministry said, helped stem the German drive in the Meuse-Sedan sector.

The second wave of bombardments, it said, was against "the enemy's road and rail communications which are supporting his forces in their invasion of the Low Countries and Luxembourg . . . many tons of bombs were released . . . fires broke out and heavy explosions were caused."

Claim Toll 3 to 1

The air ministry declared that "the toll inflicted on enemy aircraft is working out at more than three to one in our favor" on the Western Front.

It said 50 German planes were destroyed during today and that in two mass flights the British had lost only three, one during the night attack and two in the day.

Among the targets it said were squarely hit were German highways, railroads, a military encampment and a two-mile-long motorized column.

Allied military sources said the heaviest fighting in the momentous battle of the Meuse was between Dinant, Belgium, and the French city of Sedan, where the situation admittedly was serious "but not critical."

They said the Germans had failed to enlarge their "dent" in the French fortifications at Sedan and were held by the Allies east of that point.

Liege Holds Out

Liege and Namur, Belgian anchors of the Allied Meuse line, admittedly were isolated but a British military commentator said they still were holding out. Sporadic fighting was reported among the U-shaped front east of the Belgian port of Antwerp through Charleroi and Louvain, south to the French town of Mezieres and from Sedan to Longwy.

The meager reports said also that fighting in the vicinity of Walcheren and Beverland, in the unsurrendered northern Dutch province of Zeeland, was "heavy."

Brussels radio broadcasts reflected optimism. Leopold III, King of the Belgians, called by radio to his men in "the forts of Liege" to "resist to the utmost for the fatherland."

A broadcaster admitted that German mechanized columns had broken through "to a considerable depth" at several Belgian points, but declared German infantry, "closely held" by the Allies, had not supported the mechanized columns.

Wounded, both German and British, began reaching England.

Between 30 and 40 wounded German prisoners were brought to London today and 200 to 300 British casualties, half of them stretcher cases, reached Liverpool from France and Norway.

The commander of Britain's home forces urged owners of rifles and other firearms to lend their weapons for fighting a possible Nazi parachute invasion as volunteers for the new, unpaid home defense corps continued to crowd enrollment centers.

Sen. Walsh's Brother Dies

Boston, May 16 (AP).—William J. Walsh, 69, brother of United States Senator David I. Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, and former member of the Boston City Council, died today at his Allston District home. He was stricken with pneumonia several days ago.

Text of Speech By Reynaud

By the Associated Press

Paris, May 16.—The text of Premier Reynaud's speech in the Chamber of Deputies today follows:

I have only a few words to say to you. Since the time the Chamber went on vacation, Germany decided to play her last card. She threw herself on three free peoples and today she is aiming at the heart of France. The Belgium of 1914 has been found again. Her life will be closely related to ours, her sufferings will be our sufferings, her mourning will be our mourning.

One day our joy will be hers. Holland has lost her territory but she has regained in several days the virtues which made her greatness in history. The advance guard regiments have lost 80 per cent of their effectives. The Netherlands government told me, "We are beside you with all the resources of our empire clear to the end."

"If He Loses, He Is Damned"

On the hinge of our front the German Army has unloosed all its forces of destruction. There they are—all the tanks and all the airplanes accumulated methodically during so many years, thanks to the privations of the German people and with the fixed idea of Germany's war leader to conquer France and dominate Europe and then the world.

Hitler wants to win the war in two months. If he loses he is damned and he knows it.

That is why, after long hesitation, after having affirmed that he would let this war come to a head, he has taken his risk. We have perfect knowledge of the peril; we know that the days, weeks and months which are coming will forge the centuries of the future. We know perfectly well this peril and face it united.

"Our Lives Count for Nothing"

In France and England for the last several days all parties have achieved representation in the governments. The plutocratic nations, as Dr. Goebbels says, are governed by men—men belonging to all classes of the people. It is the day when everything appears to be lost that the world will see of what France is capable.

These are not vague hopes and it is not with words we must content ourselves. Our soldiers are fighting. French blood is flowing. The period which we are going to live through will probably have nothing in common with that which we have just lived through. We will be called upon to take measures which would have appeared revolutionary yesterday. Perhaps we must change our methods and our men. For any punishment which will come will be death.

We must forge for ourselves immediately a new spirit. We are full of hope. Our lives count for nothing. One thing alone counts, preserve France.

Ex-Legion Head Asks U. S. to Build 100,000 Aircraft

Richmond, Va., May 16 (AP).—A former national commander of the American Legion said the national defense needs of the United States called for "more and more and more airplanes" and suggested that the Nation build 100,000 aircraft within the next two years and build up a force of trained pilots to man them.

The speaker was Alvin M. Owsley, of Indianapolis, who served the Nation variously as Minister to Rumania, Ireland and Denmark. He discussed national defense at a banquet of the Richmond V. M. I. alumni, held to commemorate the part the cadet corps played in the Battle of New Market 76 years ago.

In the light of events in Europe, he reminded his audience that under the Monroe Doctrine the United States was obligated to defend the Western world from the top of Canada to the southern tip of South America.

House Committee Concludes Hearing On Patman Bill

A House Ways and Means subcommittee concluded hearings on the Patman chain store tax bill today without indicating when it would meet in executive session to consider the measure.

Chairman McCormack (Democrat), Massachusetts, said the subcommittee would first await printing of the record, consisting of 52,000 typewritten pages.

The last word for opponents of the measure was spoken by Ralph F. Burkard, of the First National Stores, Inc., Somerville, Mass., who called the proposed excises "punitive taxation at its worst" and declared they were designed "solely to destroy an efficient, modern, and up-to-date method of distribution."

and air forces. In the higher interests of the conduct of operations no precise information can be given at present of the actions now progressing."

Public opinion was interested principally in the German armored units with the result that the wildest of rumors circulated for the greater part of the day. Names of divers towns were mentioned as having been occupied by the enemy. All these rumors, however, were promptly declared to be without foundation.

It is stressed in authoritative circles that the passage of armored columns through the general lines is an incident to be expected in the present sort of warfare. Indeed that is their very purpose—to push forward at all speed in the hope of sowing panic and terror. On the Polish plains they succeeded because the Poles lacked weapons to halt them. In this campaign things are different.

The armored divisions may make deep raids but they offer good targets for airplanes—it is claimed here that most German types of tanks are vulnerable from the air by reason of their light armor in the superstructure—and the Allies are well provided with anti-tank defense. The French communique issued this evening emphasizes that "our bombers, protected by fighters, successfully carried out vigorous attacks on enemy armored columns located by our reconnaissance planes."

Have 10 Divisions

It is believed here that the Germans now have 10 armored divisions, 5 of which have been created since the war began.

The only other actions of any importance today occurred in the region of Sedan. There the enemy has been striving to widen the pocket on the southern bank of the Meuse which he succeeded in establishing two days ago.

Attacks in a westerly direction were halted today while a French counterattack gained some ground along the river. The situation tends to improve there although the air arm must continue to prevent the arrival of fresh German troops through the Ardennes Forest.

Halting enforcements, in point of fact, is one of the principal objects being sought at present by both sides. Lines of communications are being bombed systematically; the British have been devoting special attention to raids east of the Rhine in order to destroy bridges and highways, also attacking any convoys sighted.

There is news that the forts at Liege are still holding out since their guns command no inconsiderable length of the Meuse. The fortified area of Liege must not be confused with the city proper; there are 12 forts describing a circumference of some 30 miles.

Lack of Fuel May Cripple Nazi Armies

Gasoline Needed For War Machine Far Exceeds Reich Supply

By the Associated Press

Indications that Germany's blitz-machine may be slowed down or stalled by lack of fuel in event of a prolonged war were found yesterday in gasoline estimates available here.

Some analysts regarded the Nazi thrust through Holland and Belgium as a supreme gamble to win a decisive victory before a shortage of gasoline for planes, tanks and armored cars becomes acute. Others gave credence to reports that Germany has accumulated a two-year supply of petroleum.

On any basis of consumption disclosed here, Germany's army is consuming gasoline in its present full-force war effort at a far greater daily rate than it is receiving new supplies.

Use Twice as Much

The most favorable estimate of a government expert was that Germany could procure only 2,980,000 tons of gasoline a year from all sources—controlled territories, Rumania, Russia and synthetic gasoline production. That would amount to 945,000,000 gallons or an average daily inflow of 2,589,000 gallons.

In the three weeks of the Polish campaign, Germany's land forces alone are estimated reliably to have used 4,675,000 gallons of gasoline a day.

In that campaign 48 divisions were reported to have been engaged, 12 more moving up and 10 more in reserve. On this basis, gas consumption averaged 66,700 gallons a day for each division. At a similar rate the 100 divisions reported to be in action on the Western Front would require 6,670,000 gallons a day—more than twice Germany's estimated average daily inflow.

Plane Consumption High

And none of those figures take into account the swarming Nazi air force. If 3,000 planes are operating over the Western Front on an average of six hours each a day, it is estimated reliably they are burning 1,920,000 gallons of gas a day, allowing for both twin-engined and four-motored bombers.

A complicating factor is that Germany is understood to be lacking in the high-test gasoline required by airplanes.

Thus, for both land and air forces Germany might need 8,590,000 gallons daily.

Reserve Banks Buy Little Despite Drop

The Federal Reserve Board disclosed yesterday that the 12 Federal Reserve Banks bought only $7,000,000 worth of Government bonds last week in spite of sharp fluctuations in the market.

The amount contrasted with about $400,000,000 worth of purchases made last September to stem declines in the Government bond market and with a $500,000,000 authorization for purchases which the banks could have used.

J. P. Morgan's Sister Flees German Bombs

Forced to Abandon Work Among Needy In French Areas

By Roy P. Porter
Associated Press Staff Writer

Paris, May 16.—Miss Anne Morgan, 66-year-old sister of J. P. Morgan, unscathed by heavy German air attacks which forced her and her coworkers in the Friends of France Committee to suspend their aid to war-stricken civilians, was reported tonight on her way back to Paris.

Miss Morgan reported by telephone that one ambulance of the American volunteers organization cooperating with her service had been captured by the Germans with its wounded occupants.

Louis Wehrley, of Berne, Ind., the driver, escaped. Another American ambulance driver, Lawrence A. Jump, of Nantucket, Mass., who was attached to the French army, was reported missing after his vehicle had been shelled by German artillery.

Miss Morgan's committee advised its Paris headquarters that the unit had been bombed repeatedly while removing civilians from the northern French Ardennes department.

Its 10 ambulances and 20 automobiles were forced to take cover in woods to escape Nazi air attacks, she said, and returned to a village in the Aisne department when the planes made it impossible for them to continue their work.

The Battle Monuments Commission supervising American World War cemeteries in France, meanwhile, ordered its civilian personnel to leave areas threatened by German bombings.

French officials said the American Meuse-Argonne Cemetery at Romagne was bombed yesterday.

Eight new drivers arrived in Paris from the United States today preparatory to going on active duty with the French army. Another 20 are en route, ambulance officials said. (Here 25 words were censored.)

Miss Morgan helped the needy during the World War with her American Committee for Devastated France and, shortly after the outbreak of the current conflict, she announced the creation of The American Friends of France for the same work.

Greece Reinforces Frontier Facing Italian-Held Albania

Faulty Communications Obscure Full Meaning of Troop Movements; Britain Reported Seeking Naval Bases on Islands

By the Associated Press

Athens, May 16.—Greece poured troop reinforcements today into her mountainous frontier region facing Italian-occupied Albania, across the Adriatic from the heel of the Italian boot.

[Apparently the Greeks were feeling the pinch of Allied and Italian rivalry for strategic position in the eastern Mediterranean. However, insecurity of communications from Athens, by way of Budapest, the channel of this dispatch, and perhaps Greek censorship obscured the full meaning of the troop movements.

[The telephone connection from Athens to Budapest was broken in the middle of the dispatch.]

It was reported anew, without confirmation, that Great Britain was pressing Greece for permission to establish naval bases on Greek islands.

The British-French battle fleet based at Alexandria, Egypt, had put to sea for "scheduled maneuvers," and this caused new uneasiness among the Greeks.

Col. Papademas, undersecretary of war and outranked only by Premier Gen. John Metaxas as head of Greece's armed forces, arrived at the frontier rgeion of Yanina to take personal charge of general preparedness measures. The Yanina district on the Greek mainland is flanked at sea by the Greek island of Corfu, at the neck of the Adriatic, the Oteranto Strait.

Belgians Make Exodus DeLuxe From Brussels

Refugees Well Dressed, Had Plenty of Food, Says Eye Witness

By Robert Okin
Associated Press Staff Writer

Paris, May 16.—I arrived in Paris tonight from Brussels, after 30 hours on the road with Belgian refugees, who later were joined on the highways by Frenchmen cleared out of the menaced areas of northern France.

When I left Brussels at yesterday the government still was in the capital (nine words censored).

But the city had a dead and deserted look.

Only the refugees and the people waiting near the banks for money gave life to what normally is a bustling business center.

Several times yesterday morning Brussels was bombed on the outskirts, putting out of commission the National radio system, which had been broadcasting continuously since the German invasion.

Telegraph facilities were suspended during Tuesday night. Railroad stations were packed with anxious refugees hoping for trains to take them out. (19 words censored.)

Discussing the Netherlands' capitulation that day a government official declared:

"We are going to fight on any line and every line, no matter if the government is destroyed."

Behind the front in Belgium was a mass of automobiles, bicycles, peasant carts, trucks and pedestrians struggling toward the French frontier.

It was obvious that many had been prepared for a long time to move out, and in many ways this was a "de luxe" migration.

Many refugees were well dressed for the trip. Since the war was but five days old, there was plenty of food. British soldiers directed traffic.

With them went tens of thousands of boys and men, between the ages of 16 and 35, who were ordered by the government to leave . . . (Here eight words were censored.) (During the World War able-bodied Belgians were enrolled by the Germans into labor battalions.)

New Steel Issue Sells Quickly

New York, May 16 (AP).—Sale of all but $3,140,000 of $75,000,000 of serial debentures of United States Steel Corporation in the face of war-unsettled capital markets, was reported late today by the syndicate underwriting the issue. Spokesman for the syndicate, headed by Morgan Stanley & Co., said it was expected the remainder would be disposed of shortly.

Wild Cargo Sent Home by Dr. Mann Due in U. S. Today

A shipload of exotic wild beasts, some bound for National Zoological Park here and the remainder for the World's Fair, will arrive in Boston this morning.

The Smithsonian Institution announced that the steamer West Kebar is scheduled to dock with the first shipment of animals collected in Liberia by the Smithsonian-Firestone expedition, led by Dr. William M. Mann.

Animals placed aboard the West Kebar before she sailed, and which Washington officials hope survived the rough voyage, included a pygmy hippopotamus, at least one monkey-eating eagle a giant anteater, chimpanzees, water civets, a potto and dozens of strange birds, rodents and other specimens.

Station PDS Presents Violin Quartet

The violin quartet consists of Mrs. Phylis Spothelf, Miss Iris Parrish, Mrs. Norma Coombs and Miss Ann Pearson. These young ladies are all from Utah. The quartet has played for concerts, recitals, in church, at weddings and receptions. They will broadcast over station WMAL this morning on the PDS program.

"Station PDS Presents," broadcast by Lee Everett from the Peoples Drug Stores studio, Eleventh and G streets northwest, is presented each week-day morning from 7:30 to 8:30 over Station WMAL by Peoples Drug Stores in cooperation with The Washington Post. Anyone over 18 years old may participate in the audition at 7:30 p. m. Tuesdays at the N. B. C. Studios. Performers are paid $5 for their appearance on this program.

To Aid Tax Returns

Harry K. Green, Arlington commissioner of revenue, announced yesterday his deputies will be at the Arlington firehouse, on South Edgewood street tonight from 7 to 9 o'clock to assist taxpayers who have not filed 1940 personal property and State income returns.

MOONLITE AND ISHAM! No. 1 skipper of the good ship Potomac's moonlight cruises and "Parade of Famous Name Bands" will be Isham Jones starting tomorrow night. Maestro Jones' name is a synonym for the best in rhythm and we have the word of the S. S. Potomac management that he and his band will be succeeded by equally notable swing units at intervals throughout the summer. This evening the dancing aboard the Potomac will be piloted by that bouncing Washington favorite, Tiny Meeker and his orchestra.

O'Donnell's Farms will open between June 1 and 10. Diversion, now being selected, will be on the lighter side.

SKY COOLING is the comfort recipe on the Edenlike Washington Roof. We saw Supreme Court Justice Murphy enjoying the breeze up there on the first hot afternoon. As if the breezes weren't enough there's a water cooling system that drips over the awning like a tropical shower. Music by the Pedro de Leon group who know the popular tunes of both Manhattan and Mexico City. Songs by lovely Linda Garcia. And the view is marvelous.

Earline King, the Neptune Room's Carolina soprano, will star in a recital at the Helen Turley School of Voice next Sunday. She'll sing "Il Bacio," an aria from "Carmen," "Depuis le Jour" from "Louise" and other nightingale numbers.

"PLAYMATES" DISSECTED. Mayfair's Lyle Smith says that the melody of "Playmates" is essentially that of the ole "Rubber Dolly," with side resemblances to "Aloha" and "Red Wing." To prove his case he's going to blend all these melodies on his new marimba and defy youse all to tell where one begins and another leaves off. P. S.: Mayfair's softball team set back Paul Kain's Glen Echoites to the tune of 11-8 the other morning. But what's this rumor we hear about "ringers" on the night spot softball circuit?

TROIKA'S CLIMATE CHANGE. Stepping from the hot street into the air-cooled Troika is like taking a leap from Key West to Cape Cod. Makes you feel like a sun-smitten tulip that's just been placed in fresh, cool water. But this springtime coolness doesn't go for the flaming Russian revue and the sizzling beef Strogonoff. And to think that Troika closes in just eight days! Eight chances more to enjoy Yasha's dagger dancing, Lee Kerry's songs, Sasha Lukas' magic violin and to find out from Leo if your good star is rising. Two chances more for Saturday luncheons a la Russe. Only one chance more for Saturday dinner at Troika after an afternoon's drive.

Peter Macias' Lounge Riviera orchestra is playing all the tunes "Higher and Higher." Verra elegantly, too . . . And Ray Harts' Diplomats are airing the hit numbers from "Buck Benny Rides Again."

WONDERFUL CLOTHES. Those dazzling costumes worn by Doraine and Ellis at the Shoreham are created by Designer Elsa who happens to be Doraine's mother. Doraine's gowns are encrusted with spangles and rich embroidery and one of her confections now in the making will have 100 yards of white lace ruffling on the skirt. Nor is Ellis far behind. His hussar uniforms are brilliant enough for a Balkan prince . . . Ideal summer evening gowns on view include Helen Myers' (Carlton cocktail lounge) white eyelet pique with black velvet accents, Loraine Roberts' (Robin Hood) ciel blue lace with bolero and white beads, Eileen George's (Anchor Room) white pleated crepe with black braiding on the bodice.

There's a great flutter of pretty canaries auditioning in the Rainbow Room. But it's far from certain what will come of it all. Meantime there's plenty of fine vocalizing by Tenor Russ Cullen who's just joined the band and Lew Berman, Rainbow's specialist in sockeroo ditties.

NIGHT TIME WARBLING. Casino Royal's Huey Liang is singing "In the Garden of My Heart" this week. It was written by his old friend, Ernest Ball, composer of "Mother Machree" and many other great hits . . . Al Dary and his Rhythm Boys, of the Cafe Caprice, are pleasing the customers with giggle-sprinkled numbers. One of the best is about the steno who vacationed in the Catskills . . . Jack Schaeffer, the new trumpeting troubadour of the Flagship, mixes jigs with his jive balladeering . . . All the members of Angelo Di Bella's band, at the Lido, join in conga choruses. It's real jungle rhythm . . . Kenny White, vocalist at the Nightingale, gives that expert, streamlined finish to all the new numbers . . . And you'll have great fun listening to Lee Mason's swingaroo singing tonight at River Bend. It's "Swing Night," y'know, and Lee will go completely ickie.

The Harrington Tavern's cooling system is geared to perfection. Its perfect comfort will make you think you're back in that first balmy day in April.

The Federal Diary

Young Lawyers Write Civil Service Book

501-Page Report Gives Answers to Problems Handled in 10 Years

By Edward Ryan
Post Staff Writer

Two young attorneys, who have been up to their ears in civil service problems for ten years, have written a 501-page report of what they found. Their book, "Your Federal Civil Service," is out today.

The authors, both in their thirties and both employes of the Civil Service Commission, are James C. O'Brien, chairman of the board of oral examinations, and promotions officer, and Philip P. Marenberg, appeals examiner.

They wrote the book for the same reason they had their names taken out of the local telephone directory. They grew mildly fed up with answering questions about the intricacies of civil service at all hours of the day and night.

14 Months at Job

They went on cheerfully answering them in the daytime, but decided to spend their nights getting the answers down on paper. They spent 14 months at the job.

Each of the authors is a healthy lesson in the merit system. Both entered the commission as $1,440 clerks 10 years ago. Both went to night school: O'Brien to the Georgetown Foreign Service School and Columbus University Law School; Marenberg to the Georgetown Law School. Their equipment for writing the book came in four years of working together on the Board of Appeals and Review, a spot where they were brought into touch with every phase of the commission's work.

Their story runs its detailed course without criticizing the commission, or the system it operates. The authors show a liking, and high respect for both. They liked the system so well that they thought more people would like to learn about it. The job they took was to whip from the 57-year accumulation of rules, legal precedent, habits which control the merit system an answer to this question:

"What is it that opens the way to a Government job?"

Wins Approval

Their answer brought approval from presidents of three major Federal employe unions, Luther C. Steward, of the N. F. F. E.; James B. Burns, of the A. F. G. E., and Jacob Baker, U. F. W. A., and members of Congress. Former Civil Service Commissioner Samuel Ordway, jr., prefaced their story with this boost:

"Thousands of citizens contest annually for 40,000 of the best jobs in America. That number of Federal Civil Service vacancies is filled every year. Yet there has been available to prospective contestants no thorough play-by-play description of a United States civil service contest. Here, at last, is a clear, frank and authentic description of each step in the process of the Federal merit system selection."

While most of their space has been given to telling those on the outside how to get into Federal jobs, the authors have spent chapters on questions close to employes and executives already in the service.

Their four-part study of how a person goes from being eligible for a job to actually holding a job, the certification process, gives sidelights on the administrator's chance of sliding through the rules to hire the man he wants. The chances are low, the authors report, and for every attempted dodge they tell how the commission has a defense.

For employes curious about what happens to the 3½ per cent cut from every pay check, there is a chapter on the retirement system, telling where the money goes, and how much the employe will get in the end.

Through half a dozen chapters they describe the civil service examination, with exact warnings on what candidates for jobs can do and cannot do, with reasons for such rules as:

Getting applications for examinations to the commission on time is "not a matter of preference, it is an absolute requirement."

"Tell the Truth"

Tell the truth in applications for exams—the commission's well-oiled investigative machinery will get the facts sooner or later.

All the questions on an application blank must be answered.

The authors toss their only severe attacks at two institutions—politicians who promise Government jobs for a price, and the so called civil-service schools, which do the same thing. The latter, the authors make clear, do not include the reputable schools and colleges which prepare candidates for examinations and jobs.

By agreement with the commission, the authors have turned over profits from the book to the Civil Service Reform League.

Circus Is Here; New Acts Thrill Thousands

The circus is here.

Or, as P. T. Barnum might have put it, the combined aggregations of Ringling Bros. & Barnum & Bailey invaded Washington yesterday, respendent with the grandeur of its chromogenous atmosphere.

Night and matinee performances, attended by thousands, opened a three-day stand at the show grounds, Twenty-first and C streets northeast.

The premiere marked the Washington debut of Alfred Court and his three mixed groups of performing bears, lions, tigers, leopards and dogs, this season's headline act.

Other new features included the colorful opening spectacle, "The Return of Marco Polo," in which 2,000 performers and animals appear (statistics by courtesy of Press Agents Frank Braden and Beverly Kelly); Roberto de Vasconcellos, Portuguese equestrian and former bullfighter; Elly Ardelty, "European queen of the flying trapeze," and Albert Powell, contortionistic aerialist well known to circusgoers of Paris, London, Berlin, Madrid and Brussels—in other years.

Among the more familiar faces again with the big show this season are the riding Christianis; Hubert Castle, tight wire specialist; the Yacopis, springboard somersaulters; the Great Arturo, "wizard of the high wire," the indispensable Flying Concellos, featuring Antoinette; and numerous others.

The first of the four train sections arrived from Baltimore shortly before daybreak.

Early rising circus fans who were on hand as greeters included Melvin D. Hildreth, lawyer; Fred G. Orsinger, Commerce Aquarium director; Drew Pearson, columnist, and hundreds of just plain, ordinary folk.

The show goes on at 2:15 and 8:15 p. m. today and tomorrow, doors opening an hour earlier.

FALSE TEETH That Loosen Need Not Embarrass

Many wearers of false teeth have suffered real embarrassment because their plate dropped, slipped or wobbled at just the wrong time. Do not live in fear of this happening to you. Just sprinkle a little FASTEETH, the alkaline (non-acid) powder, on your plates. Holds false teeth more firmly, so they feel more comfortable. Does not sour. Checks "plate odor" (denture breath). Get FASTEETH at any drug store. Adv.

Jones-Wheeler Bill Would Drive Private Agencies Out of Farm Loan Field, Says Davis

By Hedley Donovan
Post Staff Writer

Chester C. Davis, vice chairman of the Federal Reserve System, asserted yesterday that the Jones-Wheeler farm credit bill would drive private lending agencies out of the farm loan field and imperial the country's entire commercial banking system.

Private lending agencies could not continue to lend on farm mortgages "in competition with all that appears to be promised" in the Jones-Wheeler bill, Davis told a Senate Banking Subcommittee.

With a "Government credit monopoly" established in one field, he said principles underlying the pending legislation might be extended throughout the Nation's economic life.

"If the principle is adopted and extended," he said, "then the private commercial banking system would tend to become a thing of the past."

Davis warned that the United States faces "periods of strain in which the stamina of our institutions will be severely tested."

The country will need strong credit and banking institutions to weather this period, he said, and cannot afford to indorse a principle which could "seriously weaken and impair those institutions."

Senator Miller (Democrat), of Arkansas, chairman of the subcommittee considering the Jones-Wheeler bill, said last night the measure must be "extensively revised."

The legislation, as originally drafted, provides for a reduction of farm loan interest rates from 3½ and 4 per cent to 3 per cent, Government guarantee of the Land Bank bonds and automatic scale-down of mortgages whenever the borrower can show his indebtedness exceeds the productive value of his land.

The bill also would forbid deficiency judgments against Land Bank borrowers and end the arrangement by which borrowers take 5 per cent of their loans in Land Bank capital stock.

Senator Miller expressed fears that removal of the 5 per cent requirement would strip the farm credit system of its cooperative character.

Foreclosure proceedings and deficiency judgments have often been "abused," the Arkansas legislator said, but he indicated his belief that the remedy proposed in the Jones-Wheeler bill is too sweeping.

Miller suggested that interest rates be based on the cost to the Government of borrowing money plus a safe margin for administrative expenses and reserves against possible losses. This formuala would be a substitute for the provision of the bill fixing rates at a flat 3 per cent, he said.

Meanwhile it was indicated that the House Agriculture Committee, which began hearings on the Jones-Wheeler bill more than two months ago, will resume consideration of a modified version of the measure next week.

Several controversial provisions of the first bill are understood to have been eliminated in the new draft which is to be placed before the committee. One committee member, however, said last night that it is "very doubtful" if any farm credit legislation will be reported out at the present session of Congress.

Davis told the Senate subcommittee the Federal farm credit system should give farmers access to credit with long-term amortization, "at a rate determined by the cost of money in the broadest money markets, plus administration costs, plus reasonable reserves.

"Thus the Federal Land banks should be not only a dependable source of low-cost credit," he said, "but pacemakers for other lending agencies which must compete in cost and service if they are to remain in the field.

"If private leaders do meet these terms, they can continue to function alongside the Federal agency, putting private savings to work without the necessity of siphoning them all into the Government and retailing them out through Government agencies," he stated.

Other witnesses who testified against the bill before the subcommittee were Albert S. Goss, former Land Bank commissioner, and E. S. Mayer, of the National Wool Growers Association.

Two-Edged Sword

This week, for almost the first time since the war began, Germany has had a taste of the bitter medicine her air force has administered in such lethal doses to the civil populations of Poland, Norway, the Netherlands and Belgium.

It is not yet clear what results were produced by the British bombing operations carried out on Wednesday against what are described as "enemy road and rail communications" east of the Rhine. It is nonetheless significant that the raids were on a scale never before attempted by the Royal Air Force. Evidently, despite the enormous German pressure against the lines in Belgium and Northern France, the Allies are not limiting their air activity to purely defensive measures.

What is equally important, these raids have resulted in carrying the war into Germany and the effect which they will have on German morale will be worth watching.

So far there has been no indication of any weakening of that morale. The German people greeted the war without enthusiasm. It was not of their making. But their spirits have been buoyed up and a definite optimism aroused by a hope of speedy victory which has grown considerably during recent days.

Should there be any real slackening in the German drive, however, and should the present fluid fronts be crystallized into another war of position, German morale might be seriously affected by Allied air-raids. For they will serve as effective counter-propaganda to the Nazi claims of invincibility of the German air force and air defenses and to the carefully developed German belief in the invulnerability of the Third Reich.

In the meantime these raids constitute a useful reminder to Hitler that the present proximity of German air bases to England is matched by the proximity of French air bases to the great industrial centers of the Ruhr and Rhineland.

The Relief Budget

With huge additions to expenditures made necessary by national defense needs, it is more imperative than ever that Congress exercise restraint in other directions.

The debate in the House on the relief appropriation will be followed closely for indication as to whether that body is disposed to give freer rein to spending proclivities. Certainly the start is inauspicious. For the Appropriations Committee has recommended that the President be given authority to spend in eight months the entire sum of $975,000,000 originally intended to last the WPA for a year.

The voluminous report of a special investigating committee, which is filled with charges that WPA funds have been dissipated and that official "misdeeds" run all the way from "minor abuses" to "major offenses," should hasten changes in the relief organization long overdue.

Of course, as in the past, it will be argued that abuses are being suppressed and that hereafter relief administration will be better. But under the best of conditions the present centralized work-relief system is extremely costly in relation to the number of persons served. And Col. Harrington himself, in emphasizing the high degree of current unemployment, in effect testifies to the inability of the WPA to provide adequate relief for the unemployed.

With an expanded defense program in prospect, adding to an already large anticipated deficit, we cannot afford to permit our absorption in international affairs to obscure the menace to financial solvency arising from unbridled spending.

One-Pie Pumpkin

Pursuing its peaceful endeavors through unhurrying generations of plant life, the Agriculture Department has developed a product which is worthy of display beside the icebox watermelon and the apartment turkey. Now we have the one-pie pumpkin.

The Early Cheyenne, grown by the field station at Cheyenne, Wyo., is 2 to 4 inches long and 5 to 7 inches in diameter—a mere midget among pumpkins. Bureau of Plant Industry workers say it tastes as good and keeps as well as its parent variety, the New England pie.

At first consideration it seems ironical that Nature, for so long encouraged to make everything as big as possible, should be constrained to manufacture miniatures. Modern conditions, however, have altered needs and desires. Too much of anything may be a liability, as the dinosaurs found out.

Householders and particularly apartment dwellers will, no doubt, welcome the pint-size pumpkin. It saves space, but, more important, will be easier on the conscience of thrifty wives, who for years have grieved over throwing away all that perfectly good food.

Even with all these advantages, however, the Early Cheyenne will not displace the large pumpkin completely. Around Hallowe'en America's youngsters will continue to clamor for the old-fashioned variety, and the bigger the better.

Toughness Of Fiber

It would have been better if President Roosevelt's special message on defense needs, as delivered yesterday, had been presented to Congress long ago. Every point which he now makes regarding the susceptibility of the United States to attack was equally true last September. And the fact was well realized by Mr. Roosevelt, who in his radio speech at the outbreak of this war pointed out that the "peace of all countries everywhere is in danger."

The President's many public references to the importance of preparedness, in addresses during the past two or three years, have demonstrated his full awareness of the issues which he raised yesterday. But, presumably because of budgetary problems and public indifference to defense needs, he has, heretofore, not followed through. The support which will now be accorded him indicates that he might have given a stronger lead earlier.

But Mr. Roosevelt can scarcely be blamed for waiting until Congress itself could see the need. Under the incredibly short-sighted leadership of Senators like Nye and Hiram Johnson the country has been lulled into a false complacency from which the rude awakening is only now at hand. Just a few months ago those who manufactured the weapons we now eagerly seek were being condemned as "merchants of death." As recently it was said that even moral support for the hard-pressed French and British would prove "the road to war" for the United States. Even today we have on the statute books legislation which rules that no distinction whatsoever shall be made between the German aggressor on the one hand and such innocent victims as Norway and Holland on the other.

The President has opposed this trend, though perhaps with insufficient vigor. Now that public opinion is at last waking to realities he must endeavor to make up for the precious time which has been lost.

"This Nation," Mr. Roosevelt said yesterday, "requires a toughness of moral and physical fiber." Such toughness has not been apparent in the ostrich inclination which has led many to believe that Americans could live forever in a fool's paradise of somnolent ease. It has not been apparent in the attitude of an Administration which knew the dangers now revealed, but felt it politically inadvisable to tell the Nyes in the Senate, or the Hamilton Fishes in the House, how fatally dangerous their line of baloney would prove to be.

"Toughness of fiber" is far from being achieved. It may well involve an immediate reorganization of the Cabinet, promotions and demotions in administrative posts, plans for introducing compulsory military service and otherwise proving the "indomitable will" of which the President emphasizes the need. So far the national will, as Hitler fully realizes, has been not tough but openly defeatist. To change its course will require major changes in policy, and major changes in personnel.

Effective Spending, Too

Adequate national defense has become a watchword for the United States. Appropriation of funds for that purpose is likely to encounter very little, if any, opposition. It is all the more important, therefore, to insure the effective use of this money.

The voting of funds to strengthen the Army and Navy is the easiest part of the task of insuring the United States against possible attack. It is the way in which this money is spent that will determine the efficacy of the program which the President has launched.

In his memorable address to Congress yesterday President Roosevelt properly rebuked those who talk loosely about funds being wasted by the Army and Navy. There seems to be little evidence to support Senator Clark's charge that defense funds have been "poured down a rat hole." Yet it would be very dangerous to turn aside all criticism of spending for defense purposes on the ground that it is biased or uninformed.

One sweeping indictment of our armed forces has come from Maj. Gen. William N. Haskell, commanding officer of the New York National Guard. He finds the Army and the National Guard "woefully inadequate" in training as well as equipment. Little time has been devoted, he says, to training of National Guardsmen in fundamentals. He describes the situation of the guard in New York as "sickening."

Undoubtedly many of these deficiencies will be overcome by the defense program submitted to Congress yesterday. But one of the improvements suggested by Gen. Haskell is: "Stop the expensive maintenance of useless Army posts throughout the country, and take political interference with Army planning and the pork barrel out of national defense."

When Congress grants the funds requested by the President it will have a second heavy responsibility to make certain that they will be spent effectively for the national security.

The Search For Truth

Dr. Albert Einstein's statement that attempts to explain the atom and the universe by a single scientific formula have thus far failed is in keeping with the pessimism of the hour. A year ago he was more hopeful. Indeed, at that time the renowned mathematician was reported to have discovered a unifying concept of the universe.

Apparently his theory has failed to check with experimental facts. Dr Einstein told the American Scientific Congress: "For the time being we have to admit that we do not possess any general theoretical basis for physics which can be regarded as its logical foundation. The field theory [which attempted to explain the universe and the atom in similar terms] has failed in the atomic sphere. . . . It is extremely difficult to find out what the equations contain, and it is very doubtful if what they contain is true."

Physicists have offered a logical explanation of the atom. They also have been able to explain the universe made up of atoms, but by a different theory. At present they find it impossible to coordinate these two concepts. Yet Dr. Einstein "cannot believe that . . . we must accept the view that events in nature are analogous to a game of chance." So the search for a unifying theory will go forward.

There is a large element of human egotism in the conclusion of some scientists that the universe must be a chaotic affair because they cannot harmonize their views of the atom with their views of the cosmos. It is possible, of course, that nature knows no fundamental law governing atoms and stars, matter and energy, electricity and magnetism, time and space. But it is also likely that something is lacking in either or both of the diverse theories which scientists find it impossible to fit together.

The task of science, according to Dr. Einstein, is "to make the chaotic diversity of our sense-experience correspond to a logical uniform system of thought." At the moment science appears to be far from attaining that goal. This fact, however, is not in itself profoundly discouraging. Every man, as Dr. Einstein pointed out, "may draft comfort from Lessing's fine saying, that the search for truth is more precious than its possession."

For the moment the great issue before the world is whether the search for truth, whether for its own sake or for the results it produces, shall be permitted to go forward.

Armageddon

The great struggle now raging in Belgium and along the Franco-German border is not one battle but a number of more or less related engagements. It is being fought not along one continuous front, but at various points along a far-flung line.

This line at present runs from the Dutch province of Zeeland, the last remaining stretch of unconquered territory in the Netherlands, and crosses the heavily fortified Albert Canal, overrun in the first German onslaught, just east of Antwerp. Thence it runs south through Louvain, where British troops yesterday were more than holding their own. From that once lovely university town the line continues south to the fortress of Namur and on to an undetermined point south of Sedan, which the Germans captured three days ago, and where there is obviously the greatest present danger of a break.

Along this line the Allied and German armies are locked in fearful combat. The immediate objective of German strategy seems to be to break through to Paris, presumably through the breach already opened near Sedan. If that is achieved the development would flank and isolate the Maginot Line and divide the Allied armies. This defense position is further endangered by the possibility of a turning effort through Switzerland, from the south, though such a move would probably be contingent on Italian entrance into the war.

The fact that the German armies have penetrated the so-called Little Maginot Line suggests that the German high command is intent on achieving the defeat of France in one tremendous drive. The next few days will tell whether Germany has the force to carry out this design.

There is undoubtedly every reason to believe that Hitler will continue to throw everything into the struggle. For if the German armies are held up this time the promise of victory which looms so temptingly ahead will vanish for the Nazis as rapidly as it came.

We should be thankful that our friends don't understand us anything like as well as our enemies do.

Still, if we didn't have anything to worry about, we'd be bored stiff.

Likes Roundup

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As a lazy newspaper reader—and what newspaper reader isn't lazy—I found "The War Today" feature on page 1 of The Post for May 12 very helpful in getting a clear picture of war developments.

Detailed stories of separate events are fine, but for anyone who doesn't have the opportunity to read all of them, they too often leave one with a distorted picture until an overall story or a radio commentator gives some indication of what all the developments mean, how much weight can be attached to each report, and just what is the general trend of everything that is happening.

I hope you will make "The War Today" a regular feature.

Keeping Out

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Never before has a campaign pledge won such widespread, almost universal recognition as that most alluring pledge adopted by almost every candidate for President and Congress, Democrat and Republican alike—"Keep America Out of War." "America can, must and shall be kept out of war."

"But how? Ah, there's the rub." The apostles of appeasement say, "Give up our rights abroad." But with the recent destruction of Norway and the invasion of Belgium and Holland, and England and France sorely oppressed, the people themselves are becoming suspicious of this all-alluring pledge. They are beginning to ask: "Is not this pledge in its essence the doctrine of appeasement—the same doctrine with which the greatest apostle of appeasement lulled England to false security, to the brink of disaster and himself to ruin?

Bullies and dictators cannot be appeased by the surrender of our rights abroad—such surrender but whets their impudent demands. They know no language but force.

Candidates, you have mistaken the courage and intelligence of the American people. They are not a craven crowd, vainly seeking peace through the sacrifice of their rights at home or abroad. Your pledge will not serve you even for the campaign. Adopt a pledge upon which you can stand during the campaign and, when the campaign is over, let it be not "Keep America Out of War," but "Keep War Out of America." Stop the war from reaching America by helping our Allies before it is too late, with our money, our planes, our ships, our credit and, if necessary, with our men, and in the meantime strengthen our Army, our Navy and our air force without stint.

That will "keep war out of America;" that will stop war before it reaches America.

The New Cabinet

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In re your editorial on the Churchill cabinet. I think Churchill missed the "bus" when he failed to make a place in his cabinet for that outstandingly virile statesman, Lord Craigavon, the autocrat of the government of north east Ireland. When it comes to the destruction of the liberties of minorities, Hitler is merely a glamour boy in short pants compared with Craigavon. George Creel in his "Ireland's Fight For Freedom" says that Craigavon aided and abetted by a group of English Tories, defied the whole power of the British Empire in the Carson rebellion. Craigavon, Carson et al made the Asquith government look like a cipher whose rim was erased. The world is on the brink of chaos. Why, therefore, should Churchill leave in obscurity a man so puissantly great as Craigavon?

As American Citizens

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Another year of law making rolls by for the Seventy-sixth Congress which adjourns on June 1, and another year of "taxation" without representation" rolls by for the citizens of Washington, and still no effort on the part of the great Seventy-sixth Congress has been made to bring to the citizens of the District of Columbia, the liberties of a true American Democratic government. Outside of a few deliverers of justice in Congress like Senator Thomas, of Nevada, and Representative Marcantonio, of New York, I doubt if a bill to free us from this condition has been given any serious consideration.

When the relief situation grew dark a few months ago and Commissioner Allen, of New York, resigned office, the elects of the States placed in the Commissioner's job Russell Young, one of Washington's own citizens, but our proposition still holds its original form as Abraham Lincoln said: "A government of the people, by the people and for the people." We really exist in a state of emergency at all times, because we are at the mercy of those unbalanced associates of Congressmen from the States at all times, who to our sorrow hold a large number of our public offices. It is not a good policy to trust these executives too far under this present unfair, dishonorable form of government. They may be just as unfair and dishonorable as this form of government is.

This is truly an example of an undemocratic government being forced upon people whose love for liberty will not permit them to accept. Not too many years ago our forefathers fought a revolution to free us from such evils. We, their children, the taxpayers of today, in our struggle for justice, beg for the liberties our forefathers shed their blood for, and as pure American citizens will shed ours for.

The Crime Of Lynching

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Reference is made to your editorial of May 10, "Southern Vindication," in which you oppose the antilynching bill on the basis of the fact that, "For the first time . . . 12 consecutive months have passed without a single lynching in any Southern State."

If the Southern States are as capable of preventing this atrocity as the editor would have us believe, can the editor please explain why it is that Southern groups oppose passage of this bill with such vigor? Surely there could be no "help or interference by the Federal Government," if the crime becomes nonexistent.

Do the Southern gentlemen fear that there is at least a slight possibility of their new 12-month record not being maintained? Can it be that occurrences such as that of some two months ago in nearby Maryland, where it was only a matter of chance weather conditions that a mother and her daughter were not lynched for the alleged crime of the former's husband, make even the most rabid foe of the bill cognizant of the fact that the failure of a crime to occur in a 12-month period is no certain indication that it will not recur in the near or distant future?

Or is it that there are among the antagonists of the bill those who fear that passage of such a measure and subsequent interpretation by more liberal courts, may curb the activity of their beloved Ku Klux Klan?

The Dining Car

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Even though not a daily feature in The Post, there's rarely interruption to the flow of soothing substance from the offerings of Columnist H. I. Phillips in "The Once Over." In our now almost entirely sordid world it is the way of a current of good cheer.

On May 7 ebullient Columnist Phillips aroused much and due enthusiasm for the continuing innovations of improved railroad passenger transportation, most recently manifest in fabrication of a super-gadgeted unit, which is a triple-decked sleeping car at night, an intriguing sort of sitting coach by day, and, withal, yet so practical that, says Mr. Phillips: "Nothing more than the appearance of the porter with a few mysterious motions is necessary to eliminate these seats and substitute the ground floor, mezzanine and terrace berths." What a production! But, then, Mr. Phillips chilled my enthusiasm with these subjoined statements; "And what the roads have done to the dining cars is nobody's business. They even have hostesses in 'em—she is the brunette who, when you enter all alone, holds up her index finger and asks 'One?'"

Why, utterly unlike Pullman's latest—of even 20 years ago—the "modern" dining car is yet gadgetless, and the hostess perhaps its sole innovation!

Ours is an age of gadgets. The "gadget" of the dining car is the dining car waiter, nevertheless; and he serves in that capacity as did his gran'pap. All "mysterious" about his "few motions" is the mystery of "how he does it?" Seventeen years out of active dining car work, after 17 years in it, I slipped into a dining car pantry for a drink of filtered water while a passenger en route and found a waiter hard-pressed and, to release another giving a hand, I opened his oysters—three orders (that is among his many tasks en route, as are, also, squeezing orange juice, untinning sardines, making salads, serving passengers in seats or berths six cars ahead).

Aside from all-steel construction, increased seatage, shift to frigidaire from ice boxes (in few instances), and embellishments—including the hostess, your modern dining car is of "the vintage of 1905." An attractive hostess can, however, arrest the gaze of a restless, speed-crazed generation and perhaps hold it that way until the laboring waiters can "grub 'em." Dining car service keeps apace of the times because the waiter is still strong, yet enduring.

A dining car superintendent recently begged his vice president-traffic manager to build no more dining cars without first consulting that superintendent on construction of the insides. He had just seen a competitor's "latest."

Kept Pitchin'

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Walter Johnson's campaign for Congress recalls over the decades a clarion-voiced declaration of principle and free advice from a bleacherite, who from his hot haven in the distant reaches cast his first vote for the Big Train.

"Mebbe you can't chalk up no wins for this bunch o' hams and cast-iron has-beens," yelped this bloke. "But keep pitchin' in there, Walter, and they'll be runnin' yah for Congress yet."

Seldom does a bleacherite's word have such fidelity. Was it prescience or was it words? Who will point the moral? J. WINSTEAD.

The Post Impressionist

Lucky Star

May in December is a pretty thought, but December in May is something else again. One is not given to sentiment when the fuel oil runs low and one has a cold in the head.

When April was shaking the raindrops from her silver galoshes and making ready to depart, I was courting pneumonia in my garden, a trowel in one hand and handkerchief tissues in the other. Looking through streaming eyes at my timid perennials, I found a sort of left-handed comfort in setting out pansy plants in full and radiant bloom.

Just as I uncovered an earthworm that took one look at my nose and instantly disappeared into the relatively germless bosom of Mother Earth, I heard a voice behind me—a disembodied voice, it seemed, since I had heard no footsteps. Turning, I looked from the ground up, and saw a pair of tennis shoes grow into honest ankles, and thence into a woman of middle age and middle height. I am not sure, but that impression lingers that several teeth were missing from the beaming smile.

"Workin' right hard, ain't you, honey? But I won't take a minute of your time."

I stood up, blew my nose, and followed her hand with my eyes as she reached into the depths of a paper shopping bag. She did not stop talking, but I lost track of her words except when an interrogation demanded an answer.

"When was I born?" I repeated after her. "I was born in August."

Her face lit up. "I knew it!" she cried in triumph. "I never had an August child turn me down yet. Something told me you were born under the sign of Virgo—I can spot 'em every time. Ain't it funny—to be psychic, I mean?"

By the sheer power of her will, she propelled me over to the house, where I recoiled with her at a particularly grimy window ledge. "My, my," she chuckled, "dirtier than I thought."

I tried to tell her that it was really the cat's fault, for the window was his means of egress and ingress. But it really didn't matter. She turned instead to a shameful series of smudges along the clapboards, reaching from north to south like a map of the Sierra Nevada. There was no use to say that they were the children's heelprints, made in climbing over the porch railings. August, apparently, was the month of listeners.

"See?" She dabbed into a quart jar filled with something that looked like cooked starch, and rubbed it briskly over a square foot of wall, which emerged as white as the driven snow. "Nothing in it to hurt the paint, or your hands, either." This last was a superb gesture of salesmanship, as the dried earth from around the pansies was caking about my fingernails.

"Twon't hurt your stummick, even," and as a practical demonstration she scooped out a spoonful and ate it with gusto, holding out the jar for me. For the first time in my life, I was thankful for a fit of sneezing.

"That's right. Be careful what you eat. August children always have indigestion. You do, don't you?" She looked at me so trustingly that I was almost ashamed to disappoint her. "Never mind," she encouraged, "you will. Just keep assafeitida on hand and take a little before you eat. It'll give you a lot of relief. See how nice this'll look when it's finished?" The cat leaped from behind us and landed on his clean window ledge, took a look around, saw something amiss, and jumped down again.

As far as I was concerned, the bargain was consummated. Anything potent enough to keep the cat off the window ledge was worth its quarter. The woman dropped the coin into her pocketbook and peered at me for a moment. I sniffled. "Umhum, weak eyes—you're an August child." I coughed, and her face lit up. "Lung trouble!" she exclaimed. "Well, good?by, dear. And do take care of yourself. I'm an August child, too, and we Virgoes have to stick together."

Late that afternoon, when my husband came home and saw me perched on the stepladder washing down the sides of the house, he stopped short in his tracks. "What are you up to," he demanded. "Do you have brain fever?"

"No—just lung trouble. And indigestion. I'm a Virgo." He backed away with a troubled look.

Saturday, while we were following the suburban custom of inspecting the neighbors' gardens, I heard a well remembered voice from behind a fence. I could see the tennis shoes and the hem of her skirt, but the rest was hidden by the blossoms of a young dogwood tree.

"May? Now you can beat it? I never had a May child turn me down yet. But you'll have to watch your health—indigestion, you know. I'm a Gemini myself."

"Let's take the assafetida money and buy some more pansies," I suggested.

Reply To Mr. Sullivan

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In saying risible things with solemn mien Duce Mussolini and Mark Sullivan have been running neck and neck. But I think Mr. Sullivan forged ahead when, in his column printed in The Post of May 14, deploring disunity and confusion in United States politics in the face of the present world menace he tacitly invites all and sundry to swallow their intransigeance and come over to his point of view.

Where could be found a simpler recipe for harmony and strength!

"The very advocacy of a third term is frankly based by many . . . on a class conflict, an appeal to one section of the people against another." If the majority "third-term" section would only yield to the minority "anti" section we would have perfect democracy.

And we never thought to think of it.

As Hitler has developed a technique for paralyzing Europe he has been following the pattern of certain forces in America which have successfully pursued a technique designed to paralyze representative government.

F. D. R. is needed more than ever—on both fronts!

Outblitzing A Blitzkrieg

By Ernest Lindley

THE HOLOCAUST in Europe has delivered a heavy blow in our country both to the penny-pinchers and to the soft-headed internationalists who thought that the world situation could be "ameliorated" by such antique instruments as the expression of indignation, the withdrawal of ambassadors, and the reduction of tariff barriers. It has made possible at last, it seems, a really strenuous effort to build up our naval and military power.

The war, which some have foreseen ever since the war of 1914-18, has come. The possibility that the British and French empires will be smashed, which has been vivid to some since the German reoccupation of the Rhineland in 1936, is now plainly to be seen. The outcome of the great struggle for the control of Europe and, as a corollary, for the control of Africa and part of Asia, cannot yet be forecast. Our preparations must be made swiftly, as they have been unceasingly, for the worst possible result. That always has been, and remains, the only sound policy for any nation, within its capacities, to pursue.

Potentially, we are the greatest military power in the world. Fortunately, we do not need to mobilize immediately our full potential power, or anything like it. We need to accelerate our preparations along certain specified lines and to make ready to mobilize our latent power when and if it becomes necessary.

THERE IS NO NEED for hysteria. There is need for prompt and sensible action. For hard-headed thinking and plain language the most recent report of the Senate Committee on Naval Affairs, under Senator Walsh, would be hard to surpass. I quote:

"The armies of Europe and Asia do not menace us. To be a menace they must be transported across the sea in ships. Airplanes based on the continents of Europe and Asia do not menace us. To seriously threaten our security, they must be conveyed across the sea and operated from bases in or near this hemisphere.

"The armed forces of no foreign nation or group of nations can seriously threaten our security if we make sure that we command the seas which separate us from all potential enemies."

This is the Navy viewpoint, to be sure. But who can challenge it? It is not challenged by our Army. It fits perfectly with the Army viewpoint, as it has been expressed by Brig. Gen. George V. Strong, assistant chief of staff in charge of war plans, and other responsible spokesmen.

General Strong said only two weeks ago:

"Under present conditions and in view of the present development of weapons, this hemisphere is safe from any aggression from abroad just as long as two conditions maintain:

"First, that the Panama Canal is open for the transit of the United States Fleet, and

"Second, that an aggressor from abroad has no bases in this hemisphere from which to operate."

TO ASSURE these conditions we need a great Navy, a great air force, and a small, highly-trained, powerfully-equipped, highly-mobile Army.

In the Walsh report there is no belittlement of the importance of air power. It specifically states that "no force, ashore or afloat, can afford under any circumstances to be without ample aircraft support."

To the Navy the improvement in aircraft means chiefly that the battleships which are the core of naval power must be protected vertically just as, since the development of the torpedo, they have had to be protected horizontally. The vertical defense consists not only of anti-aircraft guns, heavier deck armor, and the protection of parts that are now exposed, but of lighter aircraft.

Our top Navy men have been slow to give air power its full due, but in my experience during the last several years they have not ignored it. It was the Navy, incidentally, which first developed our secret bomb sight, which is supposed to enable our airplanes to bomb more accurately from higher altitudes than any other planes in the world.

The Walsh report emphasizes that if the British and French navies cannot retain command of the sea in and around the British Isles and the coast of France, against shore-based aircraft, our Navy cannot. The inference is simply that aircraft has extended greatly the reach of coastal defenses. That is to our advantage, if we make use of our immense potential capacity to produce planes and train pilots.

THE PRESIDENT is already being criticized in some quarters for failing to make more progress in developing our national defense, and especially for favoring the Navy over the Army, and for not appreciating the full value of air power. The record shows that he began building up our national defenses the first year he was in office, 1933. He began at the right point, with the Navy, our first line of defense. He has been ahead of Congress and public opinion, and in some respects he has been ahead of the armed services, almost consistently.

Since Munich, he has been urging a great air force. Do you remember the scorn that was heaped on Col. Louis Johnson, Assistant Secretary of War, in the fall of 1938, when he urged the trebling and quadrupling of our air force? In view of what has happened since, Johnson's recommendation now seems conservative.

The time now seems to have arrived when public support can be mustered for putting our land forces into first-class shape. But the need and the demand, it must be noted, are not for a great conscripted force, but for the small, highly trained, highly mobile, superbly equipped Army which our national defense has long envisioned: for the kind of Army which, with a great air force, can, as General Strong has put it, "outblitz the blitzkrieg."

Roosevelt Message

These are ominous days—days whose swift and shocking developments force every neutral nation to look to its defenses in the light of new factors. The brutal force of modern offensive war has been loosed in all its horror. New powers of destruction, incredibly swift and deadly, have been developed; and those who wield them are ruthless and daring. No old defense is so strong that it requires no further strengthening and no attack is so unlikely or impossible that it may be ignored.

Let us examine, without self-deception, the dangers which confront us. Let us measure our strength and our defense without self-delusion.

The clear fact is that the American people must recast their thinking about national protection.

Motorized armies can now sweep through enemy territories at the rate of 200 miles a day. Parachute troops are dropped from airplanes in large numbers behind enemy lines. Troops are landed from planes in open fields, on wide highways and at local civil airports.

We have seen the treacherous use of the "fifth column" by which persons supposed to be peaceful visitors were actually a part of an enemy unit of occupation. Lightning attacks, capable of destroying airplane factories and munition works hundreds of miles behind the lines, are part of the new technique of modern war.

The element of surprise which has ever been an important tactic in warfare has become the more dangerous because of the amazing speed with which modern equipment can reach and attack the enemy's country.

Our own vital interests are widespread. More than ever the protection of the whole American Hemisphere against invasion or control or domination by non-American nations has the united support of the 21 American Republics, including the United States. More than ever this protection calls for ready-at-hand weapons capable of great mobility because of the potential speed of modern attack.

The Atlantic and Pacific Oceans were reasonably adequate defensive barriers when fleets under sail could move at an average speed of 5 miles an hour. Even then by a sudden foray it was possible for an opponent actually to burn our National Capitol. Later, the oceans still gave strength to our defense when fleets and convoys propelled by steam could sail the oceans at 15 or 20 miles an hour.

But the new element—air navigation—steps up the speed of possible attack to 200 to 300 miles an hour.

Furthermore, it brings the new possibilities of the use of nearer bases from which an attack or attacks on the American continents could be made. From the fjords of Greenland it is four hours by air to Newfoundland; five hours to Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Quebec; and only six hours to New England.

The Azores are only 2,000 miles from parts of our Eastern seaboard, and if Bermuda fell into hostile hands it is a matter of less than three hours for modern bombers to reach our shores.

From a base in the outer West Indies, the coast of Florida could be reached in 200 minutes.

The islands off the west coast of Africa are only 1,500 miles from Brazil. Modern planes starting from the Cape Verde Islands can be over Brazil in seven hours.

And Para, Brazil, is but four flying hours to Caracas, Venezuela, and Venezuela but 2½ hours to Cuba and the Canal Zone; and Cuba and the Canal Zone are 2¼ hours to Tampico, Mexico; and Tampico is 2¼ hours to St. Louis, Kansas City and Omaha.

On the other side of the continent, Alaska, with a white population of only 30,000 people, is within four or five hours of flying distance to Vancouver, Seattle, Tacoma and Portland. The islands of the southern Pacific are not too far removed from the west coast of South America to prevent them from becoming bases of enormous strategic advantage to attacking forces.

Surely the developments of the past few weeks have made it clear to all of our citizens that the possibility of attack on vital American zones ought to make it essential that we have the physical, the ready ability to meet those attacks and to prevent them from reaching their objectives.

This means military implements—not on paper—which are ready and available to meet any lightning offensive against our American interest. It means also that facilities for production must be ready to turn out munitions and equipment at top speed.

We have had the lesson before us over and over again—nations that were not ready and were unable to get ready found themselves overrun by the enemy. So-called impregnable fortifications no longer exist. A defense which allows an enemy to consolidate his approach without hindrance will lose. A defense which makes no effective effort to destroy the lines of supplies and communications of the enemy will lose.

An effective defense by its very nature requires the equipment to attack an aggressor on his route before he can establish strong bases within the territory of American vital interests.

Loose talking and thinking on the part of some may give the false impression that our own Army and Navy are not first-rate, or that money has been wasted on them.

Nothing could be further from the truth.

In recent years the defensive power of our Army, Navy and Marine Corps has been very greatly improved.

The Navy is stronger today than at any time in the Nation's history. Today also a large program of new construction is well under way. Ship for ship, ours are equal to, or better than, the vessels of any foreign power.

The Army likewise is at its greatest peace-time strength. Its equipment in quality and quantity has been greatly increased and improved.

The National Guard and the reserve strength of the two services are better equipped and better prepared than during any other peace-time period.

On the other side of the picture we must visualize the outstanding fact that since the first day of September, 1939, every week that has passed has brought new lessons learned from actual combat on land and sea.

I cite examples. Where naval ships have operated without adequate protection by defending aircraft, their vulnerability to air attack has increased. All nations are hard at work studying the need of additional antiaircraft protection

Several months ago the use of a new type of magnetic mine made many unthinking people believe that all surface ships were doomed. Within a few weeks a successful defensive device against these mines was placed in operation; and it is a fact that the sinkings of merchant ships by torpedo, by mine or by airplane are definitely much lower than during the similar period in 1915.

Combat conditions have changed even more rapidly in the air. With the amazing progress in the design of planes and engines, the airplane of a year ago is out-of-date now. It is too slow, it is improperly protected, it is too weak in gun power.

In types of planes, we are not behind the other nations of the world. Many of the planes of the belligerent powers are at this moment not of the latest models. But one belligerent power not only has many more planes than all their opponents combined, but also appears to have a weekly production capacity at the moment that is far greater than that of the opponents.

From the point of view of our own defense, therefore, great additional production capacity is our principal air requisite.

For the permanent record, I ask the Congress not to take any action which would in any way hamper or delay the delivery of American-made planes to foreign nations which have ordered them, or seek to purchase more planes. That, from the point of view of our own national defense, would be extremely shortsighted.

During the past year American production capacity for war planes, including engines, has risen from approximately 6,000 planes a year to more than double that number, due in greater part to the placing of foreign orders.

Our immediate problem is to superimpose on this production capacity a greatly increased additional production capacity. I should like to see this Nation geared up to the ability to turn out at least 50,000 planes a year. Furthermore, I believe that this Nation should plan at this time a program that would provide us with 50,000 military and naval planes.

The ground forces of the Army require the immediate speeding up of last winter's program to procure equipment of all kinds, including motor transport and artillery, including antiaircraft guns and full ammunition supplies. It had been planned to spread these requirements over the next three or four years. We should fill them at once.

At this time I am asking the immediate appropriation by the Congress of a large sum of money for four primary purposes:

First, to procure the essential equipment of all kinds for a larger and thoroughly rounded-out Army;

Second, to replace or modernize all old Army and Navy equipment with the latest type of equipment;

Third, to increase production facilities for everything needed for the Army and Navy for national defense. We require the ability to turn out quickly infinitely greater supplies;

Fourth, to speed up to a 24-hour basis all existing Army and Navy contracts, and all new contracts to be awarded.

I ask for an immediate appropriation of $896,000,000, divided approximately as follows:

1. For the Army—$546,000,000.
2. For the Navy and Marine Corps—$250,000,000.
3. To the President to provide for emergencies affecting the national security and defense—$100,000,000.

In addition to the above sum, I ask for authorizations for the Army, Navy and Marine Corps to make contract obligations in the further sum of—$186,000,000.

And to the President an additional authorization to make contract obligations for—$100,000,000.

The total of authorizations is, therefore, $286,000,000.

It is my belief that a large part of the requested appropriation of $100,000,000, and the requested authorization of $100,000,000 to the President will be used principally for the increase of production of airplanes, antiaircraft guns, and the training of additional personnel for these weapons. This would be in addition to the direct estimates for these purposes in the other items requested.

The proposed details of the appropriations and authorizations asked for will be given to the committees of the Congress.

These estimates do not, of course, duplicate any item now in the pending War and Navy appropriation bills for the year 1941. Nor do they include supplemental or deficiency estimates which may become necessary by reason of pending legislation or shortage of funds under existing programs.

There are some who say that democracy cannot cope with the new techniques of government developed in recent years by a few countries—by a few countries which deny the freedoms which we maintain are essential to our democratic way of life. This I reject.

I know that our trained officers and men know more about fighting and the weapons and equipment needed for fighting than any of us laymen; and I have confidence in them.

I know that to cope with present dangers we must be strong in heart and hand; strong in our faith—strong in faith in our way of living.

I, too, pray for peace—that the ways of aggression and force may be banished from the earth—but I am determined to face the fact realistically that this Nation requires a toughness of moral and physical fiber. Those qualities, I am convinced, the American people hold to a high degree.

Our task is plain. The road we must take is clearly indicated. Our defense must be invulnerable, our security absolute. But our defense as it was yesterday, or even as it is today, does not provide security against potential developments and dangers of the future.

Defense cannot be static. Defense must grow and change from day to day. Defense must be dynamic and flexible, an expression of the vital forces of the Nation and of its resolute will to meet whatever challenge the future may hold. For these reasons, I need hardly assure you that after the adjournment of this session of the Congress, I will not hesitate to call the Congress into special session if at any time the situation of the national defense requires it. The Congress and the Chief Executive constitute a team where the defense of the land is concerned.

Our ideal, our objective is still peace—peace at home and peace abroad. Nevertheless, we stand ready not only to spend millions for defense but to give our service and even our lives for the maintenance of our American liberties.

Our security is not a matter of weapons alone, the arm that wields them must be strong, the eye that guides them clear, the will that directs them indomitable.

These are the characteristics of a free people, a people devoted to the institutions they themselves have built, a people willing to defend a way of life that is precious to them all, a people who put their faith in God.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

THE FEDERAL GRAND JURY in Chicago recently presented an indictment against George H. Meyers, business agent of the Chicago Glaziers' Union of the American Federation of Labor, and numerous other defendants. The other defendants include the Glass Contractors' Association, of the Chicago area, numerous firms in the association and a number of individuals.

This indictment is a typical Thurman Arnold bill, setting forth that the union and the employers conspired to maintain fixed prices for material and otherwise to restrain trade. It also is alleged that Meyers and two other officers of the union—Charles Pfeiffer, the president, and Max Glass, like Meyers, a business agent—accepted money from the association at various times. Leo Tierney, the special assistant to the United States Attorney General in charge of the case, estimates the total amount of the payments at $86,000, but reports that the returns are incomplete.

He contends that the payments were made at the rate of $1.50 per day for, but not to, each employed member of the union. There are 425 members, about half of whom are employed, the work being rotated, at a scale of $13.60 a day. The members pay dues of $100 per year and an initiation fee ranging from $1,000 to $1,500. It is Mr. Tierney's contention, based on inspection of the accounts of the union and of Meyers' own accounts, that the money received from the contractors did not go into the union treasury. If it be assumed that 200 members of the union were steadily employed five days a week the payments to the union officers would be about $300 a day, roughly $1,500 a week, or $78,000 a year. This condition is alleged to have continued for three years. Disposition of the union dues and fees was not investigated.

THE INVESTIGATION turned up some interesting material. It was discovered, for example, that the union had an employment fund which became inactive in 1932 but that Mr. Meyers nevertheless continued to check money into this fund and out of it. In fact, he checked money out faster than he checked money in, as will be seen presently. It was further discovered that he cashed checks from companies in the association made payable to himself. There are indications that Mr. Meyers' tastes, though perhaps coarse, are not humble.

There is a record of a check for $841 drawn on the union's unemployment fund on January 2, 1937, when he apparently was taking the sun in Miami, along with George Scalise and other criminal scum of the American Federation of Labor. This check was indorsed by B. Costello and the Biscayne Kennel Club of Miami. It was a rubber check, and it bounced. Nine days later Mr. Meyers bounced another check on the unemployment fund, this time for $1,080, cashed by a Mr. Maher, and on February 15, in Jacksonville, he bounced another rubber one, for $950, also drawn against the unemployment fund, which was indorsed by "Jacksonville Br., F. B. R. of Atlanta."

Although all these checks were protested, they may, of course, have been made good later. On March 15, Mr. Meyers cashed a good check, for $350, payable to himself, from the Hamilton Glass Co., one of the present defendants. The Biscayne Kennel Club took another chance in cashing this one.

THE NEXT FALL—on November 15, 1937, to be exact—Mr. Meyers appears to have been out helling around Chicago by night, for on that date he cashed another check to himself from the Hamilton Glass Co. The amount was $1,000. The circumstances may be imagined from the fact that it bears the indorsement of Mr. Joe Jacobson, a partner of Mr. Mike Fritzel in the operation of the famous night club or joint called Chez Paree, which also maintains a gambling room from time to time when conditions are right with the Kelly-Nash civilization. Last year the name of the dump was discovered in the customer accounts of a company dealing in crooked gambling tools.

Mr. Meyers maintains a farm at Valparaiso, Ind., where he sometimes gets away from the problems of the working stiff, which, naturally, are like to break the heart of a labor leader, and in a local Valparaiso bank his wife, Audrey Meyers, carries an account the deposits in which have maintained an average of $1,000 a month.

Mr. Meyers was fined $5,000 in the Federal court in February, 1929, for violation of the Sherman Act or racketeering, and the presumption is that the half-time working stiffs of the Glaziers' Union, the same whose unemployment fund was tapped for disbursements at the Biscayne Kennel Club, chipped in and paid the fine for their faithful servant. Mr. Meyers is about 65 years old, but is a snappy dresser and exceedingly fond of the good things of life.

Four-Alarm Fire

By Barnet Nover

THE GIGANTIC struggle that devastated Europe a quarter of a century ago is known in history as the World War. But in view of the possible spread of the present conflict the term may come to be regarded as a comparative overstatement.

Technically, there were 26 belligerents in the last war, and the list included nations from every continent. Actually, except for fighting in the German African colonies and a relatively minor struggle at Kiao-Chow, the war was limited to Europe.

In the case of 11 of the 26 belligerents participation was platonic, rather than military. That was true of such countries as Panama, Cuba, Liberia, China, Brazil, Guatemala, Nicaragua, Haiti and Honduras, which aligned themselves with the Allies out of sympathy and solidarity with the United States. That was equally true of China. Siam was another inactive belligerent, and so was Japan after Kiao-Chow had been taken.

LET'S MAKE no mistake about it. The present war has already spread far beyond its original limitations. It may very easily spread far beyond the confines of the European continent.

At the outset there were only four European combatants—Germany, France, the British Empire (including the Dominions) and Poland. The war has since spread to Denmark, Norway, the Netherlands and Belgium. Now there is not a single country in all of Europe which has any certainty of staying out. For that matter, there is no nation in the world, not excepting the republics of this hemisphere, which can afford to regard themselves as anything other than potential belligerents if not of this struggle then of the struggle which may follow the present period of wholesale bloodletting.

LET US EXAMINE the situation in all its grim potentialities.

The struggle in Belgium and along the Franco-Belgian border has reached a critical stage for the Allies. The Germans are proclaiming that they cannot be stopped, that victory is already in sight. No one can assume that events will not bear them out. But it would be absurd to accept the thesis that a German triumph is inevitable. The onrushing German armies can this time, as in 1914, be stopped. They may not be stopped where they are today. They may nevertheless be stopped at some other point.

But even if that happens, as every civilized human being must hope and pray it will happen, it may take some time before the implications of such a development will be fully realized. We know now that the first Battle of the Marne was the great turning point of the World War. It was not so clearly realized in September, 1914.

THIS POINT is important, particularly in gauging the possibility of Italy's entry into the struggle.

Mussolini cannot afford to wait, which explains the Fascist government's recent restlessness. But Italy cannot afford to enter the war one day sooner than is absolutely necessary to make certain the achievement of Italian aims. For if Italy becomes a belligerent and her participation does not lead to a speedy victory for the axis, Italy may be ruined before victory is achieved. Mussolini has always manifested a champagne taste on a beer pocketbook. War sets an extremely expensive table.

It would be much easier for the Duce to make up his mind if it were possible for him to carry out another Albanian adventure. But the indications are that the minute Italy moves the fat will be in the fire everywhere in the Balkans, everywhere in the Mediterranean. There is no way of limiting the war should it spread further.

That means that with Italy in the war, Yugoslavia and Greece and Turkey will be in the war. An Italian move would also probably mean Russian action against Rumania. It would involve Switzerland, for only through possession of the Swiss railroads could there be any truly effective liaison between the axis powers. It would also bring Egypt and the rest of North Africa into the war and whatever Gen. Franco might say about it, Spain, too, would probably become involved.

JAPAN AND CHINA have been at war for almost three years. Japan's substance is rapidly being used up. Nevertheless, the spread of the European conflict to the Mediterranean would undoubtedly give the more venturesome elements in the Island Empire the urge to carry out the threatened move against the Netherlands East Indies. Thus, the removal of the Italian keystone from what is left of the crumbling arch of peace of Europe might set off a new and far-reaching series of explosions.

The implications of present events and future possibilities for the free peoples of this hemisphere need not be elaborated upon. President Roosevelt has eloquently pointed them out in his latest message to Congress. Not to take into account the possibility that sooner or later the flood waters of aggression will reach this hemisphere is to be guilty of criminal shortsightedness.

A small fire can be put out by a child with a squirtgun. Even a sizable fire can be checked if the firefighters summoned to the scene act with vigor and dispatch. But if a fire gets big enough no dwelling within miles can consider itself safe.

The horrible happenings of these last days are in this particular proving a fearfully expensive lesson to American isolationists and all others who, like them, refused to face realities or sought to dispel them by chanting idiotic incantations containing such words as wide oceans . . . neutrality . . . not our quarrel . . . no difference between the belligerents . . . Versailles merchants of death . . . phoney war.

Men And Machines

By Dorothy Thompson

Paris, May 16.

THE MACHINE has neither blood to spill nor eyes to keep; it has no heart to break. Is it not a wonderful thing—a machine? It does not lie awake in the night and speculate why this and why that. It is not finicky about its food, except the proper ration of oil or coal it needs that it may work, but it does not taste the differences in apples nor yearn for beefsteak or for chocolate. It knows no anxiety, for itself or for its own kind. It does not think of the future nor remember the past. It obeys its masters and asks no questions. Its attitude is one of sublime indifference, perfect for its function. It has no interest in perfection. It dies without torment, to be melted again to make another machine.

Regard your work, oh man! Is what you produced not superior to yourself? If you tickle it it does not laugh; if you prick it it does not bleed; if you offend it it takes no revenge. It is conscienceless, tireless, precise.

THERE IS a hierarchy of machines. The master-machine is the machine tool, the machine that produces machines.

"Man is something that must be surpassed," said Nietzsche. Does not the machine tool surpass him? Should it not supplant him? Can man not drain himself of heart and blood and drill himself into the rhythms of the rod and the piston, breed into himself the indifferent hardness of steel, the indifferent harshness of emery, the indifferent brightness of aluminum?

The machine will conquer the world and rid it of that leftover of the past, that unclean, inefficient living and dying, uncertain of its function, that uniform, badly cast variant of the pattern—man.

"ENGLAND IS a commercial nation." Trading things—silks and copper, hemp and cocoa; goods for goods; cotton for coal; ideas for ideas.

"So were the men of Athens." "Who were the men of Athens?" "Traders and talkers."

Tomorrow belongs to the machine.

The French are 50 per cent peasant. They plant poplars to protect cabbages against the wind. They eat delicately a thousand foods of a hundred regions. They are given over to the love of books, of the theater, of quality materials and quality goods.

Tomorrow belongs to the machine.

"The most highly industrialized nation will win the next war, which will determine the pattern of human life for centuries."

Either men will win the war for the machine, or the machine will win the war for man.

The machines are coming across and coming over.

"They were thick over Belgium like flies. One whipped down where the children were playing football on the field and let out a hail of explosive bullets. Paul fell on his face. He got five of them. Do you want to see?"

Paul was 12 years old. He was laid out in the best parlor. His face looked amazed, not frightened.

"I guess they just had one round left. They were flying back home."

From a high altitude men look like insects crawling along on the earth.

"The bottoms of the planes simply opened and dumped the parachuters out. They were in Dutch uniforms and dressed as Protestant pastors, priests and even nuns. We could not tell who was one of us and who was one of them.

"It was a droll incident—the machine hatched a brood that looked just like men, and suddenly they fell upon us."

"WE HAVE MOBILIZED every man between 20 and 48. The old men and the women must work at the machines. We need machine tools desperately. We ordered 20,000 from America but only 2,000 have come."

"We are fighting. Everything is all right, only we need machines!"

"The machines keep rolling over—over the earth and over men. Work for us!"

THE GARAGE MECHANIC straightens up and wipes the sweat out of his eyes. "I guess he'll go all right now," he says. "I see you're from California. I was there once. I went in a 1928 flivver and sold it there for $20 more than it cost. American motors are the best in the world."

New roads, new States, new visions—with machines. My kid is in Arizona. I could only get out for the week end from New York. I left at night and was there in the morning. "Hello, Honey!"

"We don't need soldiers. Forgive me, but we are better at that than you are. Two of you would get killed to one of us. Americans are too damn brave, for war. But we need machines."

AMERICAN MACHINE tools made the machines that produced the machines that are rolling free blood into the earth; that produced the airplanes that are dropping bombs on China; that produced the shells that are falling over Norway, Belgium, over France.

American rationalization was the pattern for German rationalization, undertaken with the help of American loans. Not for this purpose, but machines know no purpose. Only men have a purpose.

"There are millions of unemployed in the United States."

"Don't send men, send machines. Thousands of tons of American aluminum, to bleed for the rights of man where the idea of the rights of man was born."

Invasions Raise Allied Merchant Fleet by 50%

About 5,000 Ships And Modernized Dutch Navy Handed Over

By the Associated Press

New York, May 16.—Germany's invasion of Norway, Denmark, Belgium and the Netherlands increased the Allied merchant fleet by 50 per cent and set the stage for the worst disruption of trade in the history of the world.

Roughly speaking, the Allies were handed about 5,000 ships with total gross tonnage of around 10,000,000 tons. Before the war France and England had a combined merchant fleet of about 10,200 ships of 23,000,000 tons.

Their losses of approximately 250 ships have been offset by new vessels, the purchasing of old ships and the capture of German ships.

In addition, the Allies now have control of the small but modernized Dutch navy.

Germany, paralyzed on the sea by the British blockade, had about 2,500 merchant ships before the war. Many were laid up in neutral harbors and the only trade route left open to the Nazis is the Baltic Sea.

Extension of the conflict to previously neutral countries cut off their trade to such an extent that England has closed three contraband control stations in the British Isles.

Direction of the Netherlands merchant marine, consisting of about 1,500 vessels aggregating 3,000,000 tons, is in the hands of two committees in New York and London.

The London committee is headed by D. Hudig, a director of the Royal Netherlands Line, and the New York committee by Adrian Gips, a director of the Holland-America Line.

It was said the committees would make no attempt to maintain a transatlantic service but would concentrate on building up service between American ports and Netherlands ports in the West and East Indies.

Methodist Home For Aged Marks Its 51st Year

Hundreds of visitors from Washington, Virginia and Maryland Wednesday, helped the District Methodist Home celebrate its fifty-first year of service.

They were taken on an inspection tour of the institution at Connecticut avenue and Ellicott street northwest; mingled at tea, and purchased embroidered scarfs, childrens' dresses and other articles made by the residents.

Topping off the celebration, a concert was presented last night by the Potomac Electric Power Co. Glee Club, conducted by Max Fichandler, with Cornelia Long Kinsella as accompanist. Mrs. Ralph Wilson and Miss Thelma Schmidt assisted.

East Indies Vital to Britain As Australian Lifeline Flanks

Sumatra Is Just Across Malacca Straits From Singapore, England's Far East Base; Small Navy, Army Guard Dutch Isles

By the Associated Press

The hands of Holland grasp both sides of the world; hands without a heart, now that the motherland has capitulated; hands that hold all the ingredients of World War, that are the focus of a world's anxiety or greed.

Holland in Europe: Over-run by the German armies, takes up just 12,704 square miles, had 8,639,595 people in 1937.

Holland in Asia: Thousands of rich, hot, islands from the Asiatic mainland 3,200 miles along the Equator to the Pacific, a total area of 735,267 square miles, having some 70,000,000 people.

Holland in the Americas: Dutch Guiana, on the northeast coast of South America, 54,291 square miles of it and 171,400 people;; two groups of islands, lumped as Curacao, about 500 miles apart in the Caribbean, with a total area of 403 square miles and 90,870 people.

The East Indies, first conquered in the seventeenth century by the rich and proud East India Co., produce 37 per cent of all the rubber in the world, 18 per cent of its tin, and 61,000,000 barrels of oil a year, more than half of which goes to the warring empires of Britain and France. American investments are some $70,000,000 and last year the United States bought $93,156,000 of their products; sold them $35,398,000 worth.

Main Islands: Java, Sumatra, Celebes, Borneo. Here the thrifty, hard-working Dutch have applied their superb methods of administration, transplanted their comfortable standard of living, transmuted their free-thinking.

Small Army, Navy.

Their land defenses are manned by some 63,000 Dutch and native regulars, reservists and civilian militiamen; there are three modern naval cruisers and one old one; a dozen destroyers; 18 submarines and perhaps a couple of hundred planes, most of them American made.

Oil refining, heavily backed with American capital, is the work of Curacao, and Allied forces have landed on the main islands, Curacao and Aruba, to prevent sabotage.

The wares of the mainland colony, Dutch Guiana, snuggled between the Guianan colonies of Britain and France, are things like sugar, cocoa, bananas and coffee.

So much for figures. What do these islands on two sides of the globe mean to the nations?

To the homeless Netherlands Queen, Wilhelmina, her government and her bombed and terrified people, they are the hopes of political and economic survival, a basis for the new Netherlands that the Queen expects to arise, "with God's help," when the world once more is at peace.

In London with the government, the queen has empowered the governor general of the East Indies to act on his own responsibility and supervise Dutch diplomats throughout the world if necessary. Several of Holland's largest industrial and trading firms, which do business everywhere, are prepared to move their headquarters to the East Indies. Dutch air and steamship lines are reorganizing to concentrate on the Pacific possessions.

With the protective help of French and British marines, the Dutch West Indies continue under Dutch colonial rule.

Japan Is Big Question Mark

Japan is the big question mark in the East. With something approaching clarvoyance, the Japanese let it be known just a month ago that she could not stand with folded arms if Dutch involvement in the European war should change the "status" of the Dutch East Indies.

Secretary Hull looked with sudden concern upon this the next day, declaring that any outside interference in the Indies "would be prejudicial to the cause of stability, peace and security in the entire Pacific area."

The Dutch, still strictly neutral then, warily announced they wanted no East Indian "protection" from anyone.

Once in the war, the Dutch said this with fervor again; Britain and France gave assurances they would not interfere in the islands; Japan said she was satisfied with these promises "for the present," but wouldn't be caught unawares by any "untoward events."

Japan's interest in the islands is the fact that they produce enough oil, tin and rubber to run her industrial machine and her war machine, too. Her trade with the islands, moreover, is normally bigger than with all Latin America and the 70,000,000 Dutch East Indians, under pressure, could absorb even more.

Aside from the American investment, America is interested in the East Indies of Holland because they lie, at their southernmost point, only a few miles from the Philippines, for which this country still takes responsibility.

In these days of swiftly progressive war, from the Philippines to Guam and the Hawaiian Islands, our outposts of defense in mid-Pacific, might be only quick steps. The American Navy is staying in the Pacific, just now.

Yet, if not as important immediately, the West Indies are much closer home to the United States. They lie off the northern coast of South America, not much more than 400 miles from Puerto Rico.

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, May 16 (INS).—I am really intrigued with the title "The Devil and Miss Jones," described as a comedy, but a normal one, with a tear and a spot of drama. It's from the pen of that brilliant young writer, Norman Krasna—and thereby hangs a story. Norman and Frank Ross have formed a producing company to be called the Frank Ross-Norman Krasna Inc. their very first, "The Devil and Miss Jones," will star Jean Arthur, no less, who in private life is Mrs. Frank Ross.

LOUELLA PARSONS

Companies have fought and bled to sign Jean but she is so delighted with "The Devil and Miss Jones" that she has promised Frank, who also manages her business, to star in his picture first. Jules Stein, head of the Music Corporation of America, who agents the two capable young men, has arranged an R.-K.-O. release for them. So keep your eyes on Ross and Krasna—they will surprise you.

Paramount really jumped the gun, if you will pardon my language, on the other companies when they nabbed Dalton Trumbo's "The General Came to Stay," for William Holden. Trumbo authored the sensational "Johnny Got His Gun," while he was on the R.-K.-O. staff. Then he obtained his release and sat down at his typewriter and turned out this other literary gem which Para. thinks well enough of to give to William Holden as an Arthur Hornblow production. Trumbo has now gone abroad to act as war correspondent—the thing that he wanted to do and which he always felt was interfered with by his movie job.

I have never known a girl to disappear as completely from movies as Jane Wyatt did after "Lost Horizon." She was hailed as the great find in the movies after Frank Capra's direction. But then Jane had a baby and she made no more pictures, but now, after three long years, she returns to movieland to be co-starred with Chester Morris in "The Girl From God's Country," for Republic. Speaking of Frank Capra, because of the constantly changing war conditions, he has completely rewritten "The Life of John Doe." Frank said today it is 100 per cent patriotic but no longer a preachment against war in case, God forbid, we should be drawn into the melee.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Joyce Mathews, who is in Hollywood, was at the Sphinx Club the other night with Jimmie Ritz—but don't get excited! Joyce's bridegroom, Gonzales Gomez, at the same time, was at the Stork Club in New York with Mrs. Jimmie—all prearranged; Eleanor Thompson, the Chicago heiress who has been visiting here, is leaving for home and Randy Scott couldn't be sadder; Sandy Cummings, really carrying the torch for Alice Faye, leaves for New York today to see her; Susan Hayward and Peter Lind Hayes a new twosome at the preview of "Those Were The Days;" Pat Morison and Y. Frank Freeman, jr., are a new duet.

Helen Mack's secret and real heart beat is Pat Weaver, New York advertising genius; Townsend Netcher has eyes only for Ann St. George Thompson, former Chicago girl, these days; Anita Louise and Buddy Adler will only have a three-day honeymoon, since Anita is due back in town Tuesday; Mrs. Carey Wilson (Carmelita Geraghty) hosted a luncheon shower yesterday for Anita, who has been much feted since her engagement was announced; the Darryl Zanucks have invited a few friends to meet the Winthrop Aldriches today. He is head of the Chase National Bank; Sid has been buying supper these last few nights for Janet Chambers, one of the N. T. G. beauties.

Alex Korda cables that he has been in Lisbon, Spain, for two days without any chance, so far, of getting to London; many reservations for "Lillian Russell." Norma Shearer, as usual, with George Raft, Sonja Henie and Dan Topping. The Darryl Zanucks, Elsa Maxwell, Constance Bennett and Philip Ainlev and the Mervyn LeRoys in another party; the Arthur Hornblows are hosting a party Saturday night for Mary Martin and Richard Hallliday.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

New Benny Film Takes Tenderfeet to the Wilds

"Buck Benny Rides Again" Transplants Radio Gang and Park Avenue to Ranch; Supplementaries Add to Gay Palace Bill

BELL

Those attending Loew's Palace Theater, where "Buck Benny Rides Again" opens its first Washington engagement this morning, will find faint recrudescences of both "The Women" and "Maisie" on the silver sheet. That is to say, the current gelatin moves reasonably soon from a swanky Park avenue apartment and the New York broadcasting stations to a Western "dude" ranch, where Tenderfoot Benny pretends to be the meanest of the silk-shirted bad men. To impress the gal who has coaxed him West against his will, he pays the hired hands on Andy Devine's real ranch, near the "dude" outfit, to let him be the easy victor in every clash of fists or firearms. The scheme works perfectly until the gal hires some real bandits—not knowing their identities, however—to give "Buck" Benny the works. This comes out all right, too, in the climactic comedy sequence of the picture.

Songs and dancing are sprinkled generously through the high-flown and, of course, unbelievable yarn. Ellen Drew, Lillian Cornell and Virginia Dale, striving for radio recognition as the "Cameron Sisters," do well by their tunes—especially Lillian Cornell in "Drums in the Night"—and "Rochester" and Theresa Harris make "My, My" one of the song-and-hoofing hits of the piece.

In addition to his regular pals of the broadcast hour, Benny is supported by the voices of the unseen Mary Livingstone and Fred Allen, coming through the loudspeakers. Airwave Competitor Allen perpetuates his studio ribbing of Benny and so does Miss Livingstone. And then there is Carmichael, the polar bear, alive and visible to the eye in some of the musical-comedy plot's most amusing and fantastic moments.

Benny plays his thin-skinned and thinner-nerved cowhand with a little more whimsy than he usually displays and almost—but not quite—shares stellar honors with his copper-colored valet, "Rochester." Eddie Anderson has considerably more to do in this subject than in any of the previous films in which he has appeared and hoists himself up to the top of the cast by the skill of his richly variegated performance.

Ellen Drew is the "heart interest," who almost gets her man plugged through the heart by Ward Bond and Morris Ankrum, the two real outlaws, and this young Miss Lillian Cornell, in a few brief flashes, gives promise of being what is customarily referred to as a "find." Andy Devine, Phil Harris, Dennis Day, Kay Linaker and the rest contribute support that never permits the swift pace of the film to slacken. They are all costumed like a Park avenue penthouse rodeo, as they would have to be to live up to Mark Sandrich's sumptuous production.

To the abreviated list of supplementary attractions, the new bill at the Palace brings Pete Smith's pseudo-educational comic "Specialty," called "Spots Before Your Eyes," which has nothing to do with hangovers but is a domestic skit containing much valuable information for housewives. An M-G-M Miniature, "A Door Will Open," and the disturbing new issue of "News of the Day" further augment a gay, tuneful and nonsensical feature.

Hollywood, May 16.

HOPPER

When the late Lillian Russell was touring the country in 1910, she discovered a young chap playing stock and signed him for her company. His name was Ernest Truex. When you see the film, "Lillian Russell," you will see the same Truex playing Lillian Russell's father....

Our china manufacturers are so incensed over theater owners giving away sets of dishes with their pictures that they're thinking of reversing the order and giving away pictures when you buy a set of dishes.

What a surprise Paramount will get when they discover Rod Cameron, whom they've put under contract, is only 25. They think he's 20 years older because he played that kind of part in "The Life of Henry Aldrich." San Franciscans cheered when that title flashed on the screen at the sneak preview up there.

When Paulette Goddard won a golf tournament with Joe Schenck, the prize was a Great Dane dog.

Paulette say she wishes she'd taken a diamond bracelet instead.

The college town of Pomona is one of our best sneak preview towns, and many people have wondered why certain pictures get a shriek of joy, while others get a moan of despair. The answer is simple. Theaters announces preview, not name of the picture. So the college kids make bets on it, just as you do at the race track. And those who win cheer.

In these days, when Hollywood's fortunate want to get away from it all and yearn for the theater, it's a pleasure to hear Jane Withers say she'll never retire from the movies. Said Janie: "They may not always let me act, but I'll be a script girl, secretary, or I'll work in the wardrobe department—anything just to stay in the industry."

Actor Owns Only Captive Solitario

The only solitario in the United States is now the pet of Edward Norris, film actor.

A solitario, according to Norris, is a combinaiton honey bear, ant-eater and raccoon, and is found only in the interior of Mexico.

Norris was recalled for "Ski Patrol" from a two months' hunting and fishing tour through the wilds of Mexico. Two solitarios wandered into his camp one night in search of food. The male attacked Norris and his companions, two Mexican friends. Norris shot the animal but kept its mate, which proved friendly.

When Norris returned to the United States he brought the solitario with him. As far as he has been able to make out, his solitario is the only one in the country, and possibly the only one in captivity in the world.

Columbia

"Strange Cargo," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's strange blending of human viciousness and mysticism, with Clark Gable and Joan Crawford co-starred, opens on the screen at Loew's Columbia Theater this morning for a return visit to F street, where it already has been widely acclaimed.

The story is of an escape of a small boatload of convicts and an outlawed dance-hall girl from a penal colony in the Guianas. Their desperate flight to the mainland is made the medium of an exposition of complete depravity, in its beginning, and wholesale regeneration, toward the end. The two elements of drama do not hang together too well, but they do provide an hour and a half of engrossing and exciting diversion. The brutality of some of the scenes is a little beyond the reaches of the word "entertainment."

Playing in their most rugged form, the costars are efficiently supported by a practically all-male cast, led by Ian Hunter, Peter Lorre, Albert Dekker, Paul Lukas, J. Edward Bromberg and Edaurdo Ciannelli, with Victor Varconi and numerous others cast in lesser roles.

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, May 16.

DANGER: Noel Coward, in discussing the job he holds in Paris, expressed a desire to get into the infantry . . . to get behind a gun and fight for his country in actual combat. . . . "As a matter of fact, Noel," one of them suggested, "you'd be safe, in the infantry. When you're fighting as part of a combat division, only one man out of five gets killed." . . . "But you know how I am," said Coward, "whenever I'm with a crowd, I always pick up the check."

ENTERPRISE: Moss Hart is completing the writing of his play, "I Am Listening." In addition, he and George S. Kaufman will begin writing their new play within two weeks. Kaufman & Hart now are also collaborating with Robert E. Sherwood—writing a movie they expect to sell and to devote the proceeds to the Authors League, which is in need of funds.

QUIRK: Jerome Weidman had a luncheon date Tuesday with Prof. Edward Kasner, of Columbia University—who is writing "Mathematics and the Imagination," a book which will feature an endorsement by Albert Einstein . . . Dr. Kasner arrived at the restaurant, wearing a cap, and the suspicious waiter escorted him to the table. The mathematician then ordered coffee—a full cup, to be brought together with a demi-tasse . . . "What do you suppose that waiter's thinking," asked Dr. Kasner, "with me, wearing a cap . . . and ordering a cup and a half of coffee?" . . . "What's he thinking?" asked Weidman . . . "He thinks," whispered the mathematician, "I'm nuts."

MISTAKE: Friday afternoon, at the World's Fairgrounds, the painters worked on a new sign announcing: "Michael Todd's Hall of Music Presents 'The Streets of Paris,' Gypsy Rose Lee." . . . Before the sign was completed the painters quit, at 4 p. m., the customary quitting time, to resume the job on Monday. That's why Michael Todd, World's Fair impresario, spent Friday night whitewashing the words already painted—words which he feared the Saturday opening-day crowds might see—an incompleted sign which read: "Michael Todd's Hall of Music Presents 'Streets of Paris,' Gyp."

DIGNITY: C. V. R. Thompson, author of "I Lost My English Accent," attended the Allied Relief Ball—which was a Costume Ball—wearing a neatly pressed tuxedo. . . . "This is supposed to be a Costume Ball," Thompson was reminded. "What're you dressed up as?" . . . "But it's so obvious," Thompson protested. "I'm dressed up as an Englishman about to dine in the jungle."

GRATITUDE: "Congratulations on your second son," writes Paula LeCler. "I remember as if yesterday, Sylvia's expression when she told me about your first son, when we met in Prague, two years ago. Yet in the international horror-serial, how long ago that summer of the Czecho-Slovakian crisis seems . . . I was in the Polish Corridor five days before the Nazi invasion. Mayor Barciszewski of Bydgoszcz showed me the fine new "gimnasium," built by Germans on land contributed by the Polish government, where, as in other schools, the Poles permitted the German minority to educate its children. After the school had been completed Polish fliers were astonished to notice from the air—and I verified this by going up later that day—a blatant signature of the Nazi Fifth Column. The pretentious corridor-linked group of buildings constituted an unmistakable and perfectly formed swastika."

DESTRUCTION: The plaque on the Czecho-Slovakian Pavillian at the Fair, bearing the inscription of the donors who helped open the Pavilion after Hitler had marched into Prague, was destroyed mysteriously few days ago. . . . A new sign has replaced it. It read: "Destroyed by Vandals."

RECOGNITION: Harold Stone, who portrays the role of the Communist in "Morning Star," received excellent but short notices from all the drama critics. In his scrapbook Stone has placed all the reviews, with their one-line complimentary references to him. . . . This collection was completed by the receipt of the long review given to his performance, by the Daily Worker. The caption read: "Caricature of Radicals Spoils Play."

Texas Blends Mexican And Ranch Cooking

Mrs. Richard Kleberg Gives Recipes For Enchiladas While Husband Tells How to Make Popular Son-of-a-Gun-Stew

By Martha Ellyn,
The Post Food Editor.

TEXAS is a State that finds its place in the sun in many ways. It has given such stars as Mary Martin, Mary Brian, Dorothy Lamour, Ann Sheridan and Linda Darnell to the stage, screen and radio. This Lone Star State has also produced many outstanding political personalities such as Vice President Garner, Jesse H. Jones, administrator, Federal Loan Agency and Majority Leader Sam Rayburn.

Martha Ellyn

Texas food too has a definite personality. It shows Mexican influence and that of the cowboy, for these courageous men were as much a part of the background of Texas as the Kentucky Colonels of the Blue Grass State or the Puritan fathers of New England. Out of the history of Texas comes the "chuck wagon." This conveyance was always the first to leave the ranch or round-up ground. The cook drove this stoutly built canvas-topped wagon, drawn by four horses. At noon the foreman spotted the chuckwagon at a place decided upon in advance. The cattle were stopped and allowed to graze and the cook shouted, "come and get it."

Chuckwagon parties are still a part of Texas life. On the ranch of Congressman Richard M. Kleberg of Texas, chuckwagon barbecues are often given. I learned from Mr. Kleberg that besides barbecuing beef and goat at such gatherings, that he often serves a concoction called "son-of-a-gun stew." This stew is allowed to cook all the time that the animals are being roasted. Pan bread, Mexican rice, beer and coffee are other foods served from the chuckwagon. Mr. Kleberg gave me the ingredients used for making the "son-of-a-gun stew," and the amount of each used will be dependent on the number to be served.

Son-of-a-gun Stew—Use kidneys, liver, tongue, sweet breads and beef. Add onions, corn and potatoes. Add plenty of seasonings and simmer until the meats are very tender.

The Texas cuisine has diverse and flavorsome dishes borrowed from their Mexican neighbors, such as hot tamales, tortillas, and enchiladas. Mrs. Kleberg has told me about some of the foods that may be used to develop a meal with their Southwestern influence, of which she is very fond, and food that she serves at her home in Texas and here in Washington.

Enchiladas are one of the most appealing of the dishes. Technically, this food is the tortilla filled with a chili mixture, as the name indicates. If you order the tortillas from a local shop that makes Mexican specialties, the enchiladas are not difficult to prepare. Following are directions.

Plain Enchiladas—First prepare a Mexican cooking sauce as follows: Fry 1 chopped onion in 1 tablespoon olive oil until it begins to color. Add 1 minced garlic clove and continue frying until golden. Add 1 teaspoon chili powder and stir well together. Add 1 large chopped tomato and continue to fry slowly and stir until tomato thickens. Add 1 cup meat broth; bring to boiling point and simmer 10 minutes, stirring often enought to blend well. The sauce may be thickened with a little flour, depending upon the consistency desired. Add salt and pepper.

Dip 12 tortillas one at a time, into hot deep fat, taking them out at once with a perforated skimmer to let them drain, and then dropping them into the hot sauce. When well covered and soaked with sauce transfer to a hot platter. Have ready a well-salted mixture of finely minced onions and grated cheese in equal parts. Lay across each tortilla 1 to 2 tablespoons of this mixture. Roll tortillas and pile up rolls like little logs, parallel to each other. Pour remaining sauce over, reheat in oven, sprinkle with remaining onion-cheese mixture and serve.

Mrs. Kleberg suggests a salad to serve with the enchiladas, called Huacamole this is made by mashing avocado to pulp, adding tomatoes, onion, garlic, lettuce and over all pouring French dressing. Pineapple ice made of the fresh fruit is also a suggestion of this Texas hostess. Pralines are served with coffee when this type of food is served. The following is a recipe for making the pralines.

Pralines—Cook 2 cups brown sugar and ½ cup water together to 240 degrees or to the soft-ball stage. Remove from heat and beat until creamy, then add 1 teaspoon vanilla and 1 cup pecan nut meats. Pour in large round wafer on waxed paper.

Informal Table Setting And Texas Hostess

You will find the food suggestions of Mrs. Richard Kleberg (insert) excellent if you are planning an informal party to be held in the rumpus room of your home or an out-of-door gathering, or other unpretentious event. The scheme of decoration shown above, with traditional red table cloth, pewter dishes and general informality, would make a splendid setting for the enchilades, huacamole, pralines and other foods suggested by this Texas hostess

Shrimp Take Recipe Contest Spotlight

By The Post Food Editor

THE ANCIENT mariner no doubt enjoyed fresh shrimp, but it is doubtful if he knew all of their possibilities as a delicious food. Culinary sophistication came to the front this week in the recipes submitted by the contestants in the Post recipe contest. Here are the winning recipes:

Shrimp Ramekins

First Prize $3
Mrs. Grace F. Hiehle,
3422 South Dakota avenue northeast

Recipe: Boil enough fresh shrimp to yield 2 cups for 15 minutes. Cool, remove shell, with sharp knife draw out black line on back and cut in half. Canned shrimp also may be used. Melt 3 tablespoons butter in skillet, stir in 4 tablespoons flour until smooth and creamy, stirring constantly. Add 3 hard cooked eggs that have been put through sieve or finely chopped. Cut shrimp in half and add to sauce. Season with salt and pepper and few drops of onion juice. Add 1 tablespoon minced parsley and a dash of paprika. Put mixture in buttered ramekins, cover with buttered crumbs, place in a hot oven, 400 degrees, and cook until crumbs are golden brown. Serve with horseradish sauce. Horseradish sauce—melt 2 tablespoons butter in skillet, add 2 tablespoons flour and stir to a smooth paste. Stir in 1 cup tomato juice, continue cooking until smooth and thick, stirring constantly. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Remove from fire, stir in 2 tablespoons horseradish. Serve hot in sauce boat with shrimp ramekins. Serves 6.

Shrimp and Mushroom Croquettes

Second Prize $2
Mrs. B. C. Philips,
6321 Allison street northwest

Recipe: Cook 1 cup shrimp, cut in pieces, with 1 cup halved mushrooms in 2 tablespoons fat until a delicate brown. Add 1 cup cooked rice, 1 teaspoon salt and a dash of pepper. Heat another 2 tablespoons of butter in a saucepan. Add 4 tablespoons flour and mix to a smooth paste. Add 1 cup milk slowly, stirring constantly and cook over low heat until thick. Combine sauce with the first mixture. Chill in refrigerator. Form into croquettes and roll in bread crumbs, then in beaten egg, to which has been added 1 tablespoon of water. Then roll in crumbs again. Fry in hot fat, 375 degrees, until a delicate brown. Drain on unglazed paper. Serve hot with a cheese sauce. Makes about 14 croquettes.

Recipe Contest

Shrimp a la King

$1 Prize
Mrs. Grayce Epperson,
7216 Seventh street northwest

Recipe: Cook 1 shredded green pepper and ½ pound sliced mushroom caps in 3 tablespoons butter for 5 minutes. Add 1 small onion, chopped fine, 1½ teaspoons salt, 3 tablespoons chopped pimiento, 1 teaspoon chopped parsley, ¼ teaspoon tabasco sauce and 2 cups fresh or canned cooked shrimp. Heat for about 2 minutes, then add 1½ cups milk, gradually, stirring constantly. Continue cooking until thickened. Add ½ cup milk to which has been added 1 beaten egg. Heat well and serve on toast. Serves 8.

Baked Shrimp

$1 Prize
Mrs. T. O. Maier,
119 Monroe avenue,
Hyattsville, Md.

Recipe: Drain 1½ pints boiled or canned shrimp and put them in a well buttered baking dish. Add ½ teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon paprika and 1½ tablespoons butter and bake at 350 degrees for 30 minutes. Serves 6.

Shrimp Specialty

$1 Prize
Miss Mary Cole,
113 East Church street
Frederick, Md.

Recipe: Use 1 cup shrimp, either fresh cooked or canned. Melt 1 tablespoon butter in saucepan. Saute the shrimp in the butter for a few minutes. Add 1 can condensed celery soup mixed with ¾ cup rich milk or thin cream. Heat thoroughly, without boiling. Sprinkle with 1 teaspoon parsley and ½ teaspoon paprika and serve immediately.

Inspector Lamb Rites Planned For Monday

Veteran Police Traffic Expert Dies In Naval Hospital

Funeral services for Inspector Benjamin A. Lamb, 60, veteran police traffic expert who died yesterday in Naval Hospital, will be held at 11 a. m. Monday at the S. H. Hines funeral home, 2901 Fourteenth street northwest. Burial will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

LAMB

With a service record of 35 years and commendations from the President and King and Queen of England to his credit, Inspector Lamb died after an illness which intermittently afflicted him during the past five years. He had been under hospital treatment for three months.

Describing the inspector as "one of the most conscientious and efficient officers ever to serve with the department," Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, ordered flags at police precinct stations at half staff.

A vigorous exponent of pedestrian rights, Inspector Lamb often was commended for his safety campaigning and attempts to relieve traffic congestion here.

A native of Pennsylvania, Inspector Lamb was appointed a patrolman March 16, 1919, after serving previously for 14 years as a crossing officer with the Capital Transit Co. He became a sergeant the following August. In 1923 he was transferred to the Traffic Bureau, where he was appointed to a lieutenancy two years later and to a captaincy on July 9, 1930.

At this time, he was named head of the Traffic Bureau personnel section and assistant to the commanding officer of the bureau. On January 1, 1933, he was promoted to grade of inspector and placed in charge of the Traffic Bureau, after serving for several months as acting inspector.

He was first stricken with a throat ailment in November, 1935, but returned to duty after an operation. In January, 1936, he was relieved from duty as commanding officer of the Traffic Bureau but continued to hold the post of traffic inspector. He was transferred at the same time to administrative headquarters.

His health failing again, he asked to be relieved of the arduous traffic work in March, 1937. Then he was made inspector in charge of the Third Police District, embracing Precincts Four, Five, Nine, Eleven and Harbor Precinct. He handled traffic here during the visit of the British royalty here June 8, 1939, and was commended by the King and President. He received a wrist watch as a memento from the King and Queen.

Funeral Flowers Tardy, Sues W. U. for $10,000

Julia Dohring, 1741 F street northwest, blamed the Western Union Telegraph Co. for nondelivery of flowers at her father's funeral in a $10,000 damage suit she filed in the District Court yesterday.

Her complaint said she paid the telegraph company 80 cents to transmit $10 to her brother, John Dohring, in Brownsville, Oreg., to buy flowers for her father's funeral. She later was told the message was delayed until after the funeral because the Brownsville office was closed.

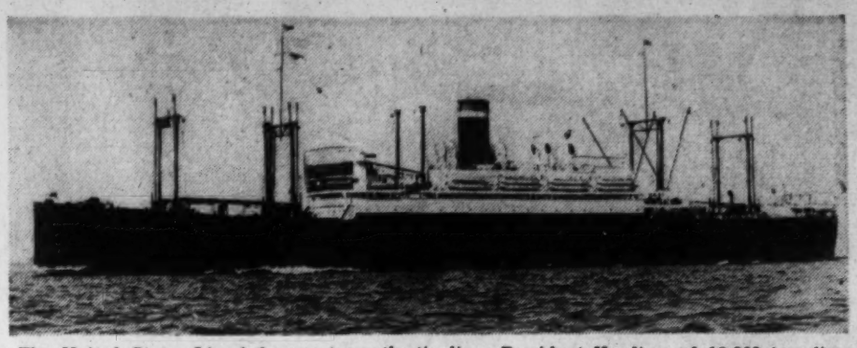
Liner Sunk Off Belgian Coast by German Bombs



The United States Lines' former transatlantic liner President Harding, of 13,869-ton displacement, was sunk last Friday off the coast of Belgium by German bombing planes, her British captain and refugees from Belgium revealed upon landing Wednesday night in England. The refugees said that the German planes tried to bomb the ship on which they finally reached England. The 19-year-old liner was sold to a Belgian corporation early this year by the United States Lines, who accepted a mortgage for an unpaid balance. This mortgage was protected by insurance, payable to the line, which may provide the means for new tonnage

Denver, May 16 (INS).—A proposal that the 1940 national elections be postponed so that the Nation may present a "solidified front" for President Roosevelt during the European war crisis resulted today in a request for the resignation of Deputy State Treasurer Charles T. Haines.

The proposal was advanced by Mayor Everett Cole, of Alamosa, prominent Republican. He said he made the suggestion after a conference with Haines, candidate for the Republican nomination for State treasurer.

State Treasurer Charles M. Armstrong (Republican), characterizing the proposal as "ridiculous," announced he had requested Haines' immediate resignation. Gov. Ralph I. Carr, Republican, called the idea "hysteria."

Rev. Fitzgerald Funeral Rites To Be Monday

St. Francis de Sales' Assistant Pastor Died Yesterday in Rectory

Requiem mass for the Rev. R. Cotter Fitzgerald, 47, assistant pastor at St. Francis de Sales Church, will be sung at 10:30 a. m. Monday, followed by burial in Mount Olivet Cemetery. He died early yesterday of a heart attack at the rectory, 2021 Rhode Island avenue northeast.

The Right Msgr. Edward McAdams, pastor of St. Joseph's Church, will preach the sermon. Also officiating at the services will be the Rev. Jennings Clark, assistant pastor of St. Theresa Church; the Rev. Bernard Prosise, pastor of St. Jerome's, Hyattsville, Md., and the Rev. Thomas Sweeney, of St. Anthony's.

Father Fitzgerald was born in Washington, the son of Thomas F. and Elizabeth Sealy Fitzgerald. He studied at Catholic University, St. Charles College and St. Mary's Seminary. On June 14, 1928, he was ordained by Archbishop Michael J. Curley at the Baltimore Cathedral.

His first solemn high mass was celebrated at the Church of the Nativity, 6000 Georgia avenue northwest, June 17, 1928. On July 8 of the same year he was appointed assistant pastor of St. Francis de Sales Church.

Surviving are two sisters, Mrs. Elizabeth Eordes and Mrs. May O'Brien, both of Washington, and a half sister, Mrs. Dolores Goodbody, of Rochester, N. Y.

To Any Man

All I ask in this time of dismay,
Is that in reassuring tones you say,
"No, no, Adolf will not come near,
And anyway—why I am here."

Today's Social Notes

(From the Truthtown Torch)

Mrs. Mike Pace and Mrs. Chauncey Potterby who started Monday by motor for New Orleans have hurriedly returned home on account of recent developments in Europe. Mrs. Pace is a captain and Mrs. Potterby a drill sergeant in the recently organized Ladies' Volunteer Drill team, which meets twice a week on the lawn back of the Plush Sofa Club.

Gifted Fiance

Mr. and Mrs. Holsworthy Tinkle announce the engagement of their daughter, Imogene Claire, to Mr. DeLancey Duffer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Byron Duffer.

Miss Tinkle, known as Ducky to her friends, is a graduate of Miss Snoot's school and was a glamour deb of last season. Mr. Duffer is a member of the Scrub Oak Hunt, the Brookside Yacht Club, the Skidmore Polo Team, the Tumble Bug Ski League, and is an amateur steeple chase rider, air pilot and motor car racer. He is also a ping pong enthusiast and a collector of early American cowbells.

The wedding will take place in June to be followed by an Hawaiian honeymoon, after which Mr. Duffer will look for a connection in trade.

Debut Sensation

Truthtown socialites were given another shock this week by its eccentric grande dame, Mrs. Bartholomew Beetle, who recently caused a furore by inviting a former family retainer as a guest at a wedding reception for her granddaughter, the former Miss Jacqueline (Jinks) Beetle and Leroy Sappington, 3d.

Miss Beetle, on Wednesday afternoon, presented her younger granddaughter Eloise (Cookie) Beetle to society at a lawn party at the Beetle estate. The guests on their arrival, were ushered to their great surprise, to a large auction block that had been constructed on the lawn. On this block Mrs. Beetle and her granddaughter received the guests who ascended by means of steps in the rear.

The Beetle butler, Sortwell, who presented the guests to the dowager was attired in the outfit of a country auctioneer. Mrs. Beetle wearing a lavender lace gown was bedecked with all the Beetle jewelry that she could conveniently get on her person. Cookie wore a flowered organdie cut on decollete lines.

Refreshments were served from long tables on the lawn in the manner of church dinners at country auctions. Asked about her unusual social procedure, Mrs. Beetle replied," I just wanted to give people something to talk about."

Peephole Chatter

Glimpsed at the Livingston Pell-Mell's cocktail party—Mrs. Cornelius Dachshund having an embarrassing moment with her water cress sandwich . . . Mrs. Brown Toddy and Mrs. Smith Toddy former wives of Ellsworth Toddy, passing up the punch which the present Mrs. Toddy was serving . . . young Chuck Trotter and Bill Bingle paying court to Mrs. Edgerton Bellwether, sr., who is planning an elaborate June dinner dance . . . Reggie Flitter, dashing bachelor, looking uneasily about for a means of escape from the woman to whom he was talking . . . Mrs. Montclair St. Vitus trying to enlist recruits in a movement to revive herb cookery . . . Everybody exclaiming about the decorations . . . Everybody exclaiming about the fascinating antiques . . . everybody exclaiming about the little pigs in blankets . . . Everybody exclaiming "What a nice party," etc, etc.

Seersucker Success

Here's ingenuity in the use of an arstwhile earthy fabric — cotton seersucker. One of the sturdiest of all cottons and one that doesn't require ironing after tubbing (except at the seams), the summer success of seersucker is virtually assured. Harold Eisenberg, Chicago designer, did this youthful grey and white striped seersucker with full, free skirt, wide flap lapels, a box jacket and a snowy white pique belt. Shoulder pads snap off before washing for 100 per cent speedy drying.

Enthusiasm for Job Is Success Recipe Of Lenore Ulric; Diet Also Important

AT LAST we have what sounds as if it might be the real secret of the amazing vitality which—coupled with the requisite talent—makes an actress outstanding. It is enthusiasm for the job!

Lenore Ulric, who earned her fame in the successful portrayal of difficult roles, says: "I believe implicity that interest in what one is doing is the main source of energy in getting it done." Currently, she is putting her theories to work in a successful Broadway play.

Miss Ulric caught her habit of philosophizing, however, from David Belasco, with whom she was associated for a number of years. The famous producer taught her that if you get more fun out of what you are doing, you have a better than average chance to make a success at it. It seems to me that should apply to any job! If you add enthusiasm to skill, it is bound to raise you above the ranks!

"Hard Way to Success"

In case your ambitions run to acting, the stage star believes the short-cut is in a stock company—"the hard way, often getting up at 6 in the morning to catch a train, working until midnight, and learning a new part every week."

You need plenty of enthusiasm for a job like that! But it develops endurance and adaptability, two qualities that seem to be demanded of the actress.

Being five feet, two inches tall, Miss Ulric holds herself so beautifully that she looks much taller. But still she wails, "Oh, if I were only two inches taller! Then it wouldn't make so much difference when I gained five pounds!"

When I saw her she had resolutely embarked on a diet, and a very simple but extremely good one. As she explained:

"I like hot chocolate and I have figured out that five cups are the equivalent of a hearty meal! So, I can't have any more cholocate. Another thing, I like sweets—candy! I have given that up. My weight always goes down as soon as I do those two things."

Watches Diet Now

Just to keep you from wondering how overweight she is, or was, the scales registered 116 pounds. She says she eats more fruits and vegetables now than she used to and thinks the diet is better for her. Besides, it's easier to control weight on such menus.

I have always been of the opinion that poise was something an actress was either born with or acquired. But Miss Ulric declares she still has stage fright and that taking deep breaths in the wings is no help!

"It is a malady you do not recover from," she says. "Sometimes, when the attack is very bad, it helps to remember that some of the most famous theater people have had the same trouble."

Once on the stage, however, there isn't a trace of shyness or fright. Evidently enthusiasm even conquers self-consciousness!

Face Powder Facts

Have you ever thought of saving money on your face powder? You might be able to do so if you would learn the differences in the texture and colors of powders as well as the price.

Here are some facts about face powder that may help you:

There are three basic powder types—light powders meant for use on dry skins; medium powders for normal or slightly oily skins, and heavy powders, for very oily skins.

Each type contains ingredients intended to accomplish four feats—cover the skin, make the powder easy to spread, hold the powder on the skin, also hold color and perfume in the powder. How heavy your powder is depends chiefly on its covering power.

Unless the powder is blended to harmonize with your individual skin tones, it is advisable to use two shades of powder to obtain smooth effect. Choose a dark, rather heavy powder for the base and a lighter one in tone and texture for finishing.

Cotton Usage Greater Than Ever Before

Even for Evening It Vies With Luxury Silks and Sheers

By Marshall Adams

The Post Fashion Editor.

FRIDAY marks the opening of national cotton week and although many of us are weary of national weeks, this observance is especially appealing to women at this time. One reason is because there is an oversupply of cotton in this country which for patriotic reasons should be disposed of. Another is the fact that cottons are lovelier to look at than ever before and carry the indorsement of every designer and fashion authority in the country.

Marshall Adams

The range of cotton usage is greater by far this year than in the past, with seersucker and seaworthy ginghams going out to swim, and nursery cottons, like poplin, muslin, percale and chambray going to the smartest resorts.

Evening Clothes, Too

Pique and eyelet batiste are made into hats and every conceivable accessory. And cotton evening clothes were never more beguiling, with sheer mulle being used by the most exclusive designers and crinkled or dotted Swiss, muslin and shining piques utilized for blouses, petticoats, neckwear, gloves, bags, rompers and complete 'round-the-clock wardrobes.

Typical of cotton's transformations is the new collection of "Eisenbergs," those deft, well-appointed clothes by Designer Harold Eisenberg. Cotton is comparatively new to top-quality esign houses, but Eisenberg puts the same care in his cotton washables as in his luxury silk and wool ensembles.

For Humid Days

Detailing and cut are fastidiously coupled with practical touches such as shoulder pads which snap on and off for speedier laundering. Buttons and belts are detachable, all looking like collector's items, and including great, lumpy chunks of gold or oversized poker chip pearls for buttons.

For humid days in town there are sheer chambrays in smart new "flannel gray" or "Hershey brown," with bloused backs and squared yokes. Even more sophisticated among Eisenberg cottons is off-white or dead-white cotton sharkskin, worn unrelieved of color and as gleaming as when the cotton was plucked down Memphis way.

White cotton lace and cut-out cotton flower motifs trim these piques—often the pique itself forms squared-off scalloped borders, and by night, strong shades of red, blue and orange in evening gingham go roof dancing on the same floors with the best of the pure silk waltz gowns.

Saucery Frames

Paris (AP).—Prints used for hats include cire satin whose black ground is printed with small, bright flowers. The material covers a saucer-shaped frame, and the printed flowers and a black bow do the trimming.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Wilfully Disloyal to Patient Lover, Woman Repents In Panicky Heartbreak When He Turns to Another; How Cure Her Jealousy, Which Is Now Obsessive?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I need your help so that I may conquer my feelings. I want you to answer me in strong language, so that I may keep your answer always with me and read it when I need help. I am well educated and by nature very trustful. I have been in love with a man who has given me a world of love and devotion. Unfortunately, we cannot marry because he is already married and his wife is confined in a mental hospital. She has been there for more than 12 years and as long as she lives, we feel that we should not marry.

We have loved each other more than ten years. We have been faithful and loyal to each other during this time. But in view of the hopelessness of the situation, I decided very foolishly to give him up. I started going out with another man, and continued to do so for about six months. During this time, I came to realize more fully than ever before how truly I did love the man in question.

However, he felt that my love had wavered and gave up hope of ever having me back again. He told me that something was changing in him, because of my actions. But I believed his love for me would stand any test and so I paid no attention to his pleadings. Then one day I awakened to the fact that he meant more to me than any other man ever could; and that I would wait for him forever, if necessary. But now I learn that he has gone out a few times with another young lady, although he says he never could love her.

My problem is jealousy. I am extremely jealous of the girl and of him. I know our estrangement is every bit my fault and this makes me all the more uncertain of his love for me. He says he still loves me and is trying to forget my episode with the other man. But I have reached a point where I distrust every move he makes—because he didn't tell me the truth about the other girl. I found it out myself.

I fuss and get very angry if he does something I don't understand. I have a constant feeling that he is seeing the other girl without my knowing it. This feeling has become an obsession. I feel that perhaps he wants to hold on to me and yet keep in touch with the other girl, too, just in case I leave him flat again. I am all upset mentally. Perhaps you can set me straight.

DISTURBED.

'The Supreme Influence' In Healing Conflict

DEAR DISTURBED: By strange coincidence, there came to my desk in the same mail with your letter, another letter from a valued friend of mine who is a lecturing psychologist. He inclosed a copy of a paper he has recently prepared, entitled, "Toward Mental Health." In this paper he discusses, among other things, the "supreme influence" of love in dissolving conflict within the personality or between individuals.

Because what he has to say seems to supply the balm—as well as the guidepost back to happiness—which you are now seeking, I have obtained his permission to quote herewith some of his statements. He says (in part):

"Genuine love is the supreme influence in accomplishing the solution of conflicts within the personality or between personalities. For real love is, by its very nature, expansive (moving outward from the self center); not contracting (drawing toward the self) . . . Our feelings are so standardized by society, and so involved with self esteem, that ardor of feeling or profession of feeling—whether in ourself or in others—demands searching examination. Too often, ardor is stimulated by the frustrated desire for response and so becomes motivated by the ego-urge to get one's own way. And such an attitude is obviously quite different from love, although it passes under that name.

"Love," he explains, "is shown not by words nor even necessarily by behavior, but by what one IS. Possessiveness, together with its ugly offspring, jealousy, is essentially dishonoring to the fellow being at whom it is directed, since it is an attempted invasion of his control of his personality. Like any effort to coerce, however subtly, it implies that the other person is one's inferior; or, that the would-be possessor wants to make that other his inferior. There are no exceptions to this basic principle, whatever forms to the contrary may be tolerated or encouraged by society—whether in parent-child or employer-employe relations; or in the still surviving Pursuit-Capture-Property formula of the man-woman relationship. Possessiveness or coercion are completely opposed to love.

"Real love," he concludes, "is an achievement possible only to mature persons of whatever age. The ability to love maturely becomes possible as one grows out of the feeling-habits of the child stage. Yet, realization of the meanings of real love as experienced within one's self can be a constantly increasing awareness, as one grows into maturity, leaving childish ways behind. And no other realization can be so vital, since the capacity to love in this manner is the goal of all human striving."

If it is indeed true that you have an educated mind, I am sure you must find in this psychologist's spiritually illuminated concept of love the explanation—and the indicated remedy—of your jealous apprehension. Measure your past and present behavior by the standards he supplies, and you must see that you were seeking, and still seek, to subordinate your beloved to an inferior's—to a supplicant's—position in your so-called "love relationship" with him.

When you felt most secure in the relationship, it was because you assumed in cruel conceit that you held—and would always hold—the "upper hand" in the exchange. This you admit when you say, "I believed his love for me would stand any test and so I paid no attention to his pleadings." The "episode with the other man" no doubt was unconsciously designed to parade your power, even though you may choose to rationalize it as an intended gesture of relinquishment.

Your present panic is due to the fact that you have blundered on the truth that he owns the strength and reserves and exercises the right to act independently of the vital relationship; even to the extent of bestowing earned affection elsewhere. How subdue your panic? Simply by loving him; by being joyously grateful that he is still there, still your friend, willing to work with you in gradually erasing the fact and the effects of your wilful disloyalty. Can't you see how foolish, how infantile, it is, either to want him to be, or to try to compel him to be, your puppet-on-a-string?

Be glad that he is of sufficiently mature character to live without you if he must—if you should make it necessary. For in that truly adult demonstration you have the greatest guarantee of the worth of his devotion. And if you would merit the love he has to give, dry your tears; have done with morbid hysteria; and set yourself the task of learning how to love him "expansively—moving outward from the self," instead of egoistically—"drawing toward the self."

One parting recommendation: read Florence Guy Seabury's "Love Is a Challenge." It is one of the most consoling, reassuring and instructive discussions of love—from the woman's angle—that I have ever found. It is at once a preventive of and remedy for that brand of heartbreak you are now suffering.

How can Gotham produce stockings more beautiful than ever, at prices lower than ever? Well, it all goes back to the depression years when Gotham continued to invest in the newest equipment and improvements . . . and last year invested in a new mill—one of the largest, most modern finishing plants in the world.

Thrif-Tee Tops at only 89c
(the lowest price in Gotham's 30 years)

Silk Tops at only 79c—a real value.

Women Crowd Galleries to Hear President's Speech on Defense

They Outnumber Men, Except on Floor Of House and in Diplomatic Gallery; Allied Envoys Are Intense Auditors

By Hope Ridings Miller.

YOU CAN ALWAYS COUNT on the women to turn out in droves for a joint session of Congress. Yesterday, by the time the President was ushered in for his speech, more women than men crowded the galleries to hear him. Only in the diplomatic section, and on the floor of the House itself, did the male of the species outnumber the ladies.

Hope Ridings Miller

Somber and tense was the atmosphere pervading the throng that began to assemble shortly after 12 o'clock. Among the early arrivals was Senora de Espil, wife of the Argentine Ambassador, who regularly attends joint Congressional sessions. Chic as usual, she was trimly turned out in a navy blue redingote over a print frock, and a navy blue hat. Shortly after she came in and took her seat on the front row of the diplomatic section, she was joined by Countess van der Straten-Ponthoz, wife of the Belgian Ambassador, whom I have never seen at such a gathering before.

The Argentine Ambassador, Felipe Espil, and the Brazilian Ambassador, Carlos Martins, were also in the front row. Never once taking their eyes off the President during the latter's entire speech were the British Ambassador, Lord Lothian, and the Australian Minister, Richard Casey. Others in the diplomatic section included the Turkish Ambassador, Mehmet Munir Ertegun; the Czecho-Slovak Minister, Vladimir Hurban; the Portuguese Minister and Mme. Bianchi; the Mexican Minister-Counselor, Dr. Don Luis Quintanilla; and the Ambassador of Panama, and Senora de Boyd, the latter of whom wore a red hat, the only dash of bright color in the entire diplomatic section.

CLICKING CAMERAS and flashing bulbs in the President's gallery announced the entrance of Mrs. Roosevelt and members of her party shortly before the cabinet filed in on the floor of the House. Attired in a simply-cut black frock, worn with a matching sailor and a touch of white at the collar, the First Lady came in with Miss Malvina Thompson and Miss Marguerite Le Hand.

In the same section were a number of Cabinet hostesses, including Mrs. Cordell Hull, Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, Mrs. Harold Ickes, and Mrs. Henry Morgenthau. An attractive woman who from a distance appeared to be Mrs. Harry Woodring turned out to be somebody else. Mrs. Woodring returned from New York late yesterday afternoon.

Mrs. Stanley Reed was there; as were Mrs. James Helm, Mrs. Louis Compton, and several others. Among official hostesses seen in other galleries were Mrs. Morris Sheppard, who earlier attended the Senate session; Mrs. D. Worth Clark, Mrs. Claude Pepper, Mrs. Joseph W. Byrns, jr., Mrs. Martin Dies, and Mrs. R. Ewing Thomason.

NUMEROUS WIVES and daughters of delegates to the current Scientific Congress were also there to hear the President; as were scores of seasonal visitors to the Nation's Capital. Telephones on the Hill were buzzing busily early yesterday morning, and dozens of requests for gallery tickets went on file in offices of the House and Senate.

"It's practically war for us already," I heard a tearful middle-aged woman say as she moved out with the crowd leaving the galleries after the speech.

"Not war at all," replied her companion. "Just preparedness. And that's the best way to keep peace."

Camilla Riggs Of N.Y. Engaged To John Meigs

Bryn Mawr Senior Will Become Bride Of Capitalite

Mr. and Mrs. Lawrason Riggs, jr., of New York, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Camilla Kidder Riggs, to John Wister Meigs, son of Dr. and Mrs. Edward Browning Meigs, of Washington.

Miss Riggs was graduated from the Brearley School and is a member of the class of 1940 at Bryn Mawr College. She is a granddaughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. George W. Riggs, of New York, and of the late Dr. and Mrs. Jerome Kidder, of Washington.

Mr. Meigs is a graduate of the Sidwell Friends School of Washington, and of Princeton University, class of 1936, where he was a member of the Colonial Club, the Theater Intime and the Triangle Club. He isb now in the fourth year at the Harvard Medical School, and is a member of the Aesculapian Club. He is the grandson of the late Dr. and Mrs. Arthur Vincent Meigs and of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Wister, of Philadelphia.

Miss Thompson, Fiance Feted

Capt. and Mrs. Smith Hempstone gave a large linner last night at the Shoreham in honor or the latter's daughter, Miss Mary Dora Thompson, and her fiance, Lieut. (j. g.) O. Giffith Sexton, 3d, of Tampa, Fla., whose engagement was announced yesterday.

Garfield Swift, brother-in-law of the bride-to-be, who has appeared on the Shoreham Blue Room program this year, sang several numbers in honor of the young couple during the second floor show of the evening. He was married last September to Miss Thompson's sister, the former Miss Beth Thompson.

Lieut. Sexton and his fiance are planning to be married this July. The prospective bride attended Holton Arms and was graduated from Miss Porter's School in Farmington, Conn. She was presented to society here in 1938 at a reception given by Capt. and Mrs. Hempstone at the home of her grandfather, Theodore W. Noyes. Miss Thompson is a member of the Junior League.

Lieut. Sexton is a graduate of the United States Naval Academy in the class of 1938. He formerly was stationed at Pensacola, Fla., and has now been assigned to the Wasp, the new aircraft carrier which is based at Norfolk, Va.

About the Town

with DUDLEY HARMON

You may be able to feel comparatively isolated from the war if you live in Peoria, but certainly not in Washington.

Every night this week, up to at least 1 in the morning, motorists passing the back of the White House can notice lights glowing from the President's study. They fairly blaze from the Executive Offices and the two top floors of the State Department across the street.

THE HEARTS of the Allied diplomats here certainly can't be in their work these days—at least that part of it which means going to parties. But attending Capital functions is still their job no matter what's happening in the rest of the world. At parties they don't look too cheerful, but then neither does anybody else.

THE NETHERLANDS Legation is so flooded with phone calls that Countess van Rechteren Limpurg, wife of the Counselor, is working every day as a switchboard girl. She has been so busy that none of her friends have been able to see her since Holland was invaded.

Mme. Loudon, wife of the Minister, will shortly organize a Dutch Red Cross unit among the women of the legation staff. Most of them have been going all winter several times a week to Red Cross headquarters; now they are sewing and knitting every day.

FRIENDS OF THE Van Haersma de Withs—he preceded Mr. Loudon as Minister here—believe that Mme. van Haersma de With was not in Berlin, where her husband was envoy, at the time war broke out. Lately she has been living at their chateau in Holland, only visiting the German capital from time to time. Her daughter, Nora, who is married to a Dutch officer, gave up her house in Amsterdam some time ago to stay with her mother. Mme. van Haersma de With is remembered here as one of the most beautiful and dashing members of the Diplomatic Corps.

PAUL CULBERTSON of the State Department was to have sailed on Saturday on an Italian boat for Lisbon, where he will represent the United States at the opening of an exposition there. At the last moment the Department canceled his sailing on the Italian liner and ordered him to go by clipper. Mr. Culbertson will be gone about two months. Speaking of the State Department, Winthrop Crane, just back from Florida, is now working in A. A. Berle's office. He has had a job at the Red Cross all winter.

PAULINE CURTIS will share honors at the tea which Mr. and Mrs. James Clement Dunn will give June 7 for their daughter, Cynthia. The two girls are among the most attractive debutantes of the season. Miss Curtis is the daughter of Mrs. John Gross, of New York and Bethlehem, Pa., whose former home here is now the 1925 F Street Club. Her father is James F. Curtis, of Roslyn, Long Island.

ONE REASON the Australian Legation has made such a hit with American newspaper people may be because it has a press representative. This representative is not only a woman, but a young one—Miss Patricia Jarrett, of Melbourne. She was in Hollywood writing for the movies when Mrs. Casey wired her to please come to Washington to "advise." At the same time Miss Jarrett is continuing to send stories to Australian newspapers.

Australian women must be really phenomenal. Asked the other day what they were doing in aviation, Mrs. Casey replied, "Well, they are teaching the men to fly."

Mrs. Casey, who is an artist, is busy hanging her fine collection of paintings at the legation on Woodland drive. Except for a Picasso, they are all Australian works.

Mrs. Romney Is Hostess at Luncheon Fete

Rep. Norton, Mrs. Lucas And Mrs. Bankhead Among the Guests

Mrs. Kenneth Romney, wife of the Sergeant-at-Arms of the House of Representatives, was hostess at a large luncheon yesterday at the Wardman Park. She was gowned in an ensemble of light blue crepe with an Eton jacket trimmed in soutache braid and a large picture hat of navy blue taffeta.

The table was decorated with spring flowers in low silver bowls. Among the guests were Mrs. William B. Bankhead, Representative Mary T. Norton, Mrs. Ernest Lundeen, Mrs. Scott Lucas, Mrs. Clarence F. Lea, Mrs. Eugene Cox, Mrs. Harry Englebright, Mrs. Robert Doughton, Mrs. John Buell Snyder, Mrs. Frank Buck, Mrs. Emil Hurja, Mrs. John H. Tolan, Mrs. John H. Tolan, jr., Mrs. Francis Cabell Brown, Mrs. Harry Sheppard, Mrs. William W. Arnold and Mrs. Fred M. Vinson.

Also Mrs. William A. Weber, Mrs. Paul Maloney, Mrs. Laurence F. Arnold, Mrs. Thomas A. Wadden, Mrs. Estes Kefauver, Mrs. George Calver, Mrs. Theodore Tiller, Mrs. David Lynn, Mrs. Martin Smith, Mrs. Charles Benter, Mrs. James Ingrebretsen, Mrs. Hardy Prichard, Mrs. W. L. Popham, Mrs. Addison Foster, Mrs. C. H. Giroux, Mrs. Steven Gambrill, Mrs. Thomas Ryder, Mrs. Jack Nichols, Mrs. Chleo B. Spencer, Mrs. John A. Delano, of Baltimore, Mrs. Charles Halleck, Mrs. James A. Meeks and Mrs. Kenneth Romney, jr.

Dorothy Walkley To Become Bride Of Mr. McCullough

Mrs. Allan Earle Walkley announces the engagement and approaching marriage of her daughter Dorothy Munroe to Hugh McCullough.

Miss Walkley is the eldest daughter of Mrs. Walkley and the late Allan Earle Walkley of Ocala, Florida, and the niece of the late Theodore, Townsend Munroe, pioneer banker in Florida. She is the granddaughter of William Henry Jarrett of Little Rock, Arkansas. She attended school in Florida and now makes her home with her mother at 4007 Connecticut avenue.

Mr. McCullough is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick A. McCullough of Rochelle Park, New Jersey. He attended school in New Jersey and George Washington University. He is a member of Theta Delta Chi Fraternity.

The wedding will take place in the early fall.

Margaret Wilson Wed to Mr. Miller

White spring blossoms formed the setting for the wedding at noon yesterday of Miss Margaret Kinloch Wilson, daughter of Mrs. Thomas Kinloch Wilson, of Washington, to Samuel Ross Miller, son of Mrs. John H. Miller, also of this city. The ceremony took place at the Cleveland Park Congregational Church, the Rev. Paul W. Yinger officiating.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her brother, Thomas Putnam Wilson, wore a costume of powder blue crepe with white stitched organdie collar and cuffs. A corsage of white orchids and lilies of the valley completed her ensemble.

John H. Miller, jr., was best man for his brother and the ushers were Wilbur L. Gray, jr., and Dales Mark.

Marguerite Mullan To Become Bride Of Mr. E. M. Cooper

Mr. and Mrs. Charles R. Mullan, of San Francisco, former residents of Washington, announce the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Miss Marguerite R. Mullan, to Edmund M. Cooper, son of Mrs. Louis Zawacki, of East Vandergrift, Pa. The marriage will take place June 13 in San Francisco, where the couple will reside.

The prospective bride is a graduate of Holy Cross Academy here, the Boyd Secretarial School in Pittsburgh, and attended Carnegie Institute of Technology at Pittsburgh. Mr. Cooper is an alumnus of Carnegie Institute, class of 1939, and starred as a football player with the Tech Tartans.

Hale-Betts Nuptial June 8 in Florida

Mr. and Mrs. William Henry Hale, of Cedar Keys, Fla., have issued invitations to the wedding of their daughter, Janet Cringan Hale, of Washington, to William Francis Betts, formerly of Washington and now of New York.

The wedding will take place on June 8 at Cedar Keys, Fla. Mr. Betts is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Leon Betts, of Chevy Chase, D. C.

Mrs. Nathan Siegal is spending a week in Cleveland, where she is visiting her sister.

CAPITAL WHIRL

By SALLY SWIFT

ALL GATHERINGS in Washington are not for pleasure or profit, and this busy Capital whirl does sometimes stop for a moment of quiet tribute to a loved friend. Such a tribute was paid to the late Harold Sims at a memorial service which was conducted at Epiphany Church the other afternoon by the Rev. Ze-Barney Phillips.

At least three Ambassadors came to pay their respects to the memory of the man who had faithfully served the British Embassy as attache for over 20 years, at the same time that he was taking an important part in the social life of Washington. The first was Lord Lothian, Mr. Sims' chief, who sat modestly toward the back of the church, leaving the places near Mrs. Sims to friends of longer standing.

A SECOND AMBASSADOR present was the Argentine envoy, Felipe Espil, and a third was Juan de Cardenas, Ambassador of Spain.

When Harold Sims was a popular young bachelor about Washington some years ago, these two ambassadors were budding young secretaries and, with him and Willmott Lewis, formed a group as firmly bound by friendship as were the Three Musketeers and D'Artagnan. Passing years saw the secretaries rise to chiefs of mission and Mr. Lewis become Sir Willmott, knighted for his work in journalism, while Harold Sims remained contentedly in his niche as attache, desiring only to do his work quietly, the object of no one's jealousy and of everyone's affection.

Among those taking part in the simple and beautiful service were the Norwegian Minister and Mme. Morgenstierne, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Townsend, Mrs. Wallach Merriam, Dr. and Mrs. Kurt Hetzel, Mme. Espil, Lady Lewis, Mrs. Anthony Coleby, Mrs. Pearsons Rust, William P. MacCracken, members of the embassy staff fellow office workers and members of the Sims' household.

MME. MARTINS, wife of the Brazilian Ambassador, will go to Philadelphia tomorrow to attend an exhibition of sculpture which consists of entries in a competition for a memorial statue, Mme. Martins has had a piece of her own work, the figure of an Amazon, accepted for the competition. She says that she is very proud to find herself among the illustrious company of exhibitors, among whom is the famous Paul Manship.

COUNTESS LASOCKA has returned from a trip to Mexico where she went to visit Count and Countess Roberti. She reports that while still missing their friends in Washington, the Robertis are happily settled in Mexico and are enchanted with the country and the life there.

THE BISHOP OF WASHINGTON and the headmaster of St. Alban's School for Boys have sent out invitations to commencement exercises which will take place on Saturday, June 1.

The prize-giving which follows is always a touching and amusing scene. If one glances around the audience at the parents one sees some of Washington's most dignified and distinguished men and women completely unaware of the rapture and anxiety shining from their faces. Surely Robert H. Jackson never looked as proud wnen he was made Attorney General of the United States as he did when his son, Bill, was winning prizes at St. Alban's. Nor does Mrs. John Caswell ever beam at a compliment to her own beauty as she does when congratulated on her son's scholastic achievements.

Biddles Hosts To Law Delegates At Dinner Party

The Solicitor General and Mrs. Francis Biddle entertained at dinner last evening, having among their guests several Pennsylvanians who are here to attend meeting of the Law Institute.

In the company were Justice and Mrs. Hugo Black, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Wolf Bickle, the former of whom is chief counsel for the Pennsylvania Railroad Co.; Judge John Biggs of the third Circuit Court of Appeals, and Mrs. Biggs; Mr. and Mrs. Spencer G. Nauman of Harrisburg, Pa., Robert T. MacCracken of Philadelphia, and Miss Marguerite Le Hand.

Earlier yesterday, Mr. and Mrs. Biddle entertained at a cocktail party for Pennsylvania members of the bar. Among their guests, also were several high ranking United States officials, including the Attorney General and Mrs. Robert H. Jackson, and several members of the Supreme Court.

Shirley Schwartz To Be Wed in Fall

Mr. and Mrs. Sol M. Schwartz announce the engagement of their daughter, Shirley, to Samuel Love, son of Mrs. Dave Love, of Syracuse, N. Y.

Rajamaitris Feted By Guggenheims

The Minister of Thailand and Mme. Rajamaitri were honored at a dinner party last evening by Col. and Mrs. M. Robert Guggenheim aboard their yacht Firenzie which is anchored off Hains Point. The party was in the nature of a farewell for the Rajamaitris leave Washington May 29 to return to Bangkok as the Minister is retiring. Covers were laid for 12.

On Thursday of next week Mrs. Guggenheim will entertain at a dinner in honor of Miss Ellen Flowerree who was presented to society this winter by her uncle, Clarence Hewes.

Club Reviews Long History At Luncheon

Columbia Heights Art Group Closes Season in Program

A history of the 40 years of the Columbia Heights Art Club was given yesterday at the closing luncheon of the season, by Miss Cornelia Hill, who has been a member for 34 years. Robert C. Hibben, the president, presided and introduced the eight past presidents.

The club met weekly until the World War, when the meetings were held fortnightly. In that time the programs have covered a study of the world, with the exception of South Africa.

Mrs. Hibben introduced past presidents as follows: Mrs. John W. Frizzell, Miss Hill, Mrs. DeWitt Croissant, Mrs. Arthur Seaton, Mrs. Anton Heitmuller, Mrs. R. Bruce Bare, Mrs. Elmer S. Frazier, Mrs. Charles K. Hooven.

Miss Maxine Mitchell, monologist and impersonator, who writes her own presentations, gave four selections, among them radio impersonations.

Mrs. Seaton sang a solo and accompanied the singing of songs which have been popular during the 40 years, led by Mrs. Gilchrist. The latter also conducted an information quiz on famous women.

Mrs. Ernest Humphrey Daniel, a member of the club and president of the District Federation of Women's Clubs, spoke briefly.

Among the guests were Mrs. Inez Sheldon Tyler, State president of the District League of American Pen Women and editor of "Blue Moon," poetry magazine; Mrs. George S. Duncan, Mrs. E. H. Pitcher, Mrs. S. J. Morris, Mrs. E. C. Alvord, Mrs. R. G. Richardson and Mrs. M. D. Morton.

Public Determines Type Of Films, Council Told

A. J. Brylawski and Mrs. Bettina Gunczy Agree Box Office Sets Standards In Talks to Motion Picture Group

By Jessie Ash Arndt.
The Post Club Editor.

Public opinion, expressed throut the boxoffice, largely determines the kind of motion pictures that are shown, it was agreed yesterday by A. Julian Brylawski, president of the Motion Picture Theater Owners Association of the District, and Mrs. Bettina Gunczy, secretary of the National Board of Review, in talks before the Motion Picture Council.

Mr. Brylawski, speaking briefly at the luncheon following the council's annual business session, declared there was no theater owner who could not regulate what pictures he showed. Block booking, he said, meant the exhibitor would get some poor pictures with the good but, if he made his money from the good ones and shelved the others, he could serve his patrons as well under this system as under that of individual selection of all films at greater cost.

Mrs. Gunczy traced the development of the motion picture councils, representing cooperation between the public and the theater owners. Approximately 78 per cent of the entertainment money is spent on motion pictures, she said, and it is as important to the picture interests to know what kind of movies the public wants.

There is an increasing use of motion pictures in both schools and churches, said Mrs. Gunczy. The work of junior groups that study the films either as a regular school course or extra-curricular activity is building discriminating audiences which will mean better pictures for the future, she predicted.

In this connection, Miss Ruth Stauffer, head of the English department in Washington schools, told of the increasing interest in motion picture units of junior and senior high schools here. Senior high school students are particularly critical of motion pictures in relation to their fidelity to books on which they are based, she said. Students read the books with more care and learn to study the characters and compare their delineation in literature with their dramatic portrayals.

Mrs. Frank A. Linzel was reelected president of the council at the business meeting preceding the luncheon; Mrs. C. Dwight Curtiss was reelected first vice president; Mrs. Edgar B. Meritt, second vice president; Mrs. Belle Parker, corresponding secretary; Mrs. G. R. Wilhelm, treasurer; Mrs. E. J. Ryan, program chairman; Mrs. Elmer Stewart, chairman of reviews, and Miss C. Virginia Diedel, counsel. The only new officer was Mrs. Hershey Monroe, elected recording secretary, succeeding Mrs. E. W. Chapin.

Congress Youth On Air Sunday

The annual Nationwide broadcast by children of members of the Congressional Club will be presented Sunday afternoon over N. B. C. blue network from 12:15 to 1 o'clock. The program will be presented from the clubhouse on New Hampshire avenue.

The program, as in former seasons, will comprise songs, and recitations by the boys and girls and will be under the direction of Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Ward. Mrs. John Sparkman, of Alabama, and Mrs. William Cartwright, of Oklahoma, are the club members in charge.

Those taking part will be Margaret Truman, Missouri; Cavin Dworshak, Idaho; Harriet and Roger Cooley, North Carolina Doralyn and Wilburta Cartwright, Oklahoma; Joan Lundeen, Minnesota; Julia Ann Sparkman, Alabama; Emma Mae and Mary Louie Hoak, Michigan; Jedolyn, Janelle and Joan Johnson, Oklahoma; Alice White, Ohio; Dick Downey, California; Marjorie Church, Illinois; Mary O'Neil, Kentucky; Diana Ball, Connecticut; Billy and Carl Buck, California; Helen and Nancy Clark, Idaho; Mary Gwynn, Iowa; Bob, Jack and Dick Boykin, Alabama; Sharon Ferguson, Oklahoma, and Daphne Mahon, Texas.

Alley Beauty To Be Sought

The Washington Council of Church Women, Mrs. Frank Linzel, president, through its juvenile court department with Mrs. Richard A. Sauer, chairman, has for one of its spring and summer activities the alley window box project with the theme—"Learning to Know God Better by Working With Him to Create Beauty."

The alleys have been surveyed by various churches and plans have been made for the boxes, the soil needed and for the plants.

Tonight, at the Federation of Churches' headquarters, 1749 N street northwest, a coaching conference will be held under the direction of Mrs. F. A. Surine, chairman of the project.

Miss Etta Mai Russell, Juvenile Court worker, will speak on the subject "How to Bring Religious Values to This Project." The Rev. Virgil Cosby will also speak.

During the last week in May these boxes will be set up with services of music, worship and instructions.

Give Dance Tonight

The D. C. Council and local chapters of Beta Sigma Phi will give their spring formal dance tonight from 10 to 1 o'clock, at Hotel 2400 Sixteenth street northwest. Marjorie Heekin, of Theta, is chairman of arrangements, assisted by Lorene Angell, of Zeta Mu; Ellamae Massie, of Gamma; Euline Gregg, of Epsilon; Elaine Chase, of Lombda, and Mrs. Ruth Hill, former council president.

Madame Chairman

Director of Institute of Women's Professional Relations to Meet With Group Here Monday

MRS. CHASE GOING WOODHOUSE, director of the Institute of Women's Professional Relations, will be in Washington Monday to discuss with a group interested in the organization, how it can better meet the growing demand for occupational information on the part of young people. A meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Donald Richberg.

The institute, of which Mrs. David Cushman Coyle is the Washington chairman, has much information on various fields of work for women. The question to be considered Monday will be how to get it into the hands of those who greatly need it.

A small part of the information is circulated, says Mrs. Coyle, through the medium of the quarterly, Women's Work and Education. There is enough to more than fill 10 such issues each year, but the present staff is too small to get out a monthly bulletin.

The institute receives 2,000 letters a year requesting information which it has available, but, were its services more generally known, ten times that number would come in, Mrs. Coyle believes.

Last fall a conference on work in the Government departments was conducted at the Mayflower Hotel, and largely attended.

NEW OFFICERS—The Ward Belmont Club has elected Mrs. T. David Gates as president succeeding Mrs. R. P. Armistead. Other new officers are Mrs. Raymond R. Zimmerman, vice president; Mrs. Cecil B. Dickson, secretary; Miss Nell Tyson, treasurer.

The club is planning a June picnic, of which Mrs. Turley Rankin will be in charge.

WOODRIDGE ELECTION—Mrs. Charles H. Pierce has been elected president of the Woodridge Book Club. Serving with her are vice president, Mrs. W. W. Bush; secretary, Mrs. William White; treasurer, Mrs. George T. Betz; chaplain, Mrs. Walter Lydenberg; librarian, Mrs. Wallace Perry; parliamentarian, Mrs. Louis Kreek.

Club to Honor Mrs. C. E. Hughes

When the Congressional Club entertains at a musicale-tea this afternoon, it will be reviving a pleasant custom, renewed by the club president, Mrs. Edward R. Burke, in honoring the wife of the Chief Justice of the United States, Mrs. Charles Evan Hughes, and the wives of the Associate Justices of the Supreme Court.

A musical program will be given by Mrs. Rose Berkshire, mezzo-soprano, who will be accompanied by Olga King-Smith, of the King-Smith Studio. Miss Beverly Cole, pianist, will also contribute to the program, as will the Marine Band.

Assisting at the tea table will be Mrs. Elmer Thomas, of Utah; Mrs. Carl Hatch, of New Mexico; Mrs. James Byrnes, of South Carolina; Mrs. Edwin M. Schaefer, of Illinois; Mrs. William H. Larrabee, of Indiana, and Mrs. John W. Boehne, of Indiana.

House Gets Idle Benefit Compromise

5th D. C. Bill Carries Approval Of Trade Board, A. F. of L., C. I. O.

By James D. Secrest

A fifth bill to amend the District Unemployment Compensation Act was introduced in the House late yesterday by Representative McGehee (Democrat), of Mississippi, after an agreement had been reached over its provisions by representatives of the Board of Trade, the American Federation of Labor and the Congress of Industrial Organizations.

All members of the McGehee subcommittee agreed to support the "compromise" measure, which will be called up before the House District Committee Monday and probably will be reported to the House for consideration on the next District day, May 27.

The bill represents further concessions to labor interests over the previous McGehee measure, which was blocked by a deadlock in the District Committee.

Representative Bates (Republican), of Massachusetts, while saying that he will support the new amendments, announced he would suggest to McGehee that the payroll tax be cut by means of a sliding scale below the proposed 2.7 per cent to prevent a further accumulation of the reserve fund.

New Bill's Provisions

A pay-roll tax of 2.7 per cent, instead of the present 3 per cent, limited to the first $3,000 of salary and retroactive to January 1, 1940.

Unemployment benefit payments based on 1-23 of the earnings in the high quarter; this is a compromise of 1-25, asked by employers, and 1-20 asked by labor.

Maximum benefits of $18 a week as against $15 at present and $20 asked by labor and $16 agreed to by District Committee last week. The minimum benefit will be $6.

Provisions for partial unemployment payments tightened so that no benefit is paid unless applicant earns less than weekly benefit allowance. When he earns less than weekly benefit, he will be permitted to earn 40 per cent of allowance before deduction is made.

Dependent benefits of $1 with a maximum of $3 a week and a total payment of $18 to a family.

Duration of benefits extended to 19 weeks with a proviso that payments shall be either 19 times weekly benefit allowance or 50 per cent of earnings in base period, whichever is lesser.

Qualifications Raised

Qualifications for benefits raised from minimum earnings of $125 to between $150 and $250. The latter works on a sliding scale, which requires that applicant, to be eligible, must have earned 25 times his weekly benefit allowance or $250, whichever is lesser.

The legislation, though the fifth bill introduced in the House this session, is the first upon which all factions concerned have agreed. Hope had been all but abandoned for liberalization of the District law at this session until spokesmen for the A. F. of L., the C. I. O. and the Board of Trade began holding unprecedented conferences. After three meetings, the compromise was announced.

The success of the latest compromise will depend on the ability of the District Committee to put it through the House at the next District Day, which probably will be the last.

Members of the subcommittee who approved the bill were Representatives Eberharter (Democrat), of Pennsylvania; Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois; McGehee and Bates.

Capital News In Brief

Debating Keys for 6

Six Catholic University seniors received debating society keys at a dinner gathering of the undergraduate forensic society at the Hotel 2400 last night. The Rev. Patrick J. O'Connor, moderator of the society, presented keys to: Walter Donovan, Cornelius Maloney, Stephen Castello, Edward Ribson, James Turner and William Emerson. John J. Hart was chairman of the affair. The Rev. Gerald Dillon, dean of men, and Dr. Robert Connery, chairman of the American citizenship committee, spoke briefly.

Editor to Speak

Dr. Harrison E. Howe, editor of Industrial and Engineering Chemistry magazine, will speak on the topic, "Chemical Penetration," at a meeting of the Washington Society of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, at 5 p. m. today at the Y. W. C. A., Seventeenth and K streets northwest.

Californians to Dance

The California State Society will turn out tonight for a program of festivity starting at 9:30 o'clock at Casino Royal, 804 Fourteenth street northwest. Club officials announce supper dancing and a floor show will be followed by the appearance of a mysterious "surprise" by guest entertainers.

Vesper Shows Tonight

The Vesper Club of Garden Memorial Presbyterian Church will sponsor an amateur show contest tonight at 8:30 o'clock at 1718 Minnesota avenue southeast.

St. Elizabeths Dance

The St. Elizabeths Hospital Recreation Association will hold a program of entertainment at 8 p. m. today at Hitchcock Hall on the hospital grounds. Included on the program are a one-act play, songs by the choral group, and dancing from 10 p. m. to 1 a. m.

The Pride of Georgetown University's R. O. T. C.

Yesterday was Military Day at Georgetown University and prizes were awarded to outstanding members of the university's R. O. T. C. Five of the winners and their awards are (left to right) Corpl. Edward J. McMahon, who won the Walsh Silver Cup for excellence in military science in the second year basic course; Private Carleton R. Sickles, who received the McCauley prize for excellence in first-year military science. Sergt. William R. Desobry, the Grattan prize for first-year advanced military science work; Capt. Francis P. Daly, winner of company commanders competition, received the Knights of Columbus Silver Cup, and Corpl. George I. Borger, jr., winner of the individual drill competition, was presented the Civilian Military Education Fund Award

Strikers Plan To Picket 12 Clothing Stores

Lines Will Be Set Up Today in Wage Row, Union Officials Say

Picket lines were scheduled to be thrown about 12 Washington clothing stores today in the strike of 50 to 60 employes in tailoring and alteration departments. The strike was called yesterday by Amalgamated Clothing Workers Local No. 118, a C. I. O. affiliate.

Representatives of the union said the strike followed six weeks of negotiation over increases in pay and involves 60 employes. The employers, in a formal statement, said they were ready to sign last year's contract, which expired April 25, but could afford no wage increases.

"The stores for a number of years have given to the union a 'closed shop.' The walkout was virtually complete in all of the twelve stores because of the closed shop operation.

"The strike was called after six weeks of negotiations had failed to bring an agreement from the union for a renewal of the contract with the stores.

"This year found the employers ready and willing, though scarcely able, to maintain the same scale as last year. The union refused to accept this."

Ruhland, Lynch Clarify Remarks On Dental Plan

Dr. George C. Ruhland, District Health Officer, and Dr. Daniel Lynch, president-elect of the District of Columbia Dental Society, yesterday issued statements to clarify their reported remarks Monday before the Washington Council of Social Agencies.

Dr. Lynch said the plan he discussed for dental care in dentists' own offices had not been officially approved by the Dental Society and would be expected to apply to low income rather than needy patients. He said the opinions he expressed were his and not those of the society.

Dr. Ruhland called attention to the fact that his department has pending before Congress a request to provide dental service in the new Southwest Health Center.

Georgetown U. Cadets Get Awards on Military Day

R. O. T. C. Receives 'Excellent' Rating As Prizes for Drill Are Presented; Irish Envoy Calls U. S. a 'Power for Justice'

Robert Brennan, Irish Minister to the United States, told the cadets of the Georgetown University R. O. T. C. yesterday afternoon that this country would be "a power in the cause of right and justice" if it were ever forced to resort to arms to defend democratic institutions.

"I hope you and your people never will be called upon to go into battle," he said at the annual Military Day exercises. "But if you have to get into a fight, go in to win it."

The Very Rev. Arthur A. O'Leary, S. J., university president, who introduced Mr. Brennan, congratulated the cadet corps on its success in receiving from the War Department the rating of "excellent" as a result of the recent official military inspection. This was the first announcement of the award.

Awarding of a score of prizes to the winners of recent drill competitions, held under the supervision of Maj. Charles E. Rayens, commandant at the university, featured the twenty-first annual exercises which brought all R. O. T. C. activities to an end for this year. Individual honor cadets of the battalion also were rewarded.

Silver cups in recognition of individual excellence in military science, offered by heads of departments of Georgetown, were made as follows:

Cadet Maj. Dexter L. Hanley, of Puerto Rico, second year advanced course, the Rev. Arthur A. O'Leary award; Corporal Edward J. McMahon, of Connecticut, second year basic course, the Rev. Edmund A. Walsh award; Corporal Joseph J. McDonald, of the District, second year basic course, the military department award; Sergt. William R. Desobry, of the District, first year advanced course, the Rev. John E. Grattan award; Private Carleton R. Sickles of the District, first year basic course, the Rev. David V. McCauley award.

Local students made almost a clean sweep in the competitive awards. The top prize for military leadership also was won by a District student, Capt. Jack B. Harloe, adjutant of the battalion. For this he received a wrist watch from Departmental Commander William T. Slattery, of the American Legion.

Company C won the company drill, and its commander, Capt. Francis P. Daly, of the District, was given the silver cup offered by the Washington General Assembly, Fourth Degree, Knights of Columbus. The presentation was made by Faithful Navigator Joseph M. McKenna. The Washington Chapter, Military Order of the World War, through its commander, Lieut. Col. Bynum K. Cash, presented insignias to Capt. Daly for the company officers, and the Rev. Francis E. Lucey, regent of the law school, made a presentation of distinguished service ribbons to all the company members through First Sergeant William V. Wixted, of Connecticut.

The individual drill competition was won by Corporal George I. Borger, jr., of the District, a member of Company A. The cup award was made by Lieut. Col. Ralph C. Bishop, secretary of the Civilian Military Education Fund. For winning the platoon commanders' competition, Lieut. Robert E. Dougherty, of Chevy Chase, Md., received the cup offered by Lieut. Col. Virgil O. Barnard, department president, on behalf of the Reserve Officers Association. Runners up in the individual drill competition was Private Lewis J. Wimsatt, of Chevy Chase, Md., also of Company A. He received the medal presented by Maj. F. X. Callahan, past commander of the District Commandery, Military Order of Foreign Wars of the United States.

Medals and minor "G" certificates were awarded by the Rev. John J. Kehoe, S. J., of the athletic department, to the seven members of the varsity rifle team making the highest scores. They were P. J. Clancy, J. H. Dettweiller, E. G. Kurdziel, S. J. Lawrence, F. E. Maloney, V. W. B. Wales and J. E. Whatton. The National Rifle Association medal for the highest score was awarded to Kurdziel, who is from Brooklyn, N. Y.

Silver medals were awarded to the ten freshmen rifle team members with the highest scores, as follows: W. S. Alexander, E. E. Beard, J. E. Bowes, C. O. Eakle, M. L. Garvey, R. H. Jones, C. W. Koburger, S. F. Latchford, R. H. Offutt and R. A. Sifre.

Father Kehoe also presented minor "G" awards to Herbert Moore, Joseph Rohrl and John Wade for outstanding service in the university band, and the band "G" to other members, as follows: Waldemar Behrendt, James Brown, Ralph de la Vergne, Edwin Dickey, Daniel Hurson, Charles Jarvis, John Nalley and Charles O'Hara. Each had served two or more years.

Clerk Chases Thief and Saves Needed Pay—Police Seize It

A 48-year-old postal clerk who had just been robbed of two weeks' pay, ran desperately for his money yesterday, and recovered it. Then the police took it for "evidence."

Isadore Levy, 1417 Maryland avenue northeast, who said he needed his midmonthly pay "very badly," felt a hand in his pocket as he was dropping a token in a street car fare box at Seventh street and Massachusetts avenue northwest yesterday afternoon. He grabbed, and turning, saw the hand, clutching a fist full of bills, belonged to a colored man.

The colored man bounded out of the street car, and Levy dashed after him. Once Levy caught his man, but he broke away. Then several citizens joined the chase, and three or four blocks up the street, the fleeing robber was downed.

Motorcycle Patrolman A. D. Clark arrived, and so did D. L. Dodds, of the traffic division. The officers ordered the robber to give up his loot.

Levy smiled. He hadn't lost his pay after all, and he would not have to tell a sad story to Mrs. Levy. He held out a palm as Clark and Dodds frisked the suspect, and extracted the $66 from a pocket.

"Thanks," said Levy. "I need that dough. I'm glad I'm getting it back."

"But you're not," replied Clark. "We need those bills for evidence, to convince the court that this man robbed you."

Symphony Fund Drive Is Extended

Volunteers Predict Victory Wednesday; $31,177 Needed To Attain Goal

The campaign to raise a minimum of $107,600 for the National Symphony Orchestra's 1940-41 season yesterday was extended until next Wednesday after volunteer solicitors reported a total of $76,822.46, or 71.13 per cent of the required sum.

L. Corrin Strong, Orchestra Association president said:

"With a few more days, there is no shadow of a doubt that we can end up with $108,000, plus $5,000 for the summer concerts," Strong told workers, who had unanimously indicated willingness to continue the drive.

Strong referred to the war abroad as an influence distracting public attention from the campaign, and Dr. Hans Kindler, orchestra conductor, said that "during these past days I have not been able to think even of the National Symphony Orchestra.

Dr. Kindler said that when his native country, Holland, was invaded, he offered himself to the United States State Department, and was referred to his Holland Legation. His services were made available, he emphasized.

The final report meeting will be held at 12:30 p. m. Wednesday at the Carlton Hotel.

Units reported, as follows:

Special Gifts, 347 pledges, $39,270.50; Business and Professional, 509 pledges, $9,759.12; Army, 309 pledges, $1,331.01; Associations, 648 pledges, $5,378.81; Education, 1,260 pledges, $3,234.99; Government, 392 pledges, $3,615.48; Navy, 143 pledges, $2,722.75; Orchestra Guild, 759 pledges, $8,805.10, and Suburban, 319 pledges, $2,704.70.

At an annual meeting of the National Symphony Orchestra Association yesterday afternoon the six members of the board of directors whose terms expired this year were reelected. They are Miss Mary B. Adams, Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, Mrs. Eugene Byrnes, Charles W. Elliot 2d, Mrs. Reeve Lewis and Mrs. Edwin B. Parker.

Mrs. Foster Adams was elected to the board to fill a vacancy created by the resignation of Paul Wilstach.

L. Corrin Strong was reelected president of the board, and Walter Bruce Howe and John Rowland Hill were reelected vice president and secretary, respectively.

M. J. Gormley, Former G. U. Student Killed

Michael J. Gormley, 22, former Georgetown University student, the son of the executive assistant of the Association of American Railroads, was killed yesterday morning in a copper mine at Walker Mine, Calif.

MR. GORMLEY

Young Gormley, whose family resides at 3416 Garfield street northwest, went to the West Coast last September for experience in the mining business, and obtained employment with the Anaconda Copper Co.

Born in Chicago, Michael had attended school at New Milford, Conn., and at Georgetown. He was a student at the local university for two years.

In addition to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Gormley, a brother and three sisters survive. Robert Gormley, the brother, is a lawyer in New York. The sisters are Mrs. William J. Williams, Tuckahoe, N. Y.; Mrs. John A. Shea, Washington, and Patricia Gormley, student at Georgetown Visitation Convent.

Wreco Merger With Utility Is Proposed

Release of Control Offer Made to SEC By North American

Release of its control of Washington Railway & Electric Co. and merger of that firm with Potomac Electric Power Co. was proposed yesterday to the Securities and Exchange Commission by the North American Co. as part of a program of disposing of $450,000,000 of its assets.

The company said it was offering the program in complying with the so-called "death sentence" clause of the Holding Company Act.

The program was outlined in a formal answer to the commission's order for suggestions on the geographical integration provisions of the law. Pointing out that it believed these provisions invalid, the company added it was offering the program nevertheless in line with what it believed to be "the views of the commission as to the operation" of the section.

The company would "reduce or modify" its form of investment in Washington Railway & Electric Co. by distribution of securities to the public. It pointed out that last year it paid out, as a special dividend to its stockholders, approximately 6 percent of its holdings to the local power company.

North American said its other investments here, including the Washington & Glen Railroad Co., the Washington Interurban Railroad Co., Washington Coach Co., Washington Suburban Coach Co., and Washington & Maryland Railway Co. already had been ended by dissolution of the companies. Its proposal involved changes in its holdings in Missouri, Wisconsin, Illinois, Kentucky, Iowa and Kansas.

80-Per Driver Wins Chase, Record Fine

The heaviest fine ever assessed in District Traffic Court, in the memory of attaches, was laid yesterday upon a 20-year-old youth who a few hours earlier had fled police in an 80-mile-an-hour chase.

Lawrence E. Wahl, of 4840 Conduit road northwest, was ordered by Judge George D. Nielson to pay $583 on being found guilty of third offense speeding, driving with a suspended permit, violating two "stop" signs and driving without lights.

According to A. H. Preusser and H. D. Larey, Seventh Precinct policemen, they chased Wahl along Reservoir road early yesterday at an 80-mile clip, in the course of which they accused him of going through two "stop" signs.

The pursuing scout car was eluded but Wahl was arrested in front of his home soon afterward by Policeman Sam Creech, posted at the residence after ownership of the fugitive car had been traced through tag numbers noted by Preusser and Larey.

Pleading not guilty, Wahl was fined $400 on two suspended permit charges, $150 for third offense speeding, $30 for stop sign violations and $3 for operating without lights.

Giving notice that he would appeal the verdict, the defendant was placed under $500 bond by Judge Nielson.

Main Break Cuts Off Water in N. W. Area

A break in a 12-inch water main in the 5900 block of Conduit road left a large section of northwest Washington without water for a time last night.

First Lady Backs Billion For Defense

Facing 'Sinister Power,' She Says In Address at Relief Meeting

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, in an address at a mass meeting on relief and unemployment last night, began with a declaration that "we need the vote in the District" and went on to uphold the President's request for more than a billion dollars for defense.

The mass meeting of more than 1,000 persons at Zion Baptist Church, 357 F street southwest, unanimously adopted a resolution asking for $1,506,000 to be added to the direct relief appropriation for the District.

After several speakers had pictured the plight of employables who cannot get direct relief and had criticized the expenditure of huge sums for armaments while other needs were unmet, Mrs. Roosevelt rose to make an intense address in direct response.

Warns of Nation's Risk

Speaking of local conditions, she said:

"I know of no place in the world where there is a better chance for 'passing the buck' than in the District of Columbia."

Pointing out that "getting the vote will not bring the millennium," she said:

"But getting the vote removes one excuse for not doing anything. And then we would have a way of calling people to account."

Then she warned that without an adequate defense program the Nation would "run the risk of being in the same position France and England are in today."

"You're facing a sinister power—with no scruples—that is not held back by ethical standards," she said.

"I don't mean that I think we face an invasion tomorrow. But every time we are not united, every time word goes back to Germany that we do not mean what we say . . . we are nailing one more nail in our coffin."

Tells of Nazi Contempt

"Germany," she said, "has a contempt for those who can't meet them on their own ground."

"I don't like to have to spend the money for armaments," she said, "but I'd rather spend whatever we must to keep our machines up, to be able to meet whatever is shaping."

The crowd, largely colored persons, overflowed the church. Others gathered in the basement to hear the speeches by amplifiers. Robert E. Bondy, District director of public welfare, was in the audience.

Sidney Katz, secretary-treasurer of the Maryland and District C. I. O., said the figure of 7,000 Washingtonians "facing starvation" was underestimated. He said that number was largely the heads of families, and that the total would be nearer 25,000. He criticized the public lack of attention to suffering in the District, while suffering in Europe claimed so much notice.

Lasser Speaks

David Lasser, national president of the Workers Alliance, declared that an "attempt is being made to solve unemployment in terms of war orders and armaments."

The Rev. Arthur D. Gray, chairman of the Washington Council of the National Negro Congress, and Howard Ennes, chairman of the Washington Youth Council, also criticized the inadequacy of the relief situation here.

The meeting went on record for giving direct relief to all unemployed, and to spend relief appropriations according to need "with no restrictions or monthly quotas on rate of payment."

Barlow's 1,000-pound bomb hangs on a scaffold, the liquid oxygen evaporating as the inventor waited for Congressmen to arrive

Goats Get a Reprieve as Inventor Barlow Blows Up And Walks Out on Test of Bomb, Leaving Officials Fuming

By the Associated Press

Aberdeen, Md., May 16.—Inventor Lester Barlow walked out on a scheduled Government test of his new liquid oxygen-carbon bomb today, leaving Senators, Congressmen and high-ranking Army officers fuming in a pouring rain.

Angered at a mix-up which left him ready to demonstrate but minus most of the members of the House and Senate Military Affairs Committees, which sponsored the test, Barlow asserted he was being "made a sucker," jumped in his automobile and drove away.

Later, after a conference with Senator Sheppard (Democrat), Texas, chairman of the Senate committee, whom he met on the road, Barlow agreed to postpone the show until May 23. Senator Sheppard promised jokingly that committeemen would be on hand "at least an hour ahead of time."

Meanwhile, 84 reprieved goats, tethered at varying distances from the test-bomb to determine its death-dealing effects, munched quietly the grass of the bombing range. The inventor had predicted most of them within a 1,000-foot range would be killed or stunned.

Senator Sheppard (left) listens to Barlow's heated explanation of his "walk out" as newspapermen and Army officers stand by in the rain

He refused to proceed with the test, he said, because Army officers ordered him to set up his 1,000-pound sack of explosive too soon. He was ready to detonate the charge, he asserted, before he discovered that few of the official observers had arrived.

Army officers denied orders had been given other than to clear the test field and to notify Barlow that the first observers had arrived.

The Congressmen came in three planes from Washington. The second plane had just landed at the airfield 12 miles away and a third was due in when Barlow was ready to shoot.

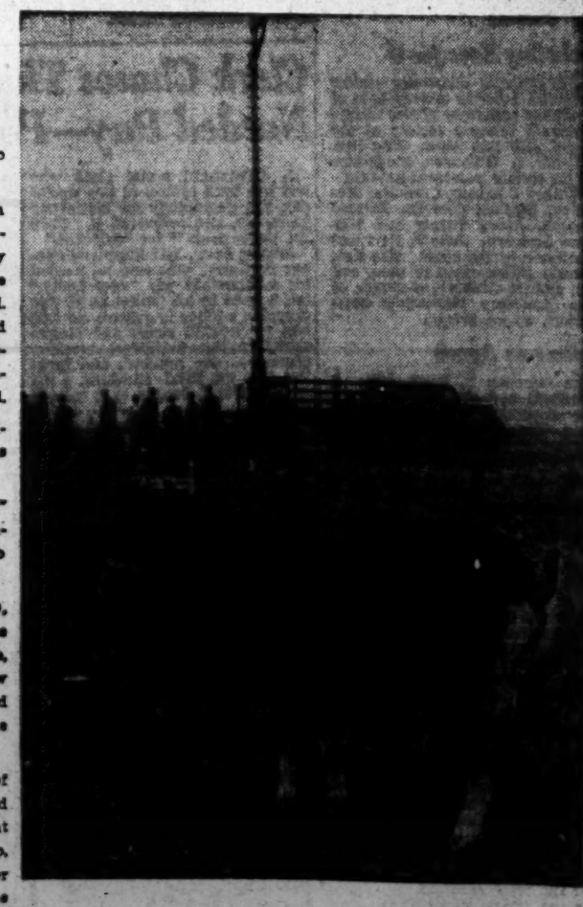
White clouds of escaping oxygen were plainly visible from the observers' platform, 2,500 feet away from the 30-foot pole on which the "gimite" bomb was suspended. Each minute, Barlow said, reduced the compound's effectiveness—a factor which would not have been involved had it been encased in metal.

After 20 minutes' delay, he estimated one-third of its potency was lost.

"My whole reputation is at stake," he said angrily. "I'd be the laughing stock of the Nation if this bomb doesn't go off."

Representative May (Democrat), of Kentucky, chairman of the House Military Affairs Committee, promptly asserted he felt Barlow was in contempt of Congress and was "running out" because he "didn't want to make the test."

Senator Reynolds (Democrat), of North Carolina, who commented philosophically that the goats, at least, benefited from the mix-up, said later after talking with Senator Sheppard that it appeared to be "all a mistake."



This goat, along with others in the herd, gained a reprieve from death yesterday when a mixup in the schedule forced postponement of a demonstration of the Barlow bomb

Red Sox Win, 7-5, Increase Lead to 3 Games

The Washington Post Sports

*X WASHINGTON: FRIDAY, MAY 17, 1940 23

Bob Dunkelberger Wins at Chevy Chase

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Cleveland, May 16.—Mr. Oscar Vitt, who manages the Cleveland Indians, is a very practical man and quite alive to the situation in the American League. His Indians are situated very nicely in second place at this writing and very much in the thick of the pennant fight. Moreover, the Yankees are mired in last place, nine games removed from the lead.

POVICH

But Mr. Vitt is not creating any fool's paradise for himself. He said so today. "This is all very wonderful," he said. "My idea of a perfect state of affairs in the American League is when the Yankees are in last place. And the deeper they're stuck in it, the better I like it.

"But," says Mr. Vitt, "I have a hunch that Joe Cronin and myself are sitting on top of a volcano. There's no sense mooning in a dream cottage on top of Vesuvius. She's apt to erupt. And so might the Yankees. When they start to roll, things are going to be different in this league—if they start. The thing we've got to do is kick the Yankees in the teeth while they're down. We don't want 'em even close."

Mr. Vitt and the Indians have revised their ambitions in the 1940 race. In Florida in the Spring the talk in the Indians' camp was of second place. The pennant was something quite beyond their reach, was the feeling at Fort Myers. But the Cleveland club was resenting the heck out of the fact that most of the critics, after conceding the pennant to the Yankees, also conceded second place to the Red Sox.

"Why the Red Sox?" asked Mr. Vitt at that time. "What do they have that we haven't got. Where are they going with that ten-cent pitching staff? They don't have a pitcher except Lefty Grove who could break into the Cleveland lineup, and he works only once a week. The Yankees may be the class of the league, but we're a better ball team than the Red Sox."

Vitt welcomes the current situation which finds his club battling the Red Sox for the lead and the Yankees far out of it. Boston is one club Vitt is convinced his Indians can beat out, and he is not exactly unhappy at the prospect that the club that beats out the Red Sox may win the pennant. It would be something of a feat for Mr. Vitt to win Cleveland's first pennant in 20 years, especially with his managerial contract expiring.

If pitching is, indeed, 60 per cent of a club's strength, as it has been frequently rated, then the Indians have a tremendous edge over Boston. The Red Sox pitching staff of Joe Cronin does not deserve mention in the same inhalation with the Cleveland gang of Bob Feller, Mel Harder, Johnny Allen, Al Milnar and Relief Pitcher Hatry Eisenstat.

The Red Sox, to beat Cleveland, will have to overpower 'em. They might, of course, do that. Boston used to have the edge in the infield, but not this season. Defensively, Lou Boudreau and Roy Mack are as good if not a better shortstop-second base combination than Joe Cronin and Bobby Doerr. Hal Trosky can field with the slowing Jimmy Foxx and at third base the Red Sox are pitifully outclassed. The erratic Jim Tabor is not in the same class with Ken Keltner who is the league's best third baseman.

Boston's catching staff of Peacock, DeSautels and Glenn compares sadly with Rollie Hemsley and Frankie Pytlak. It's the Red Sox outfield that is carrying the load. Ted Williams, Lou Finney and Roger Cramer will outfield and outhit Ben Chapman, Roy Weatherly and Jeff Heath but they'll have to outhit 'em by a tremendous margin to offset Boston's pitching deficiency.

Nine games behind the lead, the Yankees are in a sorry state. It may be too much of a margin to overcome, unless the Yankees begin to roll in the proverbial Yankee manner. But there is some doubt now that the Yankees still have what it takes. Clark Griffith always maintained that when Bill Dickey outlived his usefulness to the Yanks, the New York club would be through. Well, Dickey can't buy a base hit. He's batting only .150, and he's been benched. It may be only a temporary slump, but who can tell. Dickey has been around a long time.

The Yankees were supposed to snap out of it when Joe Di Maggio returned to the lineup, but he's been in there for a week now and there's been no improvement in the club's fortunes. The fact is that the Yankees hitting, their fielding and their pitching have suddenly gone to pot. Gomez is ailing, and they don't know when he can pitch. Charley Keller and Red Rolfe, like Dickey, can't buy a basehit.

As Vitt, says, it's all very wonderful for fellows like himself and Cronin. The only flaw is that the Yankees are still in the league and the race is still very young. Will the Yankee lethargy last? That's what Vitt very sensibly would like to know before he nurses any pennant notions to full bloom.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, May 16.—Just at the moment when the Brooklyn Dodgers were setting their most electrifying pace, Larry MacPhail, the boss, laconically pointed out that they wouldn't win the pennant and that it was unfair to expect them to do any better than third. They were lucky to have gotten that high last year, he added with crushing clarity.

CONSIDINE

At the time it sounded like sabotage. But even after the club's 13-inning victory over the Reds in this week's important series it began to be apparent that MacPhail was pointing out a simple truth that was obvious to all, except Brooklyn fans. We think the Reds will win it by 15 games, barring injuries to Walters or Derringer. To finish second the Dodgers will have to maintain their early season pace throughout the season, and that's about as possible as a 1918 Stearns Knight staying in high going up Pike's Peak.

For 20 years the Dodger batle cry has been "wait'll next year." This year it hasn't been heard, for it has been stilled by what a lot of citizens still fondly believe is the arrival of the millenium. But as a matter of fact, this is the first year there is any real basis in the wishful old battlecry. The year 1941 does promise to bring much young talent to the Dodger team. Championship stuff.

This current wonder team, in the final analysis, will be found to have been a makeshift, patched-together outfit, wise and stout-hearted and full of opportunism. But short-winded. You can't get up much more than a gallop during the dog-days of a baseball season when your team is loaded with the willing (but human) likes of Fred Fitzsimmons (39 years old), Gus Mancuso (35), Leo Durocher (34), Tex Carleton (34), Luke Hamlin (34), Tot Presnell (33), Babe Phelps (32), and Wyatt, Mungo, Walker, Vosmik and Tamulis, 30 or more.

The Dodgers who will be tough are the Dodgers who are just now ripening at Montreal, Elmira and those 11 other farm clubs which MacPhail has built up—and built well—in such a surprisingly small space of time. Kids like Ed Head, a young righthand pitcher with a world of promise, George Staller, who led the Eastern League in hitting last year, Pete Reiser, who is being converted into an outfielder, Steve Rachunok, now pitching for Montreal and a peck of others.

They're going to make a great ball club, when they're sifted in there amongst the 21-year-old Peewee Reese, 21-year-old Charlie Gilbert, 24-year-old Coscarart and Cullenbine, 25-year-old Lavagetto and Franks and the 29-year-old Camilli, who should be good for five more years. They look every bit as good or better than the farmhands now working on those far-flung Yankee plantations. And with Leo Durocher to keep them in a froth-making fervor, they're going to give those amazingly patient Brooklyn fans a real reason for forgetting the old slogan, "wait'll next year."

The current Brooklyn team has been keeping up a dizzy pace only through the good offices of a couple of relief pitchers. Almost without notice, the regular pitching force has gone to pieces. Nobody expected it to hold its opening gait, of course, for it gave up only 14 runs in winning its first nine games. But, on the other hand, no one expected Whitlow Wyatt to be knocked out of the box on four of his six trips there, or Hugh Casey to be exiled to the showers on his last three starts, or Hamlin to take the knocks he's been taking.

The Reds have easily kept abreast of the super-charged Dodgers all season, which must be discouraging to a team that is playing a giddy mile or two over its head. The Reds are playing well within themselves. Most of the players are having about the same kind of season they had last year, and when and if the time comes for them to slough off a bit, the slack should be taken up by Ival Goodman—who hasn't yet started to hit up to his 1939 style. They're in second gear and are keeping up with a Dodger team which is in high, raising cain and, unless all signs fail, about to blow a gasket.

What Macphail probably tried to do was stick together a good, plodding, experienced team this year—one that wouldn't blow up, and one that would beguile the easily pleased Brooklyn fans until the up-and-coming rookies were, brown on both sides. This must be true, for otherwise he wouldn't have dealt for Carleton and Vosmik and hung on to some of his other hardy perennials.

Claude Rippy Bows, 3 and 2, In 2d Round

Roger Peacock Wins Over Scarla, Allan; Burnett and Bogart Also in Semifinals

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Far off his medal winning performance but still good enough to beat John Brawner and Claude Rippy, Greensboro's Bobby Dunkelberger advanced to the semifinals of the thirtieth annual Chevy Chase Invitation Tournament yesterday with three outstanding amateur shotmakers from this city.

Although Dunkelberger's 3 and 2 victory over the 1938 and 1939 champion, Claude Rippy, of Washington Golf and Country Club, was the day's outstanding match, the manner in which Roger Peacock advanced bodes no good for his future opponents.

With the Southern amateur champion and Peacock in the semifinals is Volney Burnett, Beaver Dam, and District Amateur Champion Ralph Bogart, who meet Peacock and the North Carolinian, respectively, today.

Peacock Four-Putts First

Peacock, who won the Middle Atlantic championship over the same course last year without going past the fifteenth hole, four-putted the first green against Pete Scarla, a clubmate from Indian Spring, in the morning round but quickly pulled himself together and won, 7 and 6.

In the afternoon he was up against the finalist for the last three years, Frank Allan, of Pittston, Pa., but Roger played the game from tee to green just about as well as it can be played and turned Allan in by the same 7 and 6 margin, and needed par for a 69. He lost just one hole to Scarla, the first, and only the tenth to Allan, where he went for a birdie and three-putted. He is admittedly playing the finest golf of his tournament winning career.

Burnett and Ralph Quinter, jr., a former champion from the host club, played a give-and-take match in the morning, with never more than one difference until the eighteenth when Volney won the hole and the match, 2 up. In the afternoon Charley Malone turned loose his long game and had Burnett 3 down at the fifth hole, but the golfing fireman squared the match on the back nine and won six consecutive holes for a 4 and 3 triumph. He won the fourteenth by holing a chip shot out of a trap for his only birdie.

Bogart Wins Two

Bogart went through two opponents, M. Parker Nolan, Congressional, and Lionel Noah, Stamford, Conn., in somewhat the same fashion. He was 2 up on each at the turn and won both matches, 3 and 2, with par for a 74 against Nolan and par for a 75 against Nash.

Dunkelberger was a 6 to 5 favorite, according to the first tee bookmakers, against Rippy but Claude

Bees Lose 6th In Row; Cubs Win, 5 to 4

By the Associated Press

Boston, May 16.—Outhitting the opposition was unavailing to the Boston Bees today as they dropped their sixth consecutive game to the Chicago Cubs by a 5-4 margin in the series' windup.

The Bees connected against the veteran Bill Lee for nine blows, including three doubles and Al Lopez' two-run homer, as the visitors bunched their six safeties, all against Lefty Joe Sullivan, who was relieved in the eighth by Al Piechota.

Bill Herman's double, a single and a fly gave the Cubs two tallies in the first inning and, with two out in the seventh, Glen Russell moved them into a 3-2 lead by blasting a Sullivan pitch over the left field wall.

Before the Boston southpaw was yanked in the eighth, the Cubs added two more runs on Lee's double, Stan Hack's infield hit, and Herman's fly and Jimmy Gleeson's triple.

The Bees opened in impressive fashion against Lee, scoring twice to deadlock matters on successive singles by Rabbit Warstler, Bob Loane, Max West and Chet Ross.

After the Cubs pulled into the lead on Lieber's four-bagger, the Bees made another threat in their side of the eighth, which Max West opened with a double. Lee fanned Ross and forced Les Scarsella to fly out before Lopez poled a drive over the left-field wall for the last two Boston runs.

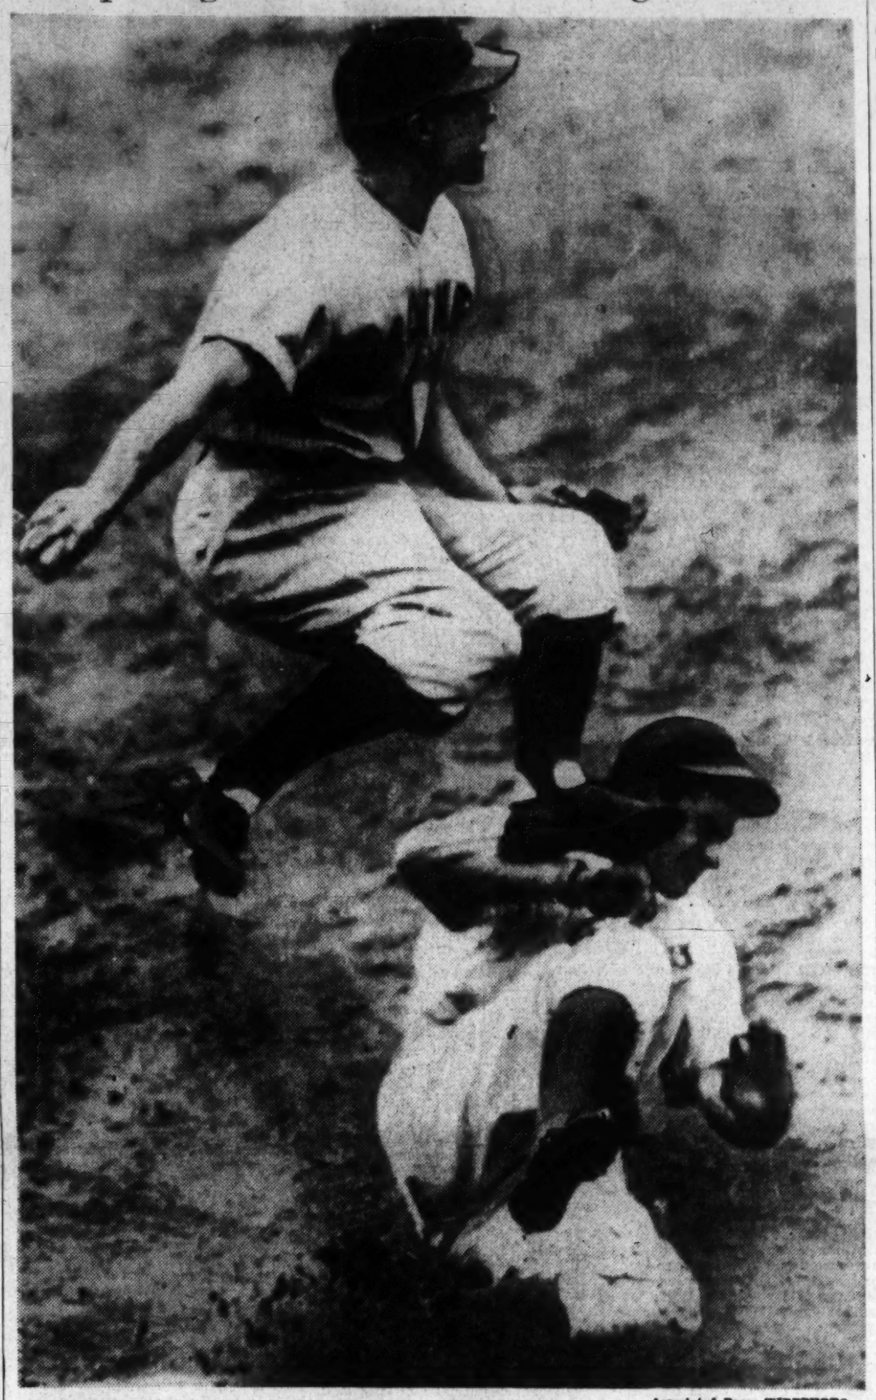
Leap Frog at Third in Reds-Dodgers Game



Associated Press WIREPHOTO

From the expression on his face, Cookie Lavagetto, of the Brooklyn Dodgers, isn't getting all the "kick" he appears to be getting out of sliding into third base in the second inning of yesterday's game with the Cincinnati Reds in New York. Cookie is in the act of knocking Billy Werber's feet out from under him. Cookie was out and the game was called in the fourth because of rain with the Reds out front, 2-1

Nats' Bosses Seeking Minor League Pitcher

By Shirley Povich.

A Staff Correspondent

Cleveland, May 16.—The moist delivery of that old Cleveland regular, A. Rainy Day, stopped the Nats with a no-hit, no-run, no-game performance today and gave Manager Bucky Harris opportunity to reflect on the sad estate of his pitching staff.

"It's short of a shame," mused Harris. "We're not a bad ball club. Decent kind of pitching would put us in the first division. We have the speed and enough power to score runs and we're all right defensively. Here's a pretty useful left arm you may have in exchange for one good pitcher."

Harris confessed that he and Clark Griffith have not been idle in the search for pitching talent. There's a deal brewing now, he said. It isn't going to land the Nats any certified big league hurler, but it will fetch them a nice sort of pitcher from the minors—Harris hopes.

No Time to Trifle

"We could have claimed Lee Grissom from the Yankees, and we could sign Willis Hudlin from the Indians," said Harris, but this is no time to trifle with bad-arm guys. Those clubs aren't letting any good pitchers get away. There's a fellow in the minors we're trying to get and he should help us."

Harris wouldn't reveal the identity of the minor league hurler he may come up with, but he is obviously pleased at the whole idea. "They tell me he can win in the big leagues and with my club he'll get a chance."

At present, the Washington pitch-

Maki Refutes Bad Heart Rumor, Runs

Los Angeles, May 16 (AP).—Refuting reports of a dangerous heart ailment, Taisto Maki, of Finland, ran 2 miles before noon today, planned another jaunt this afternoon and was pronounced in good condition by two doctors for his slated 2-mile race for the Finnish Relief Fund tomorrow night in Memorial Coliseum.

A checkup recently disclosed that Maki has an enlarged heart, but the examination today gave him the "go" signal for his battle with Gregory Rice, former Notre Dame distance star.

Three Navy Crews Leave for Races

Annapolis, Md., May 16 (AP).—The Naval Academy's three crews will leave here tomorrow for Philadelphia so they can work out on the Schuylkill River before participating in the Adams Cup regatta Saturday.

The middie varsity will row against Harvard and Pennsylvania for the Adams Cup. Columbia will be in the race but will not be eligible for the cup. Junior varsity and freshmen races between Navy, Harvard and Pennsylvania will be preliminaries to the main event.

Navy considers Harvard its chief contender in the race. The Crimson won the cup last year and seven of its varsity oarsmen last summer won the English Henley.

DiMaggio Denies Tie-up With Joe Gould

By the Associated Press

Chicago, May 16.—Baseball's No. 1 star, Joe DiMaggio, of the championship New York Yankees, went before Commissioner Kenesaw Mountain Landis today and denied as "completely untrue" reports that he was paying a percentage of his annual $35,000 salary to Joe Gould, New York prizefight manager.

"I spent only a short time with the commissioner and there is nothing to say except that he did ask about the Gould report, which I denied as completely untrue," said the Yankee outfielder, who was accompanied to the Landis office by the New York manager, Joe McCarthy.

Commissioner Landis had "nothing to say" about the case which came about by reports DiMaggio was paying Gould 12 per cent of his baseball salary and that Gould was passing on 2 per cent to Jimmy Braddock, former world's heavyweight champion and a Gould associate.

McCarthy, however, called news-

Sarazen's 31 Sets Goodall Golf Pace

Beats Pose, Picard 8 Up in First Round At Fresh Meadow; Tied by Jim Thomson

By Henry Super

United Press Staff Writer

New York, May 16.—Swaggering little Gene Sarazen returned to the scene of his greatest triumph today, added another record to his collection and went into the lead with hard-hitting Jimmy Thomson on the first round of the $5,000 Goodall Round Robin Golf Tournament.

On the Fresh Meadow links where he roared through the last 28 holes of the 1932 Open championship in 100 holes, Sarazen today posted a crackling 31 for the back nine that shaved a stroke from the record he set for the distance on the third round of that memorable open.

Before he went out, Gene said that victories scored on the winter circuit meant little—that the man who could go on a championship course like Fresh Meadow was a "real golfer." Then, as if to prove his point, Sarazen went out and licked both Martin Pose, of Argentina, and Henry Picard, P. G. A. champion, by four holes each for a total of eight points. He shot a par 39—31—70—the best round of the day.

Ties for Lead

Thomson, putting and chipping better than ever before, had 35—37—72 and also beat each of his opponents—Craig Wood and Jimmy Demaret—by four holes to tie for the lead with Sarazen.

Tomorrow the boys go out on two rounds in this 126-hole tournament where every starter faces the other 14 men in the field in seven match play threesomes. Points are figured on a basis of net holes won against the two men in each match.

A stroke off the pace was Clayton Heafner, the Linville, N. C., "Candy Kid," who posted a 37, 37—74 for seven points earned by a three-hole victory over Horton Smith, and a four-hole victory over Dick Metz.

Next came Ben Hogan and Paul Runyan, who deadlocked with four points. A point behind them with three was Sammy Snead. Byron Nelson, National Open champion, had a plus one for his day's work, while the others were strung out in the minus column down to a deficit of seven points fo rLawson Little, former British and American Amateur king.

Point Standing

The point standing: Gene Sarazen, plus 8; Jimmy Thomson, plus 8; Clayton Heafner, plus 7; Ben Hogan, plus 4; Paul Runyan, plus 4; Sam Snead, plus 3; Byron Nelson, plus 1; Jimmy Demaret, minus 2; Horton Smith, minus 2; Martin Pose, minus 4; Henry Picard, minus 4; Dick Metz, minus 5; Jimmy Hines, minus 5; Craig Wood, minus 6; Lawson Little, minus 7.

Results: Thomson defeated Wood, 4 holes, and Demaret 4 holes; Demaret defeated Wood, 2 holes; Hogan defeated Hines, 3 holes, and Nelson 1 hole; Nelson defeated Hines, 2 holes; Sarazen defeated Pose, 4 holes, and Picard 4 holes; Picard and Pose, all even; Runyan defeated Little, 4 up, and played all even with Snead; Snead defeated Little, 3 holes; Smith defeated Metz, 1 hole; Heafner defeated Smith, 3 holes, and Metz 4 holes.

League Won't Get Reds' Protest, Ford Frick Says

By the Associated Press

New York, May 16.—Ford C. Frick, National League president, announced today that the protest filed by the Cincinnati Reds concerning their game with Brooklyn last Tuesday cannot be considered by the league office inasmuch as it involved only the matter of an umpire's judgment.

The incident involved a ball hit through the pitcher's box and which Bill McKechnie, Red manager, claimed struck Umpire Bill Klem. Klem denied the ball touched him and permitted Leo Durocher, Brooklyn manager who was on second base, to advance to third. He would have been forced to remain on second had the ball struck the umpire.

Extra-Base Hit Barrage Stops Browns

Boston Artillery Captures 7-to-5 Battle With 6 Extra-Base Hits

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, May 16.—The league leading Boston Red Sox lambasted three St. Louis Browns pitchers for 14 hits, six of them for extra bases to win, 7 to 5, today and boost their margin over the idle second-place Cleveland Indians to three full games.

Manager Joe Cronin's clouting Beantowners bunched six straight blows off Vernon Kennedy and Emil Bildilli for five runs in the third, added another in the seventh on Jimmy Foxx's ninth home run of the season and finished with another tally in the ninth.

Rightfielder Lou Finney opened the big third inning for the Red Sox with a homer on the pavilion roof. Roger Cramer, next up, tripled and Ted Williams and Foxx singled before Bildilli replaced Kennedy on the slab.

The St. Louisans nicked Denny Galehouse, Boston's starting hurler, for a run in the third, two in the fourth and another in the fifth but Rookie Herb Hash took over the Red Sox pitching chores in the sixth and protected the Croninmen's margin. Galehouse was credited with the victory.

Yale Is Foe Tomorrow At Stamford

Unbeaten Hoyas Meet Bulldogs on Connecticut Course; One Place Is Open

Unbeaten in five matches in the Southern section of the league, and victorious in 36 out of 45 matches, the Hoyas are slight favorites over the Bulldogs, who won the Northern section with the same won and lost record.

The championship will be decided in a 36-hole morning and afternoon match.

Two local boys, both unbeaten in individual and best ball matches, Buddy Sharkey and Billy Shea, are assured of starting positions against Yale along with Johnny Burke, Joe McBride and Frank Galvin.

The other three who made the trip, Ray Higgins, F. X. Van Herpe and Dick Hardy, will play a round this afternoon, and the low scorer will play in the sixth position. The other two will be available as alternates.

Maryland-Hopkins Meet for Nation's Lacrosse Title

The presence of John Tolson, rated the best defense man in the game, in the Blue Jay lineup, is expected to give the Baltimoreans the edge, in addition to greater reserve strength. The records are similar, both unbeaten in college competition.

The championship lacrosse match is the final home athletic event of the season for the Terps. The baseball team plays at Washington and Lee today and V. M. I. tomorrow.

Goodall and 'Met' Opens, Followed by Open And P. G. A. May Find New Champions

By Bill Boni.
Associated Press Sports Writer.

New York, May 16.—Comes May, and the professional golfer hauls his suitcase out of the closet, has his car overhauled and greased, and goes back to the tournament circuit he quit in Carolina, or Georgia just a month ago.

While May means only a sudden onrush of lessons for the golf professional, to the professional golfer it means he'll be back with his cronies, playing the shots on the course in the morning and afternoon and replaying the shots he missed in the hotel lobby at night.

Starting with the Goodall round-robin yesterday at the Fresh Meadow C. C., only a good brassie shot from the New York World's Fair grounds, the boys will back in there putting for dollars, doughnuts and a new outfit for the little woman. Many of them will be familiar to you—Cooper, Guldahl, Sarazen, Snead, Thomson, Runyan, Little, Nelson, Wood, McSpaden, Picard, Metz and such.

Be on Lookout

But there are a few, who will deserve your attention even though they now are simply names in the scoring lists and pictures in the papers.

We urge you to look for such gents as Jimmy Demaret, Ben Hogan, Jim Ferrier, Martin Pose, Eddie Oliver, Jimmy McHale, Lloyd Mangrum, Johnny Bulla and Clayton Heafner.

Though all of these lads are either comparatively or virtually total newcomers, it would be no great surprise to find among them the winner of the Goodall, or the Metropolitan Open, which comes the following week, or even the National Open or the P. G. A.

If you followed the results on the last winter tour, you know about Demaret (pronounced Dee-merit). You know, then, that he is a colorful gent, with wide-open features burned to a terra-cotta hue by wind and sun, a ready, flashing smile, and a general air of camaraderie.

In this, he is in direct contrast to Hogan, who plays out of White Plains (N. Y.) and has runner-up to Demaret for the winter.

Hogan is serious, almost grim, about his game. He has had a hard fight to get to the top, and he obviously hasn't forgotten that. When the day's play is over he can be as sociable and friendly as the next one. But between that drive off the first tee and the last putt on the eighteenth green, he is all business and he means it.

Victories His Reward

Ben, at 27, figures that his feat of winning three successive Carolina tournaments with a total score 34 under par for 216 holes was his reward for years and years of patient practice.

A wiry 140-pounder with broad shoulders, but virtually no hips, he generates startling power with his whip-lash swing from strong wrists and powerful hands. This in itself may tend to shorten his career as a top-flight campaigner, for even the best pitcher can't keep burning them in forever.

Lloyd is the second of the Mangrums to attain golfing eminence. His brother Ray was so much a thin man that he used to be known as the "Human No. 1 Iron." For Lloyd, who isn't any more substantially built, that would have to be changed to a No. 7. This is his favorite club, the one that did heavy duty while he was shooting the first-round 64 at Augusta to break all records for championship competition in this country.

Having dealt exclusively with professionals so far, we come now to Jim Ferrier, largest of our newcomers. The Australian, open and amateur champion of his native land in 1938 and 1939, stands about 6 feet 3, weighs some 215 pounds, and has the sandy hair and ruddy complexion that go to make up our typical picture of the healthy Briton.

Outside of his own size, the first thing you're likely to notice about Ferrier is the size of his driver. Jim uses a 17-ounce club with a whippy shaft, something which shocked Walter Hagen.

Impressed With Putting

The next remarkable thing about Ferrier is his putting. Even in the first two tournaments he played in this country, after landing at Los Angeles and driving across the continent, the touring pros were impressed tremendously with his skill and touch on the greens.

Next on the foreign list comes Pose, the Argentine open champ.

Pose is full of excellent golf shots. At Augusta, his first tournament in this country, he naturally was a bit off his feed. He and Enrique Bertolino had been on the boat for 19 days, they'd spent 20 hours on the train from New York, and they had only two days in which to practice.

If you think it overly venturesome to predict that Pose will win a major United States tournament, remember that last year, in the British Open, he missed victory under miserable weather conditions by only five shots—two of which he lost because he could not read English including a sign defining a hazard. He also holds the open title.

Returning to the home-breds, we find four left of the eight men we enumerated—Oliver, McHale, Bulla and Heafner. All are big lads, Oliver a 225-pounder, Bulla and Heafner both husky and over six feet, and McHale tall, lean and broad shouldered.

Sarazan Likes Style

McHale is one of those comparatively rare professionals, a converted amateur. Gene Sarazen, who saw quite a lot of him during the winter, picked him as the outstanding one of the younger crop so far as pure style and swing were concerned. Gene tempered his praise with an indictment of the youngster for playing too many dumb shots. But since McHale himself, the son of a former Boston Red Sox outfielder, was the first to concede that, it appears likely he'll improve along those lines in the future.

Assistant now to Ed Dudley at the Philadelphia Country Club, he has had less competitive experience than the other three. All of them played in the open at Philadelphia last year, an dall qualified automatically for this yer's tourney, June 4-8 at the Canterbury G. C. near Cleveland.

Bulla, in fact, was the 54-hole leader at Philadelphia.

Oliver, also an consistent money winner and the lad who took down first prize in the Bing Crosby Tournament is another who could stand a bit of settling down. During the tag-end of the winter swing he got disgusted with his own clubs and played with a borrowed set of irons the rest of the way.

North Carolina Enters 37 in S. C. Track Meet Today

By the Associated Press

Williamsburg, Va., May 16.—The University of North Carolina favored track team will send a 37-man juggernaut into the preliminaries of the eighteenth annual Southern Conference meet here tomorrow afternoon.

The well-balanced Tar Heel team, conference outdoor and indoor track titlists for the past two years, will have at least four men entered in all of the 14 individual events but the pole vault.

The University of Maryland, ranked along with Duke as a strong contender for the championship honors, has listed 17 competitors, mostly running specialists. Duke has the second largest number of men entered with 22.

Richmond, undefeated in dual engagements, is sending 18, the host William and Mary squad 15. Washington and Lee 11, N. C. State, Wake Forest and Davidson 6 each, V. M. I. 2 and South Carolina 2.

Clemson had planned to send eight men, including Banks McFadden, a five-event performer, but canceled the entries due to final examinations. Virginia Tech, Furman and the Citadel will be also without representation.

Lefty Gomez to Go To Johns Hopkins For Ailing Back

By the Associated Press

New York, May 16.—Lefty Gomez, the Yankees' southpaw pitcher, conferred with the club's president, Ed Barrow, today and decided to go to Baltimore to have his ailing left side and back examined by Dr. George Bennett, of Johns Hopkins Hospital.

Gomez injured his side while pitching in last fall's World Series against the Cincinnati Reds. He was sent back from the Yanks' current western trip, arriving by plane last night.

"My arm is fine," he told Barrow today. "But the muscles in my side tighten up whenever I start to pitch. I'll have Dr. Bennett look me over."

Dunkelberger Beats Rippy; Peacock Wins

Burnett and Bogart Win in Chevy Chase Invitation Tourney

was in the grips of a bad round and couldn't shake the Southern Amateur champion loose. They halved the first five holes with sloppy golf and a putt dropped in for Dunkelberger on the sixth after even he had given it up. He won the seventh with a great spoon second shot but lost the eighth to Rippy's fine chip shot and turned 1 up, with a 39 to Rippy's 40.

The featherweight linksman from California dropped a 6-foot birdie putt on the eleventh and won the twelfth with a par after playing one of the greatest shots of the tournament out of a trap where his ball was completely buried. The match ended on the fifteenth when Rippy chipped over a stymie into the cup and Dunkelberger followed by dropping a 6-footer to protect a dormie three-hole margin for the match. He had par for 72.

Burnett and Peacock will renew an old rivalry this morning with the latter out for revenge for last year's District Amateur defeat. Burnett is dangerous but Peacock's tournament play stamps him as the favorite. Bogart is conceded a chance against Dunkelberger but the locker room talk last night was a Peacock-Dunkelberger final at 2 p. m.

Lew Jenkins Offered Bout Here June 17

Lightweight Champ Offered $3,000 for Overweight Fight

Undisturbed over the failure of his N. B. A.-recognized world's featherweight championship fight to draw the fans, Promoter Joe Turner yesterday announced he had wired Lew Jenkins, new lightweight champion, a $3,000 offer for an over-the-weight battle here June 17.

The offer was made through Hymie Caplin, manager of Jenkins, in Dallas, Tex., Turner said. The prospective opponent for Jenkins would be Washington's Carl Guggino.

Matchmaker Gabe Menendez and Turner had been negotiating with Jenkins for a battle here before the Texan recently knocked out Lou Ambers to win the lightweight crown in New York.

Meanwhile, rumors flew thick and fast yesterday that Goldie Ahearn has the rights to the services of Harry Jeffra, of Baltimore, if he wins his Maryland and New York-recognized featherweight title fight Monday night in Baltimore with Joey Archibald.

Reports are that the advance sale for the Baltimore fight already has far surpassed the $2,400 gate drawn by the Scalzo-Covelli business. Jeffra and Archibald meet at Carlin Park Coliseum.

If Jeffra wins, it is Ahearn's plan to attempt to match him with Scalzo in a final effort to iron out the featherweight title muddle. Main hitch is that Turner claims exclusive rights to Scalzo's services here.

Porgie and Bass Biting Freely At Ocean City

Special Dispatch to The Post

Ocean City, Md., May 16.—The 1940 fishing season was made "official" here today with the first large catches of porgie and bass, and some scattering catches of weakfish and croakers also were made by local bottom fishermen.

With pier anglers hauling in the first kingfish, catches this week indicate the bottom species are here to stay for the season. Game fishing captains also report the arrival of the bluefish vanguards, along with a scattering of mackerel hovering in offshore waters. The first channel bass were taken by pound net fishermen yesterday but the majority of the catches were sea bass and porgies.

W.-L. Netmen Take Two Matches in Two Days

Victorious in its first two starts, Washington-Lee High School's tennis team yesterday settled down to work for its Monday date with Gonzaga in Washington.

The Little Generals, entering inter-scholastic tennis for the first time, defeated George Washington High in Alexandria, 6-1, Tuesday and turned back Wilson at the Pierce Mill courts in Rock Creek Park, 4-3, Wednesday. The team is coached by J. C. Lewton.

G. U. Nine Host To West Va. Today at 2:30

Seek 10th Victory in 12 Games; Powers Gets Pitching Assignment

Georgetown University's baseball team goes after its tenth victory in 12 games this afternoon when it meets the University of West Virginia's nine on the Georgetown Medical School diamond at 2:30 o'clock.

The Mountaineers recently subdued Temple University's nine with a 17-hit attack and are boasting their finest representation in years.

Vinnie Powers, recent shutout conqueror of Maryland, will go to the firing line for the Hoyas. West Virginia will counter with either John Bennett or Vic Kernosky.

While the baseball team is meeting West Virginia, the Georgetown tennis team will play host to Maryland on the Hilltop courts at 2:30 o'clock.

Georgetown's track and field team journeys to Morgantown, W. Va., for a dual meet with the University of West Virginia's representation.

Martinelli, Krauser Draw In 60 Minutes

Irish Angel Throws Zim Zam Zum in 27 Minutes at Arena

The first 60-minute draw at Turner's Arena in half a decade was run off last night, with Karol Krauser, the Polish strong man, and Gino Martinelli waltzing to a standstill and losing 11 pounds between them for their pains.

When the final whistle blew, Karol had Martinelli pinned to the canvas, but Gino saw to it that Referee Benny Bortnick was out of the picture by clamping his favorite clutch on Bortnick.

One thousand fans sat through the routines and gave the two groan artists a large ovation at the end. In the semifinal, Zim Zam Zum was bounced about by the Irish Angel and was subjugated after 27½ minutes with a flying scissors.

In the preliminaries, Benny Rosen disposed of Al Norcus in 11½ minutes, Pat Corrigan and Juan Olaguivel drew and Felix Slovikowski tossed John Melas in 11½ minutes.

Reeves Defeats Solly Krieger

Cleveland, May 16 (AP).—Jimmy Reeves, dusky Clevelander, stepped into line tonight for a possible shot at the world light-heavyweight boxing crown with a decisive 10-round decision over Solly Krieger, of Brooklyn.

There were no knockdowns, but Reeves had Krieger reeling on the ropes at the end of the ninth round. The former world middleweight champion failed to win a round as the young Clevelander outboxed him and beat him at his own game—slugging.

It was Reeves' fourteenth victory in 15 pro fights.

Di Maggio Denies Tie-up With Gould

men together and said Landis asked DiMaggio bluntly whether he was giving Gould any of his Yankee salary. When DiMaggio said he wasn't, McCarthy reported, Landis indicated the case was closed. McCarthy said his (McCarthys) only concern was whether DiMaggio was sharing his Yankee salary with a manager. The Yankee manager said he was not interested in what DiMaggio did with his earnings outside of baseball nor with whom he shared them.

DiMaggio, who laughingly said Landis had "sort of indicated" Joe was not to say anything about the short morning conference, left the city on a short motor trip. The DiMaggio-Gould case first came up in 1938 when Gould reportedly was advising DiMaggio on a holdout which lasted until April 20, when Joe signed for $25,000 after asking $40,000. At that time DiMaggio and Gould both told Yankee officials there was nothing to reports they were financially associated.

Washington Horse Show Starts Today at Meadowbrook

Finest Horses In East Here To Compete

First Event Listed For 9 A. M.; 154 Entered in Three-Day Equine Show

By Anne Hagner

Several million dollars worth of horses and necessary addenda, which have been whiling away their time at Meadowbrook since early this week, will commence heavy action today in the Washington Horse Show, which opens at 9 a. m. in Chevy Chase and continues through tomorrow and Sunday.

Because "back-stage" atmosphere is as interesting in the horse show game as in the theater, idle visitors to the show grounds have found almost as much to amuse them during the past few days as they will during the actual show.

With 154 of the East's finest horseflesh on hand, the actual worth of the stables at this moment closely approaches the value of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing. In addition to such famed mounts as Illuminator, Lew Dunbar, Hexameter, Little Flight, Billy Do, Scotchwood, and Bon Diable, there's an untold quantity of equipment that, if properly estimated, would sound more like the national debt than the cash outlay for a sport that ranks low on the list of American pastimes.

Plenty Activity on Grounds

Despite mud and intermittent showers at Meadowbrook yesterday, much was going on in every quarter. Large puddles of water all around the barns made navigation difficult for hardworking stable boys, but none-the-less entertaining for visitors.

Horses received, for the most part, light morning workouts in preparation for today's activity. The Springsbury Farm's 11-hand pony sensation, Victorian II, was one of the few mounts to school in the treacherous going, and with no difficulty at all popped over a high plank fence that was inches better than 4 feet high, with the mud an additional handicap.

The famous Untermyer string of hunters from Greenwich, Conn., shown by Patricia Bolling, were among the first arrivals at the show grounds last Monday and have had ample time to become thoroughly acclimated. The quartet, including Illuminator, Hexameter, Pharabang and Crystal Eagle, have been giving bystanders the treat of watching some of the country's best hunters quietly grazing on the lush grass around Meadowbrook.

Nearly all the exhibitors from a distance sent their horses early in the week, but yesterday marked the arrival of Elizabeth Lloyd's big chestnut, Fire Chief, who jumped off at 6 feet in last fall's Warrenton show to win a third-place ribbon. The gelding, with his name emblazoned in foot-high letters on his blue blanket, joined other horses from the vicinity of Charlottesville, Va., including Mr. and Mrs. W. Haggin Perry's Scotchwood, Bo Bend, To Victory, Zarp, Demopolis, Weather Permitting, and Santa Claus.

Elaborate Tack Rooms Installed

Springsbury, owned by Mr. and Mrs. George P. Greenhalgh, was the first to install the elaborate tack room that is so much a part of "big-time" shows. Spectators at Meadowbrook this weekend should take time out to journey to the barns, for all the large stables go after the cash prize for the best tack room and vie with each other in flashy accessories, pictures, gleaming metal, and gay stable colors.

Dr. Lewis M. Allen and Mrs. John Hay Whitney's strings are managed by Norman Haymaker, who has mebers of both stables in excellent shape. Dr. Allen's include Will Prevail and Clifton's Lad, and Mrs. Whitney is showing Bon Diable, Faithful Heart, Missing Caddy, The Bear, Spring Hope and Airy Spirit.

Featured on today's card is the three-day jumper event; the Peter Voorhees DeGraw Memorial Trophy, for local hunters; the open working hunters, and the knock-down-and-out.

Central's Unbeaten Baseballers Possess Abundance of Confidence in Their Ability

'Gas-House' Attitude, Plus Heavy Hitting Brings Good Results

By Bill Burnett

This Central High baseball team, despite what you see in the papers, isn't half as good as it's cracked up to be. At a conservative estimate, it's twice as good—to hear Central players tell it.

Maybe that's why the Vikings haven't been beaten in scholastic play this year. That's why they're undefeated in four interhigh league games. That, too, might be why they're going to win their second consecutive public school title this year, barring one of the worst letdowns possible.

Cocky is the word for the Vikings, who prefer being called "Gas-Housers." Even before the umpire exercises his little broom on home plate, adjusts his gear and howls "Play ball," the game is in the bag as far as Central is concerned.

Boss of the nonchalant nine, and responsible as much as the individual talent of the team for its success, is Coach Jack Ray. He allows himself 50 words and exactly no smiles per game. With hat cocked over his eyes, the dour mentor sends his first man to the plate with the involved instructions—"Slam it!"

Fenlon Batting Over .400

A batting average of over .400 indicates that Pat Fenlon, lead-off man, follows the order pretty well. The 160-pound second baseman, who hasn't really started to grow yet, is as fast and effective with the bat as a coach could wish. He's one of the reasons why big league scouts have swarmed around the Vikings' games this year.

Second man in the batting order is Zello Lagos, probably the second-best hitter on the club. The bow-legged catcher or outfielder, as the case may be, usually brings along a girl friend to watch him play what he admits is a devastating game. He waves at her, rubs his hands in the dirt and generally clocks the first pitch for a clean single.

Harold Evans, outfielder, is strictly a slugger. His drives go for extra bases—when he connects. Otherwise he strikes out. A sucker for a fast curve, he nevertheless has the most authentic big league stance on the team.

Bleacherites have a field day when the next player comes up. He's Benny Steiner, the shortstop who makes no bones about his talent. From all sides come shouts of "You're a bum, Steiner" as the good-looking youngster swings a couple of bats. Hisses of the opposition seem to be music to Benny's ears. As some heckler starts off "What makes you think you're good enough for the maj——" Benny sends a screaming triple to center and bows at his antagonist. He hits to either right or left, depending upon the position of the fielders.

Di Blasi a Slugger

With the advent of Sam Di Blasi at the plate, Central's stick punch is about over. Sam is batting a cool .500, thinks he's an even better player than that. He's another slugger, though nobody fools him on curves. He can choke up for a single if necessary.

Down the list come Dick Mosser, Johnny Whalan, and finally Billy Fisher. Most of them can't hit a little. Yet they expect base hits and scream if they don't get on first. Fisher is the Lefty Gomez of the interhigh series. He knows he can't hit, doesn't try too hard. His job is pitching.

That Billy carries his share of the burden is manifest in the Vikings' utter confidence in their chances when the club takes the field. Fisher will fan at least half the opposing batsmen, they know, leaving the other half to ground or fly out easily.

With Coach Ray, Fisher and five heavy hitters on the club, then, it's no wonder Central knows its good. That's all you need for a good high school club—maybe even a good major league club.

Central High Nine Is Host To Roosevelt

Their schedule brought to a halt Tuesday by the competitive drill, interhigh baseball clubs break out in a rash of action today, three games being listed.

Highlight will probably be Roosevelt's attempt to topple Central, the defending titlist, from its undefeated perch atop the standings. The game takes place at the Central stadium, and like Wilson's battle with Eastern at Lincoln Park and Western's scrap with Anacostia on the "flats," starts promptly at 3:30.

Though Central can hardly be bothered by a loss to the Riders, Eastern's and Western's games mean more than a little to them. Eastern sneaked into second place last week by turning back the Raiders in extra innings, but it must continue the pace to stay in the first four in the standings.

Meanwhile Bethesda and Blair, prepping for the playoff of their tie in the unofficial Montgomery County League, square off with Briarley Military Academy and National Training School, respectively. Both games will take place on the diamond of the last mentioned.

'Skins Receive SignedContract Of Will Purdue

Willard "Bolo" Purdue, star end at Duke University for the past three seasons, yesterday sent his signed contract for the 1940 season to offices of the Washington Redskins, Jack Espey, general manager, announced.

Purdue, the lad who blocked the kick and fell on it to pave Duke's way to the Rose Bowl in 1938, was on the Redskins' college draft list and is the tenth newcomer signed for 1940.

The 22-year-old end gave Duke a 7-0 victory over Pitt in Durham in 1938 in the game which decided the East's representative in the Rose Bowl by gathering in Johnny Chickerneo's kick after blocking it behind the Pitt goal line.

The Duke star was on the All-Star team representing the East in the East-West game New Year's in California. Purdue, a 5-foot-11 205-pounder, lives in Thomasville, N. C. Although kept out part of the season last year by injury, Purdue was scouted by Maxie Krause in the Duke-North Carolina game and was highly recommended.

Nats Seeking New Pitcher From Minors

Harris Reveals Deal As Rain Halts Game With Cleveland Indians

ing staff is comprised solely of Dutch Leonard, as far as consistent winners are concerned. The only immediate relief in sight is offered by young Sid Hudson, who has won his last two starts, albeit the Nats scored plenty of runs for him.

Hudson will get a chance to establish himself tomorrow when he takes the mound against the Indians. If he can turn in a winning performance despite the left-handed strength of the Cleveland line-up and the short rightfield fence in the Cleveland park then he will doubtless be the recipient of hugs and kisses from Harris.

"In one sense he has been a remarkable sort of kid already," said Harris. "In his last two games he's gotten off to a shaky start and I was tempted to lift him, but he finished up nicely both times. He hung onto those late-inning leads we gave him like a real big leaguer. He may make up a pretty good pitcher."

The two guys who have contributed most to Harris' grief thus far are, of course, Ken Chase and Joe Krakauskas, the perennial rookie southpaws. Kraky is on the verge of appearing a hopeless case. He hasn't demonstrated that he is a better pitcher this season than he was four years ago when he was both wild and ineffective.

Fast Ball Slipping

Chase seems to have cured his wildness in a degree, but his fast ball has been deserting him in alarming fashion. He represents, however, a long-shot hope. In the past Harris has been tempted to give up on the former milkman only to find himself astonished by truly clever performances of Chase.

"I'm working on Chase's delivery," said Harris. "He may be pitching to much overhanded. I think he'll do better with a three-quarter overhand motion. He's been finishing up high and stiff legged. If he can learn to finish low and with a crouch it ought to help his control."

The Indians will send left-handed Al Milnar against the Nats tomorrow. He has won three games without a defeat. The Nats will be encountering the hottest hitting club in the league, because last week the Indians replaced the Red Sox as the team batting leader.

Bantam Title Fight Off; Pace Gets Suspension

Toronto, May 19. — The world's bantamweight championship boxing bout between Georgie Pace, Cleveland, and Lou Salica, New York, was called off today when Pace's manager, Tom Stanley, declared his boxer "had run out on him." The bout was originally slated for May 29, at Toronto.

In announcing cancellation of the fight, Matchmaker Jack Allen said the Ontario Athletic Commission had suspended Pace and the suspension would be effective in all States under the National Boxing Association's jurisdiction.

The Cleveland Negro was awarded the title by the N. B. A. last fall when Sixto Escobar, the champion, outgrew the division. Since then he fought to a draw with Salica here.

Postscripts

Cleveland, May 16.—Bucky Harris was no little peeved today at the Cleveland management, which left the tarpaulin on the diamond after the game was postponed . . . thus depriving the Nats of much needed batting practice . . . The Nats have played only one game in the last four days . . . Willis Hudlin, who was released by the Indians after 14 years with the club, is far from penniless . . . he owns a profitable trailer camp at Hot Springs, Ark. . . . Johnny Welaj's kid brother is playing centerfield and batting fourth for the Milford team of the Maryland Eastern Shore League, a Giant's farm . . . Jimmy Bloodworth will abandon his regular bat for a lighter model, on the advice of Sammy West, who told him bluntly, "You're crazy for trying to swing that big bat." . . . Harris says the Nats are uninterested in Boots Poffenberger, who has won four games in a row for Nashville . . . "Any bet that Poffenberger would win for you would have to start with the presumption that he'd show up for the game," cracked Harris . . . Zeke Bonura is playing for the Nats at $5,000 less than he received in 1938, but says he is thoroughly happy about it . . . he must take off six more pounds before he gets down to his best weight of 210, Zeke says . . . On a hot day he can lose five pounds and on a cool one he can gain six . . . Yesterday was pay day for the Nats but they didn't get paid . . . In their contracts it is stipulated that they are to receive no pay checks while they are on the road . . . It is a sort of a guarantee that the boys won't feel flush and violate training rules . . . The players are allowed to sign meal checks to the extent of $4 per day, but the club does not squawk unless the figure reaches more than $5 . . . The most interviewed player on the Washington club and the most sought after by autograph seekers is not Dutch Leonard but Base Stealing Champion George Case.—POVICH.

Vanelder Runs Away With Claymont Purse at Charles Town

Winner Pays $19.80 In the Mud

Beats Miss Maker 4 Lengths; Schley Al Third; Double Pays $343 on '13' Hunch

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent

Charles Town, W. Va., May 16.—Popping out of the electric gate like a "jack-in-the-box," P. W. Rudairlle's Vanelder made a runaway of the Claymont Pures, featuring today's program at this turf point. With Apprentice Jockey G. Cardoza, a little colored boy, clucking to him, the 3-year-old son of Vanderpool finished four lengths in front of the Hillbrook Farm's Miss Maker, heroine of several close finishes here last year. Two and a half lengths farther back, came Schley Al, owned by R. A. Bowman, jr., to be third in the field of six.

Miss Maker and Bud's Light, one that gave a mere flicker of speed and then stopped, drew the bulk of the mutuel play with the former a slight favorite. Vanelder was held at 9-1 in the closing odds and paid off close to that figure at a $19.80 mutuel.

Rain Slackens

Rain that fell in torrents here last night left the track in muddy condition and the winner, trained by Mike Johnson, was clocked in 0:53 for the four and a half furlongs. A crowd of 4,000 witnessed the action. The rain held off until after the running of the feature. However, it made up for lost time during and after the sixth event.

The program brought the longest pay-off of the meeting in the daily double. A selected few collected $343.80 for a $2 investment on the "13" combination. Jockey Carson Kirk was the hero of the double. He rode both ends. In the second race, he brought Wood Dear, a $56 shot, home a length in front of Trixie Lass with Golden Mayne third.

Doctor's Nurse Wins

Doctor's Nurse, paying $8.80, put the finishing touches on the transaction. Kirk brought this one through on the inside and wore down his rivals to win by two lengths. High Aim was second and Stingy Lady was third.

Trainer Tom Lewis saddled his third winner of the meeting and proved that his "photo finish" luck was still with him in the sixth race. Good Wine, ridden by Jockey H. Gower, came with a rush through the stretch and whipped Timber Storm. The winner paid $10. Reigh Tetrarch was third.

MISS SOOT	(Napier)	112	6	6	6	6	6		4.50

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CLAY HILL, $8.20, $4.00, $2.60; MAY FERN, $4.00, $3.00; SEDACE, $3.40.

CLAY HILL, steadied along in early stages while close up, saved ground at stretch turn to move up and won under intermittent punishment. MAY FERN, closest to SEDACE'S pace, was carried wide by latter entering stretch and closed gamely. SEDACE forced to front in opening furlong, bore out at final bend and was taken up when in close quarters between leaders in final 20 yards. TRUE LINE could not keep up. TOTTY had some early speed. MISS SOOT did not appear to like the going.

SECOND RACE—Charles Town course. Purse, $400; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:05. Off 3:06. Winner, W. B. Caslear's b. m. (6), by Woodcraft—Dorothy Dear. Trained by C. Richard. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 1:23⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—WOOD DEAR, $56.00, $13.00, $6.00; TRIXIE LASS, $4.60, $3.20; GOLDEN MAYNE, $4.20.

WOOD DEAR, off well and steadied along when unable to get through on inside in early stages, came in on rail to take command and drew clear to hold away thereafter. TRIXIE LASS lacked early speed, responded to intermittent punishment and closed resolutely. GOLDEN MAYNE was forced wide at first turn and closed some ground. BARRACA was closest to RED WINGS' pace for 3 furlongs and weakened. RED WINGS, fractious at gate, was off alertly, set pace and weakened. TRAVELO was well placed early and stopped. MORVIM could not keep up. MISS POOL was badly outrun.

THIRD RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:32½. Off 3:33. Winner, Mrs. C. B. Inaco's ch. f. (3), by Dr. Freeland—Glyn. Trained by R. L. Gheen. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 1:27⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—DOCTOR'S NURSE, $8.80, $4.80, $3.80; HIGH AIM, $7.20, $5.40; STINGY LADY, $7.80.

DOCTOR'S NURSE, steadied along while saving ground for 3 furlongs, came to inside of CONGO PRINCE approaching stretch to take command and drew out under drive. †HIGH AIM came with good energy under intermittent punishment in closing test. STINGY LADY showed a good effort from a slow beginning. CONGO PRINCE was sent to lead under hustling tactics and weakened suddenly in final eighth. WAGOLD was well placed for 3 furlongs and tired.

†Pulled up.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GOODWINE, $10.00, $5.00, $3.60; TIMBER STORM, $4.80, $3.80; REIGH TETRARCH, $3.60.

GOODWINE, off well, but lacking early speed, came around horses entering stretch and closed with a bold rush to be up in concluding strides. TIMBER STORM disposed of WAY OUT to take command, drew into good lead, but could not resist winner. REIGH TETRARCH moved up menacingly and then weakened. CURVES closed gamely. PUKKA HEAVEN had early speed and weakened gradually. WAY OUT was used up setting and forcing pace and stopped.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:23 Off 5:23½. Winner, J. Bouley's ch. m. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CAFFEINE, $6.00, $4.00, $2.80; PENCADER, $4.40, $3.00; AU FOIN, $3.00.

CAFFEINE, slowest to get under way and steadied along for half, came through between horses to better position, rallied to pressure and wore down PENCADER to win driving. PENCADER, well placed from start, moved up boldly to take command over ABBOT'S LARK, but could not resist winner. AU FOIN was raced wide from start and failed to close around. ABBOT'S LARK forced and set pace and tired. REGAL FROLIC was used up racing with ABBOT'S LARK.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $500; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won handily; place same. Went to post 5:50. Off 5:51. Winner, C. Brining's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—PETEE LAD, $6.80, $3.40, $2.60; EARLY BROOM, $3.60, $2.60; NEVER IDOL, $3.20.

PETEE LAD, first away and steadied along while racing with EARLY BROOM, took command on backstretch, drew out gradually and won handily. EARLY BROOM set early pace, but could not stay with winner and finished under intermittent punishment. NEVER IDOL lacked early speed, saved ground and passed tired horses in stretch. HOFFBERG was forward factor for three-quarters and tired gradually thereafter. CHILLY EBBIE had early speed and faltered. CHATTERDOO was held safe. FLEET WIND was always outrun.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CLEAN HEELS, $12.60, $6.40, $4.60; DIXIE S., $8.80, $7.60; HI-ADA, $4.60.

CLEAN HEELS could not keep up in opening stages, responded willingly when placed to drive and was opening a gap at end while bearing out. DIXIE S. had keen speed to take lead at first turn, drew out, but was tiring in stretch run. HI-ADA had speed in spots and showed good effort. AUTUMN ECHO, off slowly, worked way to contention on outside and faltered. LERNANA flashed early foot and stopped. RAZZLE DAZZLE was through early. BLACK TERN was outrun. KING DOMINANT took command under hustling tactics and quit.

FIFTH RACE—About 4½ furlongs. Purse, $500. For 3-year-olds. Start good from gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 4:27. Off 4:28. Winner, P. W. Rudacille's ch. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—GOODWINE, $10.00, $5.00, $3.60; TIMBER STORM, $4.80, $3.80; REIGH TETRARCH, $3.60.

GOODWINE, off well, but lacking early speed, came around horses entering stretch and closed with a bold rush to be up in concluding strides. TIMBER STORM disposed of WAY OUT to take command, drew into good lead, but could not resist winner. REIGH TETRARCH moved up menacingly and then weakened. CURVES closed gamely. PUKKA HEAVEN had early speed and weakened gradually. WAY OUT was used up setting and forcing pace and stopped.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:23 Off 5:23½. Winner, J. Bouley's ch. m. (4), by Caruso—Coffee. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 1:58⅕.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CAFFEINE, $6.00, $4.00, $2.80; PENCADER, $4.40, $3.00; AU FOIN, $3.00.

CAFFEINE, slowest to get under way and steadied along for half, came through between horses to better position, rallied to pressure and wore down PENCADER to win driving. PENCADER, well placed from start, moved up boldly to take command over ABBOT'S LARK, but could not resist winner. AU FOIN was raced wide from start and failed to close around. ABBOT'S LARK forced and set pace and tired. REGAL FROLIC was used up racing with ABBOT'S LARK.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $500; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won handily; place same. Went to post 5:50. Off 5:51. Winner, C. Brining's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—PETEE LAD, $6.80, $3.40, $2.60; EARLY BROOM, $3.60, $2.60; NEVER IDOL, $3.20.

PETEE LAD, first away and steadied along while racing with EARLY BROOM, took command on backstretch, drew out gradually and won handily. EARLY BROOM set early pace, but could not stay with winner and finished under intermittent punishment. NEVER IDOL lacked early speed, saved ground and passed tired horses in stretch. HOFFBERG was forward factor for three-quarters and tired gradually thereafter. CHILLY EBBIE had early speed and faltered. CHATTERDOO was held safe. FLEET WIND was always outrun.

Selections at Charles Town

Dear Al:

Friend Alan Clarke is mourning the loss of Golden Russett, a Royalty-bred mare, who died on his Huntington farm. She was the dam of Hazel W. and Golden Mowlee, the latter a fine-looking colt recently sold to Watt Elliott. Her loss is a particularly hard one for Clarke, because she was in foal, to Mowlee, the sire that died early in April. Incidentally, Clarke has St. James on his farm now and is breeding him to his mares. We can't judge Charles Town weather by that in Washington. When we left the District rain was falling hard. When we arrived at Charles Town the sun was shining. Of course, it works the other way, too. Yesterday I said that Congo Prince was a full brother of Royal Business. That is not true. Congo Prince is a half brother of the "queen" of the smaller tracks. Both are out of the mare Pretty Business, owned by the popular Capt. Ewart Johnson. Clay Hill, still another half brother, won yesterday's first race. Art Brown, who said he wasn't going to be here, was here in all his glory. Horsemen are anxious for Eddie Brennan to make good as racing secretary at Delaware Park. Eddie is the most popular fellow around the Maryland half-milers and deserves his chance on the big time. Little Dick Machado and his mother were visitors to the track yesterday. Dick was wearing his ockey boots. Accidental, owned by John Manfuso, was cut around the hind legs Wednesday soon after the start and will be out of action for some time. She was cut down here a year ago, and apparently had recovered from that accident. Here it is the fourth day of the meeting and still no word from Pork Chops. What's the story?

BILL.

Confucius was scratched for today. Bet $2 on Tweety.

First race—The chief strength in this race lies on the reserve list. Night Play and Hiblaze probably would battle it out if they get in action. Of those assured a place at the post, I prefer Butterman. Cut Emerald could be prominent on a best effort.

Second race—Tavern, despite an assignment of 116 pounds, will be hard to beat if sent postward. Root is due to take charge of the saddle work. Happy Hostess gets in light and has speed enough to be dangerous.

$14,260,000 Paid on D. C. Life Policies

Average of $114 A Family Distributed, Compilation Shows

Washington policyholders and beneficiaries were paid $14,260,000 by life insurance companies in 1939, a per capita payment of $22.74, a special compilation of The National Underwriter disclosed yesterday.

The total registered an increase from 1938's $13,400,000 and amounted to $114 per family, the analysis set forth, ranking the District as thirty-seventh among all States and thirty-ninth on a population basis.

Ordinary life insurance in force in the District of Columbia totals $666,581,000 on 255,575 policies, or $1,083 per capita. The average size policy in force is $2,598.

Pan American Airways

Stockholders of Pan American Airways Corporation, at their annual meeting in New York yesterday, approved a proposed increase in the company's authorized capital stock to 3,000,000 shares from the present 2,000,000. The capital change is in connection with the company's expansion of services and equipment.

Juan T. Trippe, president, said the European war, causing curtailment of surface shipping and increased demands for fast mail service, had boosted the airline's mail loads to new peaks on its international routes.

Commenting on record results of the line's first quarter operations, he said, "Revenues from the transportation of foreign air mails for the first quarter show an increase of 81 per cent over the corresponding period of a year ago.

"While plane miles flown increased only 10 per cent, passenger revenues have increased 40 per cent over the comparable figures for the first quarter of 1939."

Paramount Pictures

Despite further shrinkage in the European market for American motion pictures as a result of the war, Paramount Pictures, Inc., estimated its consolidated earnings in the three months ended March 30 increased to $1,606,000 from $1,300,000 in the like 1939 period. The profit was equal to 53 cents a share on the common stock against 41 cents in the initial quarter last year. The directors declared a dividend of 15 cents a share on the common stock, payable July 1 to holders of record June 10.

Flexible Shaft

Directors of Flexible Shaft Co. declared an extra dividend of 25 cents a share on the capital stock in addition to the regular quarterly of $1, both payable June 29 to stock of record June 19

Alleghany Corporation

Alleghany Corportion, top holding company of the Chesapeake & Ohio Railway System, reported first quarter net profits of $67,621, against $520,665 loss the same period last year.

Great Northern Paper

Great Northern Paper Co. and wholly-owned subsidiaries, for the March quarter, reported net profit of $888,249 after charges, equal to 69 cents a common share.

Colorado and Southern

The Colorado and Southern Railway Co. reported a net loss after fixed charges of $880,738.91 for the year ended December 31, 1939, compared with a net loss of $981,054.15 for the preceding year.

International Harvester

Directors of International Harvester Co. declared a quarterly dividend of 40 cents a share on the common stock, payable July 15 to stock of record June 20.

Railroads Show Revenue Increase During April

Preliminary reports from 88 class 1 railroads, representing 83.0 per cent of total operating revenues, just received and made public yesterday by the Association of American Railroads, shows that those railroads, in April, 1940, had estimated operating revenues amounting to $262,521,848 compared with $234,186,711 in the same month of 1939. Operating revenues of those roads in April, 1940, were 12.1 per cent above those for April, 1939.

Freight revenues of the 88 class 1 railroads in April, 1940, amounted to $216,309,559 compared with $185,680,740 in April, 1939. Passenger revenues in April, 1940, according to preliminary reports, totaled $24,600,479 compared with $26,617,304 in April, 1939.

D. C. Bankers Hold Preconvention Dinner; Brian Bell, Associated Press Writer, Speaks

A. SCOTT OFFUTT

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Next and twenty-second annual convention of the District of Columbia Bankers Association at Hot Springs, Va., June 6-9, will be the largest held by that organization.

This was the prediction of A. S. Offutt, a vice president of City Bank and chairman of this year's general convention committee, reporting last night on prospects for the assembly at the association's preconvention dinner at Columbia Country Club.

More than 250 members of the association and guests assembled at this annual event on the group's calendar when a program of business sessions, speakers, athletic events, transportation arrangements and hotel accommodations in connection with the convention was outlined by the general chairman.

Brian Bell, chief of the Washington bureau of the Associated Press, spoke at the dinner. He talked in lighter vein, suggesting his hearers might like to escape for a few moments the horror accounts of a world gone mad. He assured the bankers that he brought them no message and said nothing in his "rambling" remarks would present a problem or cause them to do any unnecessary thinking.

"Masterpiece of Unimportance"

The writer described his talk in the language of a cartoonist, John T. McCutcheon. McCutcheon and Bell were on the same program in the Middle West when the Chicago artist referred to his own speech as a "masterpiece of unimportance." The Washington man said this so perfectly described his efforts that he procured from McCutcheon the "Eastern rights" to the phrases.

The speaker told stories of odd angles and incidents in some of the outstanding stories he has covered for the Associated Press in the last two decades and declared he believed the profession of banking more lucrative than that of the newspaper, but the latter is less apt to prove boresome.

Chairman Offutt of the convention group announced that from the amount of reservations already received and number who have indicated an intention of attending, the committee believes the record for attendance will be broken. Various subcommittee chairmen having been working diligently, not only in Washington but at the scene of the coming meeting, to assure delegates and visitors an interesting and instructive program, he said.

Speakers Are Listed

Speakers secured for the sessions include Dr. Y. B. Elliott, department of government, Howard University; Dr. Elmer Louis Kayser, dean of students, George Washington University, and Walter B. French, deputy manager of the American Bankers Association. Roger J. Whiteford, noted lawyer and after-dinner speaker, who was last night's master of ceremonies, has consented to act in the same capacity at the convention's "family dinner," major item of its social schedule.

Senators Scan Securities Act Revision Bill

Changes Advocated By I. B. A. Retain Protection for Buyers

A bill advocated by the Investment Bankers Association to correct certain sections of the Securities Act of 1933 without endangering protection afforded to investors, was added yesterday to a group of important financial measures pending before the Senate Banking and Currency Committee.

The new measure is sponsored by Senator Prentiss M. Brown (Democrat), of Michigan, a member of the committee, who asked that it be referred to this group when he introduced it yesterday. The other measures already before the committee are the Wagner-Lea investment trust bill, and the Glass bill increasing the funds of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation available for railroad loans, the providing for a "recapture" of $300,000,000 by the Treasury from the R. F. C. Members of the committee, although believing that the Glass bill can be easily disposed of, doubt that the investment trust bill can be disposed of at this session.

In addition to the abolition of the 21-day incubation period, the bill prepared by the I. B. A. also includes the following changes:

Provision that if the registration statement complies to the satisfaction of the Securities and Exchange Commission in all other respects, price amendments can be filed and an immediate offering can be made.

Harmonizing the SEC acts of 1933 and 1934 and the holding company act on the requirement that a plaintiff suing to recover losses incurred in a purchase of securities prove that a misstatement or omission of facts in a registration statement caused his loss.

Where an issuer offers its securities to its own security holders and an unsubscribed amount to the general public, it is proposed that the liability to the issuer be confined to the portion actually taken up and distributed to the public rather than the entire issue, as at present.

Clarification of the section which limits liability of directors, officers and underwriters with respect to portions of the registration statement certified to by experts, if they can prove they had no reasonable grounds to believe such portions were untrue.

Permitting high-grade securities investment bankers to inform institutional investors and others on offering sheets, listing securities eligible to be purchased by them for investment, without delivery of the long form prospectus now required.

Provision that no prospectus need be delivered on sales made on a national securities exchange.

Wheat Rallies, Rises 3 to 4½; Corn Advances

By the Associated Press

Chicago, May 16.—The wheat price collapse resulting from Europe's war was haled today as the market rallied 3 to 4½ cents due to strong buying support from consuming interests and investors accompanying strength in securities and the Presidential armament message.

In a hectic trade, during which the market changed its course five times and prices swung up and down over a range of almost 7 cents, enough buying orders were delivered to the pit to stem the selling.

Final prices, which were the best of the day, were more than 6 cents above the lows and 3@4¼ higher than yesterday, with May at 90¼ and July 89½@29.

Corn closed 3¾-4¼ higher, May, 63½; July, 63⅝-63¼; oats, 1⅛-2¼ up; rye, 3¾-4 higher; soy beans, 1⅜-2¾ up, and lard 18-22 higher.

5-Month Supply Of Rubber in U. S. Association Says

New York, May 16 (AP).—Enough crude rubber to supply the United States needs for just about five months was in domestic warehouses and en route to America by ship at the end of April, the Rubber Manufacturers Association reported today. The estimate was based on the present normal rate of consumption.

Nearly one-half the world's rubber supply, mostly sold to this country, comes from the Netherlands East Indies. The major portion of the remainder originates in British possessions in the Far East. So far the inflow has continued with little difficulty.

Domestic stocks were estimated at 162,282 long tons compared with 142,414 the previous month and with 188,074 a year ago. April consumption by U. S. manufacturers was put at 50,103 against 20,192 in March and 45,268 in April, 1939. April imports, totaling 70,699 tons, were more than double the April, 1939, imports of 32,031.

Bank Clearings Decline 6.8% During Week

By the Associated Press

New York, May 16.—Bank clearings for the May 15 week fell 6.8 per cent below the preceding week and dropped slightly under the corresponding 1939 period, Dun & Bradstreet reported today.

Clearings for 22 leading cities were $4,946,568,000, a contraction of 3.7 per cent from the $5,135,539,000 recorded last year. The latest aggregate was $359,622,000 less than that for the week preceding. This contrasted with a gain of $380,076,000 between the similar weeks of 1939.

Turnover at New York dipped to $2,745,585,000, against $3,045,992,000 last year, representing a drop of 9.9 per cent. The total for the 21 outside cities at $2,200,983,000, however, was 5.3 per cent greater than the $2,089,547,000 for the comparative 1939 week.

Baltimore clearings were $74,162,000, an increase of 6.3 per cent, and Richmond, $39,427,000, against 5.4.

Pound Urges 10-Point Plan For Tax Relief

Offers Committee's Program to Start Wheels of Enterprise

Roscoe Pound, dean emeritus of the Harvard Law School, yesterday presented to Senator Pat Harrison (Democrat), of Mississippi, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, a petition signed by several hundred thousand of taxpayers asking for tax amelioration.

At the same time, Dean Pound delivered a letter to Senator Harrison in which his Committee of Americans ask for a ten-point program which they believe will "start the wheels of productive enterprise in the right direction."

On the subject of "preparedness spending" such as President Roosevelt asked today in his message to Congress, the committee declared that it is now more than ever necessary to practice economies in other departments.

"It is regrettable that out of the experimental billions that have been spent, with little to show for them, we have not a vastly increased air corps, adequate modern military equipment, a Navy that is modern and effective to the last degree, and built-up military production facilities capable of meeting any demands," Dean Pound said.

Declaring for a tax program which would be derived from net profits rather than from the depletion of capital, the committee warned that "a halt must come else national bankruptcy and chaos will certainly result."

They advocated the repeal of the Sixteenth Amendment, providing for Federal income taxes and rewriting it along more practical lines, together with a reduction in unnecessary public spending.

Among the specific proposals suggested were the reduction of rates of taxation to a maximum of 25 per cent on income; the outright repeal of the capital gains tax; radical modification of the surplus profits tax; exemption of intercorporate dividends from taxation and a return to a maximum of 20 per cent on estate taxes, since the 70 per cent maximum now in effect is "killing the goose that lays the egg."

Cotton Rallies To Close 1 to 5 Up Despite Selling

New York, May 16 (AP).—The cotton market dug in for a rally today after the list absorbed a fair amount of new selling in early trading. Prices were 1 to 5 points net higher at the close. The bulk of late demand consisted of mill buying and speculative covering.

Traders Ignore Heavier Tax Implications In Roosevelt Defense Fund Speech, Send War Babies Soaring, with Aviations on Top

New York, May 16.—Ignoring the implication that heavier taxes will be required to finance an adequate national defense program, share traders moved to the long side today as soon as President Roosevelt's message asking $1,182,000,000 for arms, including 50,000 battle planes, was printed on the news tickers.

Aggressive bidding ensued for aircrafts, steels and any other industrials calculated to benefit from the mass production of munitions. The market snapped out of its losing streak in an irregular recovery that had plenty of momentum at the finish, when tickers were running about three minutes late.

Paced by wide gains in the automotive and steel sections, the 100-stock index closed 0.52 point higher. The independent aviation group easily supplied the feature with an average gain of 3.61 points for ten representative issues, only 2 points under the high for the current month and less than 3¼ points under the 1939-1940 high.

Curtiss-Wright in Van

The President's emphasis on the vital need for enormous additions to the country's air forces sparked the buying boom in that group. Curtiss-Wright was the most active stock with transactions aggregating 134,300 shares. It closed at 10⅜ for a net gain of 2⅜. Lockheed was second, up 4¼. North American Aviation forged ahead 5 points. Aviation Corporation was up 2. Boeing added 3⅜. Douglas climbed 6½ points. Some of the transportation companies in the air group, however, were down including United, off 1¼ and American Airlines, off 4½.

Steel shares joined the air stocks and gains ranged from 1 to 4 points in key issues. Bethlehem and Steel common both were in the most active list with net gains of 3½ and 2⅜ respectively. Jones & Laughlin 2½, Inland 1 and National ½. American Can & Foundry and other heavy ordnance stocks shot up after early softness and farm implement manufacturing shares snapped back on moderate dealings. American Telephone was 2⅜ higher and gains of a point or more appeared in Allied Chemical, American Smelting, duPont, Delaware & Hudson, and Anaconda.

Building Advances

Another advance in private building and indications that industrial operations are rising more swiftly than many have estimated were aids to market stability. Strength of metal prices on prospects for a heavy draft on stocks of copper, lead and zinc in connection with the rearmament program as well as for increased requirements of peace time operations, aided mining and metal shares.

Bonds Are Mixed

Mixed movements were the rule today in quiet listed bond trading. Foreign dollar securities continued their drastic decline, and small fractional recessions appeared in United States Treasury bonds. Domestic corporation bonds showed gains and losses in about equal numbers. Turnover was $7,470,000.

Belgian bonds were marked down to fresh lows for all time on declines of 2 to 9 points. Norwegians were irregular and Danish and Finnish bonds slightly better. Values of Australians and Canadians continued to melt. German government loans tended to improve, while French issues dropped. Most Italians dropped into new low territory. Latin Americans were uncertain.

Best grade corporates were uneven, some of the utility issues advancing, while most rails and industrials were down. Speculative rails showed numerous strong spots, but many recessions also appeared.

U. S. Steel Tries Contributory Pension Plan

By the Associated Press

New York, May 16.—The United States Steel Corporation has broadened its employes' pension system through establishment of a new contributory plan for employes earning more than $3,000 a year, Benjamin F. Fairless, president, announced today.

Approximately 11,000 workers are eligible for participation in the plan.

Employes will contribute 3 per cent of their earnings in excess of $3,000, or in excess of $3,600 in the case of those employed on the corporation's railroad properties.

Contribution of the Steel Corporation and its subsidiaries, said the announcement, will be in "varying amounts, which it is expected will be substantially in excess of the contributions of participating employes, as may be required to cover the cost of the plan."

Atwood Criticizes Spending In C. L. U. Meeting Speech

"Unnecessary free and easy spending" was criticized last night by Albert W. Atwood, the financial writer, in an address before the May meeting of the District of Columbia Chartered Life Underwriters at the Cosmos Club. Hicks Baldwin, new president of C. L. U., presided.

Discussing the national debt, Atwood, contended there is nothing sacrosanct in the present debt limit of $45,000,000,000, and expressed the opinion that it would shortly have to be raised. The Treasury should at all times, he said, have scope to carry on its borrowing operations conveniently and economically.

"If Congress wishes to economize it should reduce appropriations or limit the President's power to allot funds," he said. "To try to hamper the Treasury in its borrowing operations after the money has been voted seems a peculiarly childish method of locking the stable door after the horse has been stolen."

One of the weakest points in the Government's financial armor, he said, is the increasing tendency of Congress and politicians in general to whittle down the interest rate which Federal corporations and credit agencies receive on their loans.

The Government is in a position to expand its debt greatly in case of war, he added, and probably without danger. No country ever enjoyed such an efficient and powerful machinery for the sale of government bonds, he concluded.

Exchange Markets

New York, May 16 (AP).—Most foreign currencies, after wild fluctuations, ended the trading session at higher prices in relationship to the United States dollar today. The British pound closed 2 cents above yesterday's final quotation.

The French franc, wobbling in close parallel, ended up .00⅜ of a cent. The Swiss franc bounded upward to end .05 of a cent above yesterday.

Gracie Allen, "Surprise Party" candidate for President, attracted a larger crowd in Cheyenne, Wyo., for her rear-platform speech than any other 20th century Presidential candidate in that city, according to John C. Gale, assistant to the president of the Union Pacific, who has made every Far West campaign tour since the days of T. R. . . . Another Major Bowes amateur makes good: June Robbins who told the Major's C. B. S. audience in 1935 her ambition was to sing with a big-name band, is vocalizing with Eddy Duchin's orchestra . . . Naomi Campbell, recent addition to Columbia's "Grand Central Station" program, was born in Venice, Italy; educated in London, England, and San Francisco, Calif., and toured Ethiopia, where her dad was in the consular service . . . Marie and Her Merry Men, who adds luster to Al Pearce's C. B. S. program, have signed a contract with Columbia Records for 16 sides a year . . . Betzy Futhill, femme "production man" of Columbia's "Big Sister" is heading South for three weeks vacation . . . Barbara Wooddell, who is in Broadway's "The Man Who Came to Dinner," has become a make-believe nurse in the same serial . . . Patricia Ellis, currently guesting on C. B. S.'s "It Happened in Hollywood," still wears the $10 ring she bought with her first week's salary when she made her debut with a Mount Vernon, N. Y., stock company . . . When the "Texaco Star Theater" C. B. S. series suspends for the summer in June, Ken Murray, master of ceremonies will hop to New York for a Paramount Theater personal appearance . . . Tony Martin, singing star of C. B. S.'s "Tune Up Time," has signed an M-G-M contract, effective in midsummer after one more Columbia pictures assignment.

Orphans in Love

by Marion White

SYNOPSIS.

Ellen Carlan has loved Peter Storm since both were children at St. Joseph's Orphanage, but he fears marriage on his small salary. While picnicking a storm causes them to take refuge in the old deserted Tucker mansion where they see a picture of a man greatly resembling Peter and learn from a book that he was Peter Tucker, Revolutionary War hero. Peter feels the Tucker house represents his goal. Later, walking through a tenement district, Peter rescues three small boys from a burning building, and is interviewed by Carver of the Press. Carver also sees Ellen and hears about the old Tucker house. In another section of town prominent John Abbott sits in his luxurious apartment and reads the story linking Peter with the Tucker family, and fears his deception 25 years ago will be revealed. Cora, his wife, suggests making friends with Peter, so Abbott sends for him and tells Peter that he was the Tucker lawyer. They talk about Peter, too.

Chapter 11

THE BOY was speaking the truth, no doubt of that, and apparently he entertained no immediate hope of settling his geneology. Cora had been right in suggesting that he meet him.

A friendship would be the safest course, a friendship which would obligate the young man in some way . . .

"Yes, sir. Third year."

"Yes. I've a job too."

"Connected with some law firm, I suppose?"

Peter's heart leaped. "No, I'm not. I'm with Barlow & Co., the hardware wholesalers. It's not very interesting, but—" he smiled, "It's a job."

"Of course." Abbott appeared to be turning something over in his mind. "You'd rather be in a law office, though?" His voice held a note of promise.

"Would I rather?" Peter's eyes fairly popped. "Guess I'd wash windows to get with a good law firm." He stressed the word "good" in a way that Mr. Abbott could not misunderstand.

The older man smiled. "Well, Peter Storm," he said kindly. "Our firm needs a junior law clerk. If I could find a young man with the qualities which you have demonstrated so dramatically, I'd offer him a job."

"You needn't advertise for him, Mr. Abbott." His voice was jubilant. "I'm here."

Abbott held out his hand. "It's a deal, then. Though——" he laughed shortly—"if I were giving employment advice, I'd suggest that you inquire into the matter of salary before you accept a position so readily. Shall we say 50 a week?"

Interview Ends

When the interview was finally ended Peter walked out of the office on air. The smile which wreathed his face betokened a good will embracing all mankind, and the young receptionist made bold to offer her admiration once more.

Indeed, she was on the point of suggesting that she would be glad to hear from Mr. Storm again, when the outer door opened.

Peter was walking toward it. He stopped when he saw the girl framed in the doorway. His heart began to thump violently against his ribs. His smile faded slowly, but his eyes widened with slow and almost reverential appreciation.

This girl, he thought foolishly, might have stepped down from the throne of a queen. Visions such as this simply did not walk the ordinary paths of life.

Golden Hair

Her golden hair encircled her face like a halo, and the eyes that returned his stare held him in a heavenly spell from which he wished never to awaken.

The stuffy odor of ancient, hallowed law books was vanquished by the delicate, subtle fragrance which she breathed.

The dark, paneled walls were suddenly flooded with sunlight, and he knew that she was smiling.

She came forward, extending her hand to him.

"You're Peter Storm!" she greeted brightly, and her voice was rich with the soft cadence of organ music. "I told father that I wanted to meet you, and he probably forgot all about it. I'm Millicent Abbott."

Peter took her hand in silence. For the moment he was incapable of speech; his mind was whirling with such bewildering exaltation that he could not form a coherent sentence.

Sunday was cool and clear, one of those crisp days of early autumn which invite one to leave the city behind and ramble through the slowly brightening glory of the countryside.

Peter phoned earlier than usual. His voice still rang with a bright elation.

"Suppose," he suggested, "we start early and go up to Riverview? Mr. Abbot has overlooked our trespassing."

Ellen agreed readily. She hadn't seen Peter since Wednesday, and there was so much she wanted to hear about this surprising Mr. Abbott and about the new job.

The best thing that had ever happened for Peter, she decided, was that terrible tenement fire, and the prominence it had brought him.

She dressed hurriedly, glad for this occasion to wear the new brown suit with its bright orange scarf, and the brown hat with its fluffy orange pompom.

A New Peter

Ordinarily he might have walked out into the street again, lingering on the steps to avoid the critical stares of the ubiquitous spinsters. But this was a new Peter who knew no self-consciousness.

His broad smile brought a sparkle to the dull eyes of the sharp-faced little lady at the desk.

Reaches Phone

"Thank you . . . Mr. Storm. I'll see if Miss Carlan is ready." She reached for the house phone nervously.

"Mind if I sit down and wait?"

"No. I like it here." His smile flattered her still further.

Miss Evans, the club's manager, passed by and glanced over curiously. The young man's voice had a most hilarious ring to it. She made it a point to investigate hilarious voices. One could never be too sure . . .

"Good morning!" Peter smiled at her, too.

He was surprised to see Miss Evans' face—a face, incidentally, which he had insisted heretofore was molded in solid granite—become suddenly transformed. She not only smiled; she beamed upon him.

"Why, it's Mr. Storm! I'm so glad to see you. Miss Carlan said you were in the hospital——"

"You were marvelous, Mr. Storm. Simply marvelous. I told Miss Carlan——"

Then Ellen was there, and she shortened the pleasantries and hurried Peter along to the front door because she knew how he hated to be left alone with Miss Evans.

"Sorry I kept you waiting, Peter. Did Miss Evans find you dropping ashes or something?"

"No-o-o." The word rose in contradictory surprise. "She just said good morning. She's not so bad, I guess, once you get to know her."
